BONE DRYS FLAY 'BLASPHEMOUS' HOUSE RECORD

Battle to Expunge Wet Speech.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Three bone dry advocates from Georgia today undertook to purify the Congressional Record by expunging the "blasphemous" remarks of a wet member of the house and in so doing precipitated a parliamentary dispute that ended in an uproar of comedy.

The dispute was occasioned by this question:

If a member, in a speech demanding the expurgation of objectionable remarks, quotes the remarks he wants expurgated, thereby putting them into the Record again, of what use is it to expunge the remarks from the Record, since they are still in the Record?

For fully ten minutes, to the intense amusement of the galleries, half a dozen speakers, frequently trying to talk at the same time, tried to unkink the tangle. The house floor became a bedlam of excitement. But the question never was answered. When the dispute finally ended in a compromise nobody seemed sure whether the forbidden words would appear in the Record or not.

Wine Miracle Is Issue.

The trouble all started early in the session when Representatives C. R. Crisp, C. R. Brand, and C. G. Edwards [Dem., Ga.] demanded removal from the Record of a resolution alleged to have been passed by the Charleston, W. Va., Ministerial association stating that Christ "made a mistake" when he turned water into wine at a wedding feast. Representative John C. Schafer [Rep., Wis.], a wet, cited the resolution in a recent address on "Prohibition versus Christianity." The Georgians branded it as false.

Although its climax was humorous, the Schafer-Crisp dispute served to emphasize the growing bitterness which has marked the prohibition battle in congress, especially in the house. Almost without a break a daily prohibition debate has upset other house business and the debates have gradually become more acrimonious.

Representative Frank R. Lehlbach [Rep., N. J.], a wet, helped keep the battle going between phases of the "blasphemy" dispute today with a speech replying to his New Jersey colleague, Representative F. W. Fort [Rep., N. J.], who yesterday indorsed home brew manufacture as a proper compromise on prohibition enforcement.

Drys Attack Fort Speech.

The Fort speech also drew criticism from the drys, several of whom issued statements attacking it.

Lehbach took direct issue with Fort on the latter's contention that the aim of prohibition is to destroy the traffic in liquor—not its use.

"The 18th amendment and acts for its enforcement have for their intent and purpose the prevention of the use of alcoholic stimulants as beverages and the persons who drink them are essentially the ones who disregard and defy the legislation on this subject," Lehlbach asserted.

"It is absurd to suggest that these persons make their own beverages at home as it is to suggest they make their own clothing and raise their own food at home. Those who make, sell, and transport liquor are merely agents who enable the real violators of prohibition to do so."

For Action Against Drinkers.

Instead of trying to get around the prohibition laws by compromise on home brew making, Lehlbach argued, the thing to do is to enforce them against the drinkers and in that way hasten modification.

The house committee on expenditures this morning reconsidered its action on the Williamson bill to transfer the prohibition unit from the treasury to the department of justice. Two days ago it had voted to report the bill favorably after having amended it to give the attorney general greater powers in the handling of industrial alcohol permits.

At today's meeting the bill was reamended to leave virtually all authority over industrial alcohol permits in the treasury.

From the start the industrial alcohol system has been a source of controversy among the drys themselves and this phase of the bill doubtless will be fully debated when the bill is considered in the house. It is expected to be taken up Tuesday.

It was just before the house adjourned when Representative Schafer

OLD FASHIONED AND MODERN WINTERS

The old gentleman on the left has just asserted that the old fashioned winters were much more severe than the modern winters.

Maybe the old fashioned winters merely seemed to be more severe.

Or perhaps he's remembering the chilly sheets in an unheated attic room on a winter evening.

WOMAN SCORES THOSE WHO TOIL FOR PIN MONEY

New York, Feb. 1.—[Special.]—The "pin money worker" was criticized severely by Miss Frances Perkins, state commissioner of labor, in an address this afternoon at the National Republican club. Miss Perkins asserted that a woman under no economic necessity should not compete in the labor market with girls who must earn their living.

"I cannot agree with Lady Rhonda that the pin money worker is all clear gain in our economic life," she said. "Until we have every woman in this community earning a living wage—and by that I mean not less than $20 a week for the city of New York—until we have a firmly established habit of short working hours and some kind of old age security, I am not willing to encourage those who are under no economic necessity to compete with their charm and education, their superior advantages, against the working girl, who has only her two hands."

Harry Discovers There's a Difference in Women

Harry Halajian, 42 years old, 658 West 120th street, was attracted by the appearance of Miss May Corbin on the fourth floor of the Leiter Building stores at State and Van Buren streets on Friday and offered to buy her a pair of stockings and a pearl necklace. Miss Corbin agreed to accompany him, but as they were leaving the building she stuck her foot in the revolving door and trapped Halajian in the door. When he was fined $15 in Morals court yesterday he learned that Miss Corbin is a policewoman.

Raiders Turn Plumbers to Get Liquor Evidence

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Police outwitted Louise Reeves, alleged liquor law violator here. When the police raided the place she poured a quantity of alcohol down the drain. The policemen obtained plumbing tools and set to work on the goose neck of the sink. After laboring a half hour they finally removed the pipe and from it obtained enough alcohol to be admitted as evidence.

Los Angeles Suicide Wave Continues; 4 More Dead

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—The Los Angeles suicide wave claimed four more victims today. Edna Hatcher, 14, stabbed herself to death after words with her stepmother; Cassius Dooley, 50, shot himself for no reason known to his widow; Henry Schrubbe, a contractor, 55, ended his life; and Remigio Pedillo, 25, shot and killed himself and his sweetheart.

Miss Couzens Elopes, Is Bank Teller's Bride

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1. — [Special.]—Miss Margaret Couzens, 19 year old daughter of Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich], surprised her parents today by eloping to Baltimore, where she was married to William Jeffries Chewning, a teller in the Washington Loan and Trust Co. Chewning is 26 years old, and well known in the younger social set.

The Michigan senator, who is one of the wealthiest men in this country, received the first intimation that his daughter was to be married today from a newspaper man who called up to inquire about a marriage license that had been issued to Miss "Margo," as she is known to her friends, in Baltimore. He communicated immediately with Mrs. Couzens and learned that she had just been informed of the marriage.

No Notice of Engagement.

"I saw Margaret at breakfast," Senator Couzens explained later, "and she told me she was going out riding. She left with her sister for the riding club. The next news we had came from the newspapers."

There had been no notice of an engagement and the courtship is understood to have been a short one, although some of the young couple's friends stated this evening that they had anticipated a wedding. There were reports this afternoon that Senator Couzens was uncertain over the reception to accord the young people, but it is understood they have been forgiven and will be welcomed on their return.

Accompanied by Friend.

Chewning and the heiress to the Couzens fortune, estimated at around 50 million dollars, motored this morning to Mount Washington, a suburb of Baltimore. There they met Marshall Jones, a friend. He escorted them to the courthouse in Baltimore, to secure the license, and to the home of Archbishop Curley to obtain a special dispensation. This was necessary because Miss Couzens is a Catholic and Mr. Chewning is a Protestant. After the ceremony at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart Catholic church, the newly married pair went with friends to a wedding breakfast at the home of Mr. Jones. The bride and her husband were expected to return to Washington this evening.

Miss Couzens was listed among the debutantes of this season, but was more interested in her art studies and no formal presentation party was planned for her, although Senator and Mrs. Couzens issued invitations a week ago for a ball Wednesday evening, Feb. 12, at the Carlton.

Active Among Equestrians.

It has been Miss Couzens' ambition to be a miniature painter and she has been a student at Corcoran Gallery of Art, going this year to Miss Critcher's Art school, where she is taking a course in portraiture.

She has ridden in many of the horse shows in and around Washington and is a familiar figure on the bridle paths through Rock Creek park and Potomac park. Her activities among equestrians have been unceasing and she is among the stockholders in the National Capital Horse show.

Mr. Chewning is a member of the Bachelors' club and the son of Dr. W. J. Chewning of Fredericksburg, Va. He was a student at the Virginia Military institute before coming to Washington.

LABOR ISSUES AN EDICT AGAINST KING ALFONSO

Clamp Censorship on Manifesto.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Feb. 1.—Spanish labor, in a manifesto, promptly suppressed by rigid censorship, today declared it would work diligently to set up a republic from now on.

Three hundred thousand members of the general labor union and 15,000 socialists of the allied socialist parties are behind the document, which accuses King Alfonso, in almost as many words, of aiming to prolong his immunity from abdication through a succession of generals, picked one after another to do his bidding.

Labor in Key Position.

Labor is the only organized group left in Spain outside of former Dictator Primo de Rivera's opportunist crowd, the Union Patriotica. Although the labor element is small and relatively helpless in the face of a military dictatorship, it is in a position ti give the fast spreading republican sentiment a new impetus.

The manifesto makes clear that the labor elements consider the end of the Bourbon rule the only way to domestic peace in Spain. The king, the paper alleges, made Gen. de Rivera dictator in September, 1923, to save his skin from the Moroccan responsibilities, and in January, 1930, brought in Gen. Berenguer to save himself from the same Gen. de Rivera and the situation created during the six years of the dictatorship.

During these years, Spanish labor had, more or less, "played ball" with Gen. de Rivera, esteeming his benevolent dictatorship, which at least guaranteed them from a reign of terror and persecution, such as went on under the old regime.

Refers to "Bourbon Nightmare."

"We would rather fight for our existence in a most reactionary republic than go on with this Bourbon nightmare," Julien Besteiro, idol of both the Socialist party and labor unions said, adding he realized the difficulties of establishing a republic.

"But the moment to put the issue clearly has come, he said.

Labor believes Gen. Berenguer is sincere enough, but is sure the king would never allow him to call an election.

"Dictatorship King Himself."

"This dictatorship is like any other, except that it is more than ever the king himself," declared Manuel Prieto, leader of miners in northern Spain.

Señor Prieto accuses Gen. de Rivera and his crowd of having sold out the country to American finance. The former dictator has taken an apartment, from where he will direct activities as opposition leader.

"The Union Patriotica will back law and order in this country, so naturally it will not oppose Gen. Berenguer," he said. Emphasizing that if normal political conditions were restored, he would lead his snorting group into the political bull ring.

Gen. Berenguer's cabinet held its first council today, and elaborated on the program of soothing the country by a far-reaching amnesty and enough emergency measures to disavow Gen. de Rivera and his works.

Bar Primo "Scandal" Exposé.

The alleged financial scandals of Gen. de Rivera's régime are reported everywhere. One newspaper has a room full of documents relating to these, but, it now appears, that Gen. Berenguer, although anxious to diminish Gen. de Rivera's legend, received orders not to allow them to be published, lest the revelations of the misdeeds of the dictatorship be taken as a reflection on the king.

Although it is taken for granted that many of Gen. De Rivera's followers made millions, he himself has come out with a spotless reputation. It is even said that he is not particularly well off. The Socialists actually like him, and prefer him to Gen. Berenguer.

Warns Revolt Is Near.

Only the abdication of King Alfonso can prevent a revolution within six months, Alexandre Lerroux, venerable chief of the Republican party, baldly said today.

And the abdication of King Alfonso, every one understands, means the end of the Bourbon rule. King Victor

Her Color Tint Bared as She Wins Fortune

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Thirty-seven years ago a dark eyed girl of 16 arrived in Chicago from Tennesseee, to make her own way in the burstling town that just then was pridefully staging a world's fair.

Last night she sat in a luxurious home, aloof behind its high iron fence from the throngs that pass but, and woefully contemplated a victory that was yet a crushing defeat. Mrs. Ella M. King of 4800 Grand boulevard had just been apprised of the decision of Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel in one of the strangest cases on record in a Chicago court.

Judge Gentzel's decision upheld Mrs. King's legal right to most of the fortune of more than $200,000 bequeathed her by the late Charles H. Pulsifer, board of trade member, against the claims of Mrs. Alice P. Crockett of 190 East Pearson street, his granddaughter. It also established that Mrs. King had Negro blood, which she is not in a position to deny.

Saddened by Denouement.

"It's cruel. It's a terrible thing they have done," she said sadly last night. "I never knew my mother—she died when I was a baby. I lived with my father's people, full-blooded white people, until I came to Chicago. I never have associated with colored people, nor considered myself anything but white. Mrs. Crockett brought this up just to humiliate me. Because she knew all my relatives are dead, and no records to prove her wrong. Why should she care? She doesn't need this money. She never knew Mr. Pulsifer except for a couple of brief visits during his last years."

"In 1893," Judge Gentzel's decision states, "Ella M. King, then known as Ella Jamieson, a Negress of about 16 years of age, with a considerable admixture of white blood (the white blood predominating to such an extent that several white witnesses who testified in her behalf said that, although they had associated with her, they never knew or thought she was in any way of colored blood or extraction) and who at that time, undoubtedly was a girl well endowed by nature with physical attractiveness, came from Nashville, Tenn., to Chicago and met Charles H. Pulsifer, then about 55, robust in health, dominating, forceful and aggressive."

Daughter Born in 1901.

In 1901 Mrs. King, who was nominally housekeeper for Pulsifer, gave birth to a daughter, Martha. It was indicated that Pulsifer was the father of the child. Mrs. Pulsifer, who was divorced from her husband, was living with her granddaughter, Mrs. Crockett, at the Metropole hotel.

The following year Thomas King, white, who had known the housekeeper in Nashville, arrived in Chicago, met Pulsifer and was induced by the latter to represent himself as Mrs. King's husband and the father of her child. Although he stayed under the same roof, Mrs. King asserted last night, King's status was always that of a servant and their relationship merely that of platonic friendship. At one time Pulsifer made arrangements for a marriage ceremony to be performed, but when King and his intended wife arrived at the designated place, the minister refused to marry them.

In 1924, still acting under Pulsifer's instructions, Mrs. King went into court and secured a divorce from the man she had not married, on a charge of desertion. She claimed that King's whereabouts were unknown. In the present trial she admitted that he was at that time in the employ of Pulsifer, and continued to be. Pulsifer's purpose in this divorce move was to prevent King claiming any of the property he was deeding to Mrs. King. King upheld her testimony.

Gives Home to Servant.

Pulsifer was stricken in 1925. Three days later he conveyed his home at 4800 Grand boulevard to Mrs. King. From time to time thereafter he made

REJECT MOVE TO PAY PUBLIC WAGES IN SCRIP

Strawn Rescue Plan Given Support.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Chicago slipped deeper into financial distress yesterday. The probable date for tax collections appeared to move farther away, and the chances for wholesale borrowing on tax anticipation warrants became fewer. Any possible relief centered more definitely in the citizens' committee headed by Silas H. Strawn, which has announced its desire to curb waste, padded payrolls, and reckless spending.

The plan of paying public employés in tax warrants instead of cash—authorized by the county board, considered by City Controller Schmidt and called legal by Corporation Counsel Ettelson—was declared to be "fundamentally unsound and extremely unfair to public employés" by the directorate of the Chicago and Cook County Bankers' association.

Banks Advised Against Warrants.

"Your directors are unanimous in the belief that city and county employés should not be paid in tax anticipation warrants," reads a notice sent yesterday to 180 of the community's bankers.

"They [the directors] strongly recommend, if such a procedure is followed, that no member bank cash these warrants for customers or others, or accept them as collateral."

A more definite and sweeping recommendation has probably never been issued by this conservative organization. It continues:

"This decision and recommendation must not be construed as indicating any indifference on the part of the directors to the financial plight of the city and county. The exact opposite is the case. Every member, and all citizens, should aid in awakening the public to a realization of the seriousness of the situation, and in addition should give wholehearted support to sound relief programs."

Fiat Money Plans Opposed.

More pointed is the following from the letter:

"Paying county and city employés in fiat money will only make our local conditions more complex. We must avoid any relief measure which in actual operation would lead us farther in—not out—of our financial bog. The employés should not be expected to accept a substitute for money, nearly all of them have rendered honest and conscientious service. Surely we have not forgotten the harm and suffering caused by 'depreciated currency.'

"Because the situation is little short of appalling and because our desire to help is genuine, your directors further recommend that every member of the bankers' association give both moral and financial support to the Strawn committee. They make the specific recommendation that each member do his utmost, compatible with sound banking, to aid in raising the $50,000,000 fund proposed by the Strawn committee, to carry on essential services of both city and county."

Who'll Take Warrants Now?

If the bankers refuse to cash tax warrants and decline to take them as collateral, it is improbable that many public employés will accept them from either city or county. That scheme of financing, proposed by office holders, looks sick.

The fixing of June 1 for a start on the collection of 1928 taxes as forecast at Gov. Emmerson's conference with state and Cook county tax officials on Friday did not look so promising yesterday either. The indications favored a later date.

Attorney Ralph O. Butz, on behalf of the Southwest Federation of Improvement clubs, made protests yesterday on the tax valuations of the assessors on all property bounded by 63d and 95th streets, Michigan avenue and Halsted street. This is an area four miles long and one and a quarter miles wide, and involves approximately 200,000 pieces of real estate.

Property Owners to Fight.

Heretofore the board of review has never been able to hear 100,000 complaints inside of three months.

In addition to the Southwest federation's protests, the board of education has filed complaints against 1,704 properties in the loop, and the property owners announced yesterday they will protect themselves against any unfair assessment "to the limit of the law."

Thousands of other complaints are expected, although no one has ventured to guess the number.

Attorney Hayden N. Bell for the county board, advised the board of review in writing that the plan it has adopted to reassess the loop is invalid. He told the board it has the power to increase or decrease horizontally the property assessments for the entire district, "and no other power" under the procedure adopted.

This means that the board can lower or raise values on all property on the south side to 39th street, and cannot raise values in the loop and permit the other area in the south town to remain as reported by the assessors. This was the idea the board had in mind.

Mr. Bell said that the board must serve individual notices on property owners to deal with separate pieces of property. So presumably that procedure will be started all over again, which necessitates more delay. The hearings themselves on each parcel of land will take a large amount of time.

Reviewers Need More Time.

In forecasting June 1 as the date when tax collections will begin, Gov. Emmerson and the state and local tax officials assigned two months to the board of review. That now appears insufficient. Every one with a complaint must obtain a hearing or be formally refused one, if he desires to obtain subsequent relief from the County court.

The date when tax collections will begin is highly important because it is generally believed that the bankers will not purchase tax anticipation warrants—except for the most urgent city services—before that date.

No progress in obtaining cash with which the local governments can pay their operating expenses was announced in any quarter yesterday.

Ald. John S. Clark [30th], chairman of the council finance committee, said that he will ask the city council next Tuesday to adopt a resolution authorizing himself, Controller Schmidt, and Corporation Counsel Ettelson "to find a purchaser or purchasers for the 1930 corporate tax anticipation warrants."

"There has been too much talk and too little action," said Mr. Clark. He plans to start on his hunt for a purchaser immediately after the council adjournment. Some of the employés said they hoped Clark and his two colleagues will find cash.

An Interview with Caldwell.

H. Wallace Caldwell, president of the board of education, who announced early last week that he had sent an agent to New York to dispose of $54,000,000 in tax warrants, continued to make optimistic statements.

"Who is your emissary?" was asked Caldwell again yesterday.

"I cannot disclose his identity," replied the president of the board.

"What banks or investment houses is he attempting to negotiate with in New York?"

"I cannot give you that information."

"Will you show how it is possible for the board of education to issue $54,000,000 in tax anticipation warrants on its 1930 tax levies?"

Mr. Caldwell was uncertain regarding the amount, although he had announced that it was $54,000,000. He consulted his files and then said that the amount was $48,725,504. He attributed the $54,000,000 to an error.

His Committee Plan Again.

"Do you really hope to sell $48,725,504 worth of tax warrants to the New Yorkers?" was next asked.

"I have been told that our tax warrants would be bought in 24 hours, if a committee such as I suggested, headed by James Simpson, would prevail upon the bankers to say that Chicago's credit is good," Caldwell replied. "As long as derogatory remarks are being broadcast about Chicago's credit, we will find it very difficult to sell warrants."

Mr. Caldwell then took a slap at the Building Managers' association's proposal to purchase $10,000,000 in tax anticipation warrants with "certain safeguards" to provide whatever aid that sum could bring. He objects to the building owners' dictating how the money shall be spent.

Ettelson Gives an Opinion.

Corporation Counsel Ettelson gave an opinion yesterday to City Controller Schmidt saying it is legal to pay city employés in tax warrants in lieu of cash. His opinion concludes that "the city council has the right to order the issuance of tax anticipation warrants and the city controller and city treasurer have the power and authority to sell such warrants to city employés who desire to accept same in lieu of cash for services rendered to the city and payable from the corporate fund of said city."

The county board has already authorized such a procedure. It has printed the warrants but has issued none. Deputy City Controller Petterson said that the controller's office does not contemplate taking the initiative in shoving tax warrants in lieu of cash at city employés.

Strawn Postpones Statement.

Silas H. Strawn of the citizens' committee said yesterday that he will have no statement to make until Tuesday on whether he can supply the county with the approximately $2,000,000 it desires. Another prominent man predicted that "not even an angel can prevail upon the property owners to put up money to meet the entire county pay roll as the county officials desire." He added, "Nor will Mr. Caldwell get $48,000,000 in New York at present."

"Suppose New York were in trouble, as is Chicago," said this man, "and the news about its difficulties had been spread all over the country and in Europe; and an agent of the New York school board came to Chicago for $48,000,000. Don't you suppose the Chicago bankers would immediately wire New York bankers for information? Under the present conditions, would not New York wire Chicago for information?

"If you can find the place in Chicago where New York has asked for information since Mr. Caldwell's agent has been in New York. The lack of inquiry means that no one in New York is seriously contemplating the purchase of Mr. Caldwell's warrants."

Predict Long South Side Battle.

Those acquainted with the south side territory for which Attorney Butz has filed complaints against the reassessment expect a long drawn out battle. It is one of the spots in Chicago where the real estate assessment has been increased. There has been a reduction in valuations, in varying percentages, in every township lying wholly within Chicago. That applies to the towns of North, West, South Hyde Park, Lake, Lakeview, Rogers Park and Jefferson.

In those townships the real estate valuations have been decreased an aggregate of $518,093,173, according to the tentative figures of the board of assessors. But there are a number of townships which lie partly within Chicago and partly without. The real estate valuations in these towns have heretofore been fixed by assessors elected locally. These assessors have returned values much lower than have prevailed in Chicago generally. The result is that townships part in and part out of Chicago have had very low valuations in Chicago. The reassessment practically doubled the real estate values in Chicago within such border line townships.

Assessment Is Doubled.

The township of Calumet is one of those, and most of the property of which Attorney Butz complains, is in that township. In 1927 the assessment in this township was $34,008,350, while the reassessment places the figure at $68,833,122.

That part of the township within Chicago had a valuation in 1927 of $31,100,636, while the reassessment has made it $62,947,657. This territory in 1927 was valued at 18.2 per cent of its real value, and the assessors boosted it to 37 per cent as they have every other piece of property in the city.

Therefore the area represented by Attorney Butz is anxious to get back to the old valuation, and it is expected that property owners there will persist in their demands.

Governor Joins Boy Scouts

CHICAGO TEACHERS VOTE DOWN APPEAL FOR ASSEMBLY AID

The Chicago division of the Illinois State Teachers' association yesterday by an overwhelming vote defeated a resolution which would have asked Gov. Emmerson to call an immediate session of the legislature to provide financial relief for the Chicago public school system. Only 25 members of the 500 present at the division's annual meeting at Kimball hall, 306 South Wabash avenue, voted in favor of the resolution.

GOV. EMMERSON JOINS RANKS OF CHICAGO SCOUTS

Takes Tenderfoot Pledge with 2,000 Boys.

An army of Chicago Boy Scouts—15,000 of them—took the governor of Illinois into their ranks as a tenderfoot scout last night.

And while Gov. Emmerson pledged himself to do his best "for God and my country, to obey the scout law and to help others at all times," more than 2,000 other tenderfeet joined in the oath with him.

Gov. Emmerson was then given his tenderfoot pin and instructed in the duties of a scout by Col. Noble Brandon Judah, former ambassador to Cuba and a member of the advisory council of the Boy Scouts of America. Col. Judah was assisted by R. Douglas Stuart, president of the Chicago Scout council, and E. Urner Goodman, Chicago Scout executive.

It was an important moment to the thousands of mothers, fathers, sisters, and brothers who packed the Chicago Stadium when the troops, resplendent in uniform, demonstrated their knowledge of scouting in the great arena.

Praises Scout Movement.

Before the ceremony of taking the oath Gov. Emmerson addressed the assemblage.

"To my mind no movement of the century has greater possibilities for permanent good than the world wide Boy Scout movement," he declared. "We can have good government in this country only if we have good citizenship, and good citizens are not made in a day."

Of all national assets, Gov. Emmerson continued, none can be placed higher than the youth of the land. He said that millions are spent to breed better live stock, millions for charity, and more millions to maintain correctional and penal institutions.

"Why draw the purse strings when the youth of the land is at stake?" the governor asked. "Every dollar spent in conserving our boys through such movements as scouting will be repaid by the savings we make in our penitentiaries."

Strawn Introduces Governor.

Silas H. Strawn, who is chairman of the executive committee for the scout fund campaign, introduced Gov. Emmerson.

"If every boy in Chicago were a Scout I believe there would be practically no juvenile crime, because delinquency in boys in 99 cases out of 100 is nothing more than misused leisure," Mr. Strawn said. He declared that the success of the campaign to raise $1,250,000 for the four year expansion program for scouting in Chicago, which opens this week, will have a great significance for the future of the city as an investment in good citizenship.

Among the principal guests at the rally were Arthur Young, who has hunted lions in India and Africa armed only with a bow and arrow; Peter McLaren, champion woodchopper of the world; and Jack Rohr, expert on Indian sign language and customs.

her gifts of money and securties, until his death in January, 1929, at the age of 91. He left to Mrs. Crockett about $105,000. She, however, filed suit to recover the property left to Mrs. King, claiming Pulsifer had been influenced and dominated by his housekeeper while in a weakened mental condition.

By the Gentzel opinion Mrs. Crockett gained two points. It held that a seat on the board of trade, held by Mrs. King, is rightfully the granddaughter's, as are notes of approximately $50,000. These exceptions are made because Pulsifer failed to make proper indorsements.

TEXAS BOURBONS CLOSE PRIMARY TO HOOVER MEN

Legality of Their Action Is Challenged.

Austin, Tex., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—The Texas state Democratic executive committee today voted to bar as candidates in the 1930 primary election persons who declined to support the party ticket in the 1928 election, when Hoover carried this state over Alfred E. Smith. Bolters will be welcomed as voters, however.

After tabling a resolution excluding "Hoover-Democrats" by a vote of 21 to 10; the committee voted 21 to 9 for adoption of a resolution more general in character but virtually the same in effect. At the outset of the meeting a proposal to defer action until just before the primary in July was rejected.

Action taken today may result in barring from the primary ballot the name of State Senator Thomas B. Love as a candidate for governor.

Attorney General R. L. Bobbitt, however, has written an opinion holding that persons who voted for Hoover are legally entitled to seek nominations on the Democratic ticket.

Love, who was a leader of the Hoover Democrat forces in 1928, has announced that he will ask for a court order directing that his name be placed on the ballot.

Congressman Stanley Kunz and His Son Give Bond

Congressman Stanley H. Kunz [Dem., Ill.] and his son, Stanley Jr., appeared at the bond department of the state's attorney's office yesterday and posted $10,000 bail on indictments charging them with conspiracy to obtain money under false pretenses. The charges are an outgrowth of the civil service commission investigation during which Roman Trochowski claimed he had paid Kunz $400 to help him get on the police force.

SENATE KEEPS CRUDE GYPSUM ON FREE LIST

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—(AP)—A proposal to levy a tariff of 75 cents a ton on crude gypsum, used in the manufacture of plaster wall board and fertilizers, gained only nine votes in the senate today, and gypsum was left on the free list where it has been since 1922.

The senate also eliminated a previously approved increase in duty on calcined and ground gypsum, approving by 47 to 17 a motion by Senator Walsh [Dem., Mass.] to retain the present levy at $1.40 a ton. A finance committee amendment raising this to $3 was adopted several months ago.

SNOW AND COLD KILLS MICHIGAN FARMER'S WIFE

Holland, Mich., Feb. 1.—[U.P.]—Nicholas Mulderg 68, a farmer living a few miles from Holland, left his home yesterday to get the mail from a post box down the road. Knowing he was feeble, his wife, Ethel, 50, became frightened when he failed to return and went out to look for him. She found him huddled in the snow, overcome by exhaustion and cold.

Struggling to aid him, she herself fell. Mulder finally regained consciousness and dragged her 100 feet toward the house. Then his strength gave out.

An hour later Ray Romeyn, who lives at the Mulder's home, arrived and carried the woman to the house. She died a few minutes later.

SNOW AND COLD KILLS MICHIGAN FARMER'S WIFE

PRINCESS XENIA DIVORCES LEEDS; ACT IS SURPRISE

Principals Are in South; Wed in 1921.

New York, Feb. 1.—[Special.]—An interlocutory decree of divorce was granted the former Princess Xenia of Russia from her husband, William B. Leeds, son of the late "tin plate" king, at Huntington, L. I., today. The decree was signed by Supreme Court Justice Selah B. Strong, while he was presiding at naturalization court in the Huntington town hall.

Such secrecy surrounded the matter that it could not be definitely learned at first whether the Mrs. Leeds who was granted the decree is the former Princess Xenia. The attorney who appeared for Mrs. Leeds before Justice Strong was Henry A. Uterhart of this city, who represented Mrs. Leeds in a traffic case several months ago when she received a suspended sentence for violation of a parking ordinance to which she had pleaded guilty.

Based on Referee Finding.

Mr. Uterhart left court immediately after the decree had been signed and news of his presence was not disclosed until some time afterward. It was said that he had gone to Mineola, L. I., to file the papers, but no papers in the case were filed there during the day.

Award of the decree to Mrs. Leeds, Justice Strong said in court later, was based on the findings of Percy L. Stoddard as referee in the divorce action. He stated that he was not aware of the grounds on which the application for the divorce was made.

No further information than this regarding the details of the divorce action could be learned, nor could the name of Mr. Leeds' lawyer be ascertained. Mr. Uterhart declined to make any comment on the case, likewise Mr. Stoddard.

Both Principals in South.

At the Leeds country estate, which is located between Oyster Bay and Cold Spring harbor, and is one of the show places of the north shore of Long Island, it was said that both Mr. and Mrs. Leeds were in the south.

Considerable surprise was expressed at the Leeds home over the news of the granting of the decree to Mrs. Leeds. The man who answered the telephone, obviously the butler, said: "It must be some other person." He added that he knew nothing concerning the movements either of Mr. Leeds or of the former Princess Xenia, and did not really know just where they were staying in the south at the present time. Mrs. Leeds was reported to be in Palm Beach.

Everything Kept Secret.

The greatest secrecy has surrounded the entire case, and not until the decree was signed did it become known that Mrs. Leeds was even contemplating suing for divorce.

Last summer it was reported that Mrs. Leeds planned to buy a house in London and maintain it as a permanent residence. This report was current among her friends at the time she sailed last August for Europe, after unsuccessfully trying to keep her departure abroad a secret, having made her bookings under another name. It was understood that Mr. Leeds, who made the trip to Europe aboard the Graf Zeppelin, was to join his wife abroad.

Mr. Leeds' name last came into public notice when he presented his luxurious motor yacht Sinco to Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen for use on official business last month. Mr. Leeds used the Sinco for several years for commuting between his country home at Oyster Bay and the city. He recently purchased the steam yacht Flying Fox.

Son of "Tin Plate King."

The couple have one daughter, Nancy Leeds, 5 years old, who was born in February, 1925, in the Leeds' New York home. On the maternal side the child is related to some of the now deposed royal families of Europe.

Mr. Leeds is the son of the late William B. Leeds, who was known during his lifetime as the "tin plate" king because of the great fortune he amassed through the manufacture of tin plate.

Following the death of his father, his mother became the Princess Anastasia of Greece through her marriage to Prince Christopher. It was while visiting his mother, who was ill in Athens, Greece, that his engagement to Princess Xenia, the 17 year old niece of the then King Constantine of Greece, became known. Mr. Leeds was then 19. They were married in Paris in 1921.

Naval Powers Tug Away to Break Parley Deadlock

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 1.—After two weeks of the abstractions and unsubstantial dialectics largely indulged in to see how far the other fellow could be rolled the London five power naval reduction conference has reached a deadlock, if not a moribund stage, according to well defined opinions given expression in certain delegation circles.

During their week-end retirement the delegates will undertake the framing of written observations on the French compromise method of global and categorical tonnage. These will be presented Tuesday. A good part of the week-end also will be take up in studying means of how not to be jockeyed into the position of being responsible for the breakup of the parley. It is the Micawber period, with every one hoping for something to turn up.

As One to Another—

A member of one delegation described the conference as similar to a group of gentlemen who, having deplored and condemned duelling, proceeded to examine and discuss the best kind of duelling pistols and how to charge their respective pistols more effectively than any other.

In London, the delegates have been confronted vividly with the question of why call a naval conference at all. One of the chief general obstacles here has been the realization that no government can bargain for years ahead about what naval strength it will accept, because none can predict the future or limit the fertility of new ideas and inventions, which risk making any accepted type of ships or number of them obsolete before used.

In certain circles, it is believed that the only possible results of this assembly can be a sort of five or six year holiday, and the apparent satisfaction, that, in any case, Uncle Sam will be compelled to divert a lot of his excessive wealth to warship building.

Will Proceed with Difficulty.

Coupled with this is the feeling that the conference will, with difficulty, be able to proceed with its buisiness because of the internal difficulties of England. According to the last imperial conference of 1926, all members of the British commonwealth enjoy what is called "equal sovereignty" under the British crown.

This leads logically to Prime Minister MacDonald's inability to act unrestrainedly for the dominions, which makes it difficult for the British to be precise in their ideas on naval strength, for included in the British strength are the dominion navies, and each wants to develop a navy of its own. Besides, some dominions are not pleased with Mr. MacDonald's discussion of British naval bases in their behalf, when he was at Rapidan.

This was forcibly emphasized this week when the dominions threw a monkey wrench into the special committee of ten, proposed Thursday by American Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson. Dominion opinion, especially Australia and New Zealand, also complicates Great Britain's handling of Japanese claims.

Italy Gains in Prestige.

Italy appears likely to gain much morally in prestige from this conference at least. It is determined to make a stand here, which will not be the same as that made for it at Versailles eleven years ago under former Premier Francesco Nitti, when it held that it did not get its share of German colony spoils.

And Premier Mussolini's bland formula of willingness to reduce to the level of the biggest continental power, which level he has not attained, puts the Italian delegation in a rôle to appeal to disarmament sentiment and gives him an excellent political argument against his anti-Fascist enemies who accuse him of constantly flourishing a belligerent big stick around the Mediterranean.

Some circles also believe that the events of the last week made definite progress toward establishing a liaison between this conference and Geneva, which observers say is something for Uncle Sam to reflect upon.

France Launches Fastest Destroyer in the World

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 1. — France today launched its new destroyer, Vauban, admitted by naval experts as the fastest fighting craft of its type in the world. The Vauban is constructed according to the 1930 rebuilding naval program and completes the series of new destroyers begun two years ago. The ship is 430 feet long, 39 feet wide with a cruising range of 2,500 miles. The vessel is expected to exceed 40 knots. The Valmey and Verdun are sister ships.

DOMINIONS MAY BALK BRITISH NAVAL PLEDGES

Nationalists of India Want Own Fleet.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 1.—While any strength allotted Great Britain in the present naval disarmament conference is inclusive of the strength of its dominion navies also, there is always the possibility that London may prove unable to control its dominion naval policies during the lifetime of any agreement that may be reached.

India specifically might refuse to be bound by a limitation placed on Great Britain at the present conference, providing that nation obtains a dominion status within a few years, which is not at all unlikely.

India May Prove Thorn.

India is represented at the conference by Sir Atul Chatterjee, who naturally represents the view of the present government of India. That does not necessarily mean he represents the views of a possible future dominion government. Indeed, if Indian agitation continues to increase, it is not unlikely that the eventual granting of a dominion status will be followed by a reaction against all policies emanating from England, somewhat in the manner of South Africa's insistence on paddling its own canoe. In that case India might refuse to accept the limitations laid upon it as a part of Great Britain.

There is no reason why India, under a stable and independent government, which would be able to count on regular revenues, should not develop into a naval power of importance, thus upsetting the balance of the Pacific.

India possesses more than 6,000 miles of coast line and innumerable islands dotted over adjacent seas which require protection. There are six first class ports—Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Karachi, Rangoon, and Chittagong—and plans are being developed for the opening of other ports.

Calcutta Chief Port.

During the year 1927-28 10,000,000 tons of goods were cleared through the port of Calcutta. More than 4,500,000 tons net of shipping entered the port of Calcutta during the year. About 3,000 vessels with 2,500,000 tons entered Karachi the preceding year, while in Bombay the record for the year 1927-28 shows more than 2,000 vessels, aggregating nearly 5,000,000 tons.

The complete figures of shipping in India for the year 1926-27 show that nearly 6,000,000 tons of British shipping entered and more than 6,000,000 tons cleared from Indian ports. About 2,500,000 tons of foreign shipping entered and cleared, while less than 60,000 tons of Indian shipping was entered and cleared.

An attempt is being made by the Indian parliament to reserve all coastwise traffic for ships operated by companies controlled by Indians.

Would Need Own Navy.

India, under a dominion status with its own merchant marine, will be faced with the necessity of operating its own navy and forts for protection. The present arrangements of Indian defense include two forces, of which one is a part of the British navy, and the other controlled locally.

The East Indies squadron, which was separated from the royal navy in 1903, polices Indian waters. Its strength in 1929 was three cruisers, three sloops, a special service vessel operating in the Persian gulf, and a survey ship. The cost of maintaining this fleet is more than $2,000,000, to which India pays a little more than $800,000 yearly. South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, and Newfoundland also contribute.

The other branch of India's sea defense is the royal Indian navy, created in 1927 from the previously existing royal Indian marine, which dates from the days of the East Indian company. The object of this change is stated as "reconstruction of the royal Indian marine as a combatant force to enable India to enter upon the first stage of its own naval development and ultimately undertake its own naval defense."

This force, under a dominion status, would be developed as an independent navy, and there is no reason to believe that the resources of India, capably administered, would not suffice to put India among the sea powers, of which it is necessary to take account in establishing any balance between the naval forces of the world.

Build a Big Navy--You'll Need It, G. B. S. Tells U. S. Envoys

CLIVEDEN, Buckinghamshire, England, Feb. 1.—(AP)—With a red handkerchief flaunting from his pocket George Bernard Shaw for two hours this afternoon bantered Lady Astor about socialism, and American Ambassador Morrow and Senator Reed about the naval conference at a tea in honor of the Americans on the Astor estate here.

Sitting under a portrait of King George III. in the drawing room, Shaw began teasing Lady Astor immediately after his arrival. Launching into a general attack on all the countries of the earth except Ireland and soviet Russia, he diverted a party consisting of Lord and Lady Astor, Ambassador Morrow and Senator Reed and a dozen American newspapermen. Mr. Morrow and Mr. Reed stood quietly aside while the repartee was going on until every one moved into another room for tea.

Wants U. S. to Defeat Britain.

Over the tea table Shaw turned to the two American naval conference delegates and said:

"You Americans had better build a bigger navy than the English."

"Why?" asked Mr. Morrow.

"Because the next battle of Jutland will be between the British and the Americans, and I want the Americans to win. The only good this conference will do is to decide that the next battle will be at a distance of 15 miles between ships instead of 20, and that guns will fire 12 inch shells instead of 16."

"Kellogg Pact Ended League."

Turning his attention to the Kellogg-Briand pact, he added to Mr. Morrow: "England had been looking for a way to get out of the league of nations for a long time. Then along came this man Kellogg with his treaty. England signed it, and that was the end of England's connection with the league."

"But, Mr. Shaw," Ambassador Morrow smilingly remarked, "it is sometimes called the Briand pact."

Senator Reed interposed from across the table: "But the calling of the pact depends largely upon who is giving the dinner."

The entrance of other guests diverted Shaw from the subject of the naval conference, and the conversation turned to Russia.

Lady Astor, after a few sly hits against socialism, asked the guests: "What would we do if we were in Russia now?"

Mr. Shaw stroked his beard and then answered:

"If we had been in Russia, you and I would have been married and divorced long ago."

Everybody joined in the laughter. Throughout tea time, Ambassador Morrow sat in utter astonishment watching the number of cakes and cups of tea that Shaw consumed. A large chocolate cake with walnuts fell under the dramatist's eyes and literally crumbled away into his mouth.

Shaw wore a brown suit and a white shirt with heavy red stripes, and from his breast pocket hung a handkerchief of violent red hue.

After tea Lord Astor led his guests through the house and around the grounds, the Americans shivering at the cold bleak day while the English were remarking on what mild weather it was.

TARDIEU CONFIDENT OF NAVAL ACCORD BY END OF MONTH

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CALAIS, France, Feb. 1.—From global tonnage to taxicab rates is Premier Tardieu's job as he hurries to Paris to regulate the transportation war raging in the capital.

"I am confident we will reach an agreement on naval armaments before the end of February," said Premier Tardieu. "The adoption of our compromise plan with the British as the basis of discussion will result in rapid progress next week.

"The sole difference between France and the British and the other powers' theses is this—ours is elastic and England's rigid. We consider it a greater opportunity for obtaining an agreement through making the categories supple and susceptible to being shifted to meet the various nation's requirements than formulating unyielding sets of figures to be applied everywhere alike."

It now develops that instead of abandoning two cruisers, the British government has abandoned four. The last two had not even reached the blueprint stage. They are one 10,000 tonner and a 7,000 tonner.

Having in the first two weeks accomplished the great work of getting the French to agree to a "transactional" compromise between the French and British views on the agenda, the entire naval conference is taking a week-end holiday.

U. S. Delegates Go "Sight Seeing."

The chief American delegates and their wives spent the day under the guidance of Prime Minister MacDonald, visiting some of the most historical places in Buckinghamshire, despite a heavy rain. In automobiles, the party visited Chalfont St. Giles, Jordans, Beaconsfield, Hughenden, and Great Hampden.

At the village of Jordans they sat in the old meeting hall and saw the ancient oak beams, built out of timbers of the Pilgrim fathers' ship, the Mayflower.

The party went on to Chequers for lunch, after which they were conducted over the famous Buckinghamshire mansion, spending the remainder of the afternoon plodding through the rain in the woods of the estate.

Premier Tardieu of France and Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, have gone to Paris. The French staff is also holidaying, while Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister, and Admiral Sirriani have gone to Brighton.

The Japanese alone are remaining in town and working hard. No meetings, not even private ones, are scheduled for today or tomorrow, Monday, while there is nothing formal on the program, may see some private conference.

The full meeting of the first committee is set for Tuesday morning to take up the details of the French proposal, which is still unclear as to demanded tonnages, on which much of its chance of acceptance by Great Britain and America depends.

TRAIL MANY FOES AFTER KILLING OF UNDERWORLD SPY

Rosenheim Is Shot Near Home by Two Gunmen.

CRIMINAL COURT.
James O'Leary, crime against nature, sentenced to one to ten years in the penitentiary by Judge William N. Gemmill.

Investigation of the murder of Julius Rosenheim, 55 years old, a stool pigeon in Chicago's underworld for 20 years, brought forth so many clews yesterday that the police asserted at the end of a day's work that any one of a score of enemies might have ordered the informer's death. He was killed a half block from his home at 3510 Dickens avenue yesterday morning. The assassins shot him five times in the head.

Inquiries on Rosenheim's career revealed that he had been an investigator for a dozen reform organizations. He was well known in the disorderly house districts on the west and south sides. He had been investigator in his day for Chief of Police Healey, for Maclay Hoyne when the latter was state's attorney, and for the crime committee, headed by Prof. Charles E. Merriam.

Investigator for Loesch.

A year ago he was employed by Frank J. Loesch, then first assistant state's attorney, to gather information on vice and narcotic conditions. He helped to investigate the Granady murder case which was later to prove a fiasco before Judge Joseph B. David.

More recently, he had proposed to investigate for the Committee of Fifteen, promising to reveal, for a price, the whereabouts of 400 vice resorts in Chicago. He was a close friend of "Monkey Face Charlie" Genker, well known west side resort keeper.

Reports from two sources indicated that Rosenheim was also associated with investigators employed by Albert R. Brunker, millionaire reform worker. Sheridan Bruseaux, former investigator for State's Attorney Swanson, said Rosenheim told him recently that he and a state's attorney's policeman named Richard William were "doing some investigating for Brunker." The nature of the investigation was not revealed.

Found in Resort.

Added to this report was the fact that Rosenheim recently was found by representatives of the state's attorney's office in a disorderly resort at 22nd and State streets. In an adjoining resort, Williams was found and police deduced that the two were working together in their "investigation."

There were numerous other reasons why Rosenheim might have been marked for murder. It was learned that he and another man, who has lately built up a wide reputation as a "shake down artist," had tried to extort $5,000 a month ago from Jake Guzick, who is reputedly in charge of the Capone gang's beer running in the loop.

"We'd like to take a little trip to Florida," Rosenheim and his companion were said to have told Guzick. "If you don't come across, you'll be exposed."

Guzick laughed at the pair, it was said.

Again, Rosenheim made a visit some weeks ago to David [Cockeyed Mulligan] Ablin, proprietor of the Epicure club on the north side. Rosenheim was said to have demanded $500 of Ablin under pain of "exposure." The money wasn't forthcoming and Ablin's troubles began soon after with the result that his place was closed and Ablin indicted by a federal grand jury.

Shot by Two Men.

Therefore, Rosenheim, in the words of a policeman, was shot by two men, probably "looking over his shoulder" when he left his home at 8 o'clock yesterday morning and started walking to the elevated station a few blocks away. His end came suddenly, without warning.

Witnesses said a blue sedan drew up swiftly to the curb beside Rosenheim. Two men jumped out, drawing weapons from armpit holsters. They placed their guns to Rosenheim's head while he cowered. The two men fired quickly, then ran back to their automobile, which a third man was driving. The car disappeared.

A young woman who was walking a short distance behind Rosenheim screamed and fled through a yard into an alley. Police were seeking her in the belief that she might give a detailed description of the killers.

The police also set out to find the slain investigator's probable enemies in an effort to solve the case.

Six hours after the shooting an automobile similar in description to the one used in the killing was found in front of the home of James Curtis at 3554 Pierce avenue. The license plates on the car had been stolen from John M. Daniels, 3128 South 58th court, Cicero. Mrs. Curtis said the car had been there since 6 o'clock in the morning, but the police believe the automobile may have been switched for another after the killing.

Gangster Pair Arrested.

Jack McGurn and Tony Acardo, both known as Capone gangsters, were arrested as they were riding in a taxicab at Harrison and Clark streets. Detectives William Drury and John Howe, riding in a street car, jumped off the car and arrested them. McGurn was carrying a loaded .45 caliber automatic pistol and Acardo had a .32 caliber revolver. Bullets from the guns will be compared with the bullet found in Rosenheim's head.

Acardo and McGurn expressed astonishment that Rosenheim was killed. They were held, although witnesses failed to identify them as the killers.

Army Officer, with Many Debts, Shot in Bank Holdup

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

KOVNO, Lithuania, Feb. 1.—The Jewish Mutual Credit bank was held up today by a masked man who ordered the employés and customers to lie on the floor while he removed $10,000 from the cashier's cage. An office boy jumped through a window and called a policeman, who chased the bandit to the attic, where a revolver duel was fought. The bandit was wounded. He proved to be Maj. Sutkaitis of the Lithuanian army, who is reputed to have many outstanding debts.

WOMAN DRIVER FORCED TO CARRY ARMED INTRUDER

Miss Grace V. Cooper, 30 years old, department manager for the Carlstrand-Rook company, printers of 712 Federal street, was driving her car south in Michigan avenue to her home at 358 East 70th place at dusk last evening when, as she stopped for a traffic light at 35th street, a young man stepped into the car, pressed a pistol to her side and commanded her to drive on.

For more than an hour, Miss Cooper told Hyde Park police, the young man directed her through south side streets and alleys until at 57th street and Ingleside avenue he ordered her from the car and drove away. Her passenger made no attempt to rob her. He explained he was seeking to evade pursuers, Miss Cooper said.

KICKED ON SHINS BY NEGRO MAID, PROWLERS FLEE

Pearl Howard, colored maid in the home of Frank Coari, wealthy food importer living at 834 George street, routed two prowlers from the residence last night while alone with the Coari children, Francis, 4, and Coletta, 5 years old.

The parents were at the theater and the maid was leading the children to the bathroom for a tub before bed when, upon opening the door she faced two masked young men with pistols drawn.

First she threatened to "tell Mr. Coari about this," and, when they remained obdurate, kicked them in the shins. They scuttled out the same window they had entered as the maid ran to the neighbor upstairs and summoned Sheffield police.

POLITICIANS SEE HOPE AS CLEANUP SLATES MULTIPLY

'Uprising of Voters' Split Into Many Groups.

BY PARKE BROWN.

One ray of cheer, one ray of hope the professional politicians find amid the clamor for a house cleaning in local public affairs is that the much discussed popular uprising is disunited and confused, that the so called citizens', taxpayers' and business men's revolt against conditions is as badly split up and scattered as the party machines.

These observations are based on the fact that now, nine weeks before the primaries, there already have been at least half a dozen separate and distinct efforts of supposedly nonpolitical groups to launch complete or fractional tickets to compete against those of the partisans.

One Is Called Racket.

To these the ward and district leaders in their hours of leisure referred in various terms. One at least, they said, was a racket for the financial advantage of the promoters. Another was pronounced a worthy attempt but impractical and overidealistic. A third was classified as an attempted short cut to political preferment.

Seldom in recent elections has there been so much pre-campaign appeal to "turn the rascals out," to establish business efficiency and honesty in public office, and to put new blood into public institutions. But the party chiefs for the most part merely chuckle as each new movement is launched, for they see in it a new split in the forces against them.

Snow Understands Situation.

The first formal recognition of what was in the air came from Chairman B. W. Snow of the Republican county central committee. In his inaugural speech he announced he would create a citizens advisory committee to pass on all candidates for the slate. He sought the services of Speaker Shanahan to head that group, but emphatic charges that the Snow organization was straight city hall stuff not only led Shanahan to decline but led to the retirement of Charles V. Barrett and former Attorney General Brundage from the Snow combine.

Since that time Snow has called in representatives of scores of district business men's associations and similar organizations in the outlying districts. He also enlisted the services of George F. Nixon and others to recruit a strong independent ticket for the drainage board, but that fell through.

This effort through Nixon is accepted as an effort to meet the result of what at its inception was considered the most potential of the several independent movements this year. Former President Seabury of the Association of Commerce quietly revived the council organization presidents that functioned during the war, a group including the heads of more than twenty big units.

Deneen Accepts Slate.

That council created a strong committee headed by Rush C. Butler to select sanitary district slates for both the Republicans and Democrats, two rival tickets of disinterested business and professional men. The Republican slate it produced was accepted instanter by the Deneen group. Partly for that reason the Snow organization turned it down. There also was an objection that the slate was badly out of geographical balance. And the Democrats shunted off the Butler committee and chose from its own.

That left the Seabury-Butler ticket in the race. Snow tried the Nixon plan and it failed. At the same time Howard W. Elmore, president of the sanitary district, was putting up his own board ticket and it now is in the field with his support and that of the recently incorporated Illinois Republican party.

This latter organizatioin is one of the new units advertised as fighting the present bosses. It is made up largely of lesser lights in the Emmerson state campaign, but so far as is known has not received a word of encouragement from the governor. It is supporting the Elmore slate and two candidates of the Illinois Republican Service Men's league, another separate unit. They are Col. Howard P. Savage for county treasurer and Maj. Carlos Ames for sheriff.

Another Sanitary Slate.

About here, another extemporized, supposedly non-political organization, the People's Republican party, is brought into the picture for it also has put up a sanitary district slate. When the Brundage campaign behind the "Citizens' Ticket Against Coalition" in the November judicial campaign completed its work, two of its headquarters staff sought to retain that impetus by incorporation and entering the county fight. Brundage disowned the effort

The more active of the two men that started this was William F. Gailing, identified with a number of similar stunts in the past and among politicians his ticket is known as the Gailing ticket rather than that of the People's party. For a time he hooked up with still another movement that adopted the title of the Business Men's Republican organization but which is known as the Lonnquist group because its work was conceived and directed by Axel Lonnquist and half a dozen others in its early stages.

But Gailing and Lonnquist soon parted company. Their stories differ but it is accepted generally that the split came over the Better Government association which sheltered itself under the Lonnquist banner and recently, as the politicians say, "crucified" the Lonnquist ticket by indorsing it.

Aimed at County Board.

The Lonnquist movement was for the avowed purpose of "cleaning up" the county board. The real estate man started operating through district business organizations and persuaded a series of them to put up candidates. During this period the politicians alleged and the promoter denied that the climax would be the appearance of Lonnquist as a candidate for president of the board. He accepted that rôle about two weeks ago.

For a long time the group insisted loudly that it wanted nothing to do with the politicians: but it was said there was loud protest and indignation when the Deneen group refused to accept a single man of the Lonnquist slate. And now Gailing and his associates, some of whom are local leaders in fraternal activities, are putting up a complete slate for the county board, in fact, a full county ticket. Their headliner, Gen. J. J. Garrity, quit without notice as their candidate for sheriff. Privately he criticized their financing methods. But they are still going ahead launching candidates most of whose names are totally unknown to the public.

DR. C. W. MUEHLBERGER MADE ASSISTANT AT CRIME LABORATORY

Dr. Clarence W. Muehlberger, state toxicologist for Wisconsin and professor of toxicology in the state university at Madison, yesterday announced his resignation from both positions to become assistant director of Chicago's new scientific laboratory for the detection of crime affiliated with Northwestern university.

Col. Calvin Goddard, ballistics expert, is director of the school at Northwestern. Dr. Muehlberger, in addition to assisting Col. Goddard, will also hold a post as professor of toxicology and pharmacology at Northwestern university. He has served as assistant in research chemistry at Madison, studied under the late Prof. Victor Lenner, noted chemist; and the late Prof. A. S. Loevenhart, toxicologist and pharmacologist.

He was appointed Wisconsin state toxicologist in 1923, and since had engaged in innumerable investigations and testified often in poisoning and murder trials.

BANDITS ENTER HOME, BIND MAN.

Two men knocked at the door of the apartment of Christian Econoura, 1540 West 13th street, yesterday and when he opened the door they walked in, bound him to a chair, and walked out again after taking $40 from Econoura.

OTTO F. REICH SEEKS PLACE ON COUNTY BOARD

In announcing his candidacy for the Republican nomination for president of the county board, Otto F. Reich said he did so at the request of a large group of business and professional men and entirely independently of any of the party factions.

OTTO F. REICH.

He is an attorney and was appointed master in chancery of the Superior court by Frederic R. De Young, now chief justice of the Illinois Supreme court, serving in that capacity for six years. He has practiced law in Chicago for thirty years, is 56 years old, and is a resident of Beverly Hills.

Mr. Reich has organized and represented about twenty villages in Cook county and also a number of boards of highway commissioners, school districts, drainage districts, and park districts, an activity that has kept him in close touch with the affairs of Cook county and the forest preserve district. He is a director of two suburban banks and is a member of more than a score of organizations.

DAY OF DICTATOR AND KING FADING ALL OVER EUROPE

Polish and Serb Rulers Sit on Uneasy Seats.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 1.—The day of European military dictatorships appears to be fading. And the monarchies behind them, in two or three cases, at least, give evidence that they are riding toward an early fall.

This week saw Spain rid itself of Gen. Primo de Rivera after six years of more or less iron handed rule. For the first time in years newspaper correspondents are able to get their dispatches out of Spain without fear of the censor. And thus the world has learned that the crown of King Alfonso is tilting at a perilous angle and threatening to crash at any time. If it does the death knell of the Bourbon rule of Spain will have been sounded.

Poland and Jugo-Slavia.

While visiting central and eastern Europe, the home of most fantastic dictatorships, I saw during the past week evidences of a turnover in Poland and Jugo-Slavia, where Gen. Joseph Pilsudski and Gen. Pera Zhivkovitch, respectively, are still on top, but not so securely as they were in the past. A sort of unofficial but highly efficient censorship still hampers the flow of accurate news from those countries.

In Poland there is no doubt that Gen. Pilsudski's position has been weakened since last fall, when, after the best manner of the comic opera, he marched his much decorated army officers into parliament and succeeded in suspending its sessions. Some of his closest friends admit he has lost ground recently and that in the near future Poland may try democracy unhampered by a military dictatorship.

Zhivkovitch Tires of Job.

The situation in Jugo-Slavia is somewhat similar to that in Spain in that both the dictator and the king are facing the possibility of losing their jobs. Gen. Zhivkovitch, who stepped into absolute power last October, is already tiring of his job.

The Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes are getting along just as badly together as ever. No rulers, whether they be Turks, or Hapsburgs, or themselves, are able to placate their differences. And, more serious, there is a growing agitation in Jugo-Slavia against the monarchy. Several times in recent weeks there have been popular demonstrations in Belgrade and Zagreb against the king.

Even Rumania Rebelling.

Even in Rumania, which is run by the peasants, who are traditionally king lovers, there is a popular movement to discard the monarchy. The story of how former Crown Prince Carol gave up his throne for the love of a red headed girl is gradually penetrating even the peasant circles, killing once and for all the chances of the fun loving prince of ever returning. In Bucharest and other towns the people are growing impatient waiting for the boy king, Michael, to become of age.

Meantime, in Vienna, from where I returned yesterday, there continue to seeth plots and counter plots, fostered by malcontents of central and eastern Europe and the Balkans. In obscure little cafés, almost within the shadow of Hofburg palace, where once the Hapsburgs ruled, they gather. The Czecho-Slovakians, Poles, Hungarians, Slovenes, Croats, Serbs and Rumanians all sit over their cups of coffee or steins of beer and plot to overthrow governments, dictatorships, kingdoms, and dream of the renaissance of their respective races.

DUKE CHALLENGES OLD DICTATOR TO A DUEL FOR 'INSULT' IN 1928

MADRID, Feb. 1.—[U. P.]—Former Premier Primo de Rivera, whose son was challenged to a duel five days ago, found himself faced tonight with possible action on the field of honor as a result of a quarrel which occurred in 1928.

Duke Almodovar del Valle, former minister of the interior, sent his seconds, Jose Pedregal and Admiral Juan Aznar, to the former dictator and asked him to designate seconds, that they might settle the grudge.

The duke considered that remarks made by Primo two years ago were offensive to him, but it was impossible at that time to issue a challenge because it is customary to postpone such quarrels with high officials until they have left office. The former dictator's answer was not known, but it was understood he indicated that the matter must be delayed. The former dictator considers himself only responsible before the bar of history for his acts.

Scientists Off for Honduras to Explore Mayan Rains

New York, Feb. 1.—(AP)—An expedition sailed for Antilla, Honduras, today on the liner Carillo to gather data on Maya civilization in Central America for the Museum of the American Indian and to search for the lost city of Mayan. The work will require from two months to a year. The party is headed by Lady Richmond Brown and F. A. Mitchell-Hedges, British explorers. The latter is connected with the British museum. The other members are Karl Eugene Stein and Rose Rosenblum, secretary and recorder.

SPANISH LABOR WARS ON KING; ASKS REPUBLIC

315,000 Stand Behind Manifesto.

Emmanuel of Italy could annoy Premier Mussolini by abdicating in favor of rugged Crown Prince Humbert. But King Alfonso holds no such trump. His heir, the prince of the Asturias, is a sick boy, and could never stand the gaff of handling people who, by their own proud admission, are the unruliest in Europe.

He is afflicted with hemophilia and always will be in danger of dying of a hemorrhage if he suffers so much as a pin prick. No one forgets that there is only one vacant grave left in the vast gloomy Escorial, where the kings of Spain are buried, and the constitution provides that the sovereign can abdicate only in favor of his eldest son.

Constitution Idea Unpopular.

Gen. Berenguer's promise to restore the constitution of 1876 arouses no enthusiasm among the Republicans, or even among any but the most rabid monarchists.

"The constitution must be revised," said Señor Lerroux, who always figured as the leading candidate for the presidency of a republic—if and when.

"It must be revised for two reasons, first, because the coup d'état of 1923 showed that it does not provide its own defense; and, second, under it the king enjoys complete immunity and cannot be called to account for his acts by parliament."

The Republicans hope, and many others fear, that the king's dictatorship will never succeed in effecting a transition to the point where free elections could be called.

Freedom of Speech.

"To reawaken the nation's political conscience and prepare it to go to the polls again Gen. Berenguer naturally must restore the freedom of speech to the nation to lift the censorship of the press," said Señor Lerroux. "This would mean a revolution and nothing else, and there never would be any elections."

More than one peril lies in the path of King Alfonso and his man, Gen. Berenguer, who have chosen to return to normalcy. The municipalities play a vast rôle in a Spanish election. All the important municipal posts are now held by former Dictator Primo de Rivera's men. To obtain any kind of a free election, the officials will have to be chucked out, municipal elections called, and provincial elections as well.

"In that way lies revolution, too," Señor Lerroux adds.

PAUL E. GARDNER WEDS WIDOW OF ELLIOTT C. BACON

Mrs. Elliott C. Bacon of New York, widow of a former partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., and Paul E. Gardner, prominent Chicago broker, were married yesterday afternoon at the bride's home at Westbury, L. I. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Sherrard Billings of Groton, Mass., and the couple left immediately for Nassau, Bahama islands. On their return to Chicago they will occupy Mr. Gardner's home at 33 Bellevue place.

Only members of the two families attended the ceremony. These included Mrs. Bacon's four children, Elliott C. Bacon Jr., Hope, Norman, and John Bacon; and Mr. Gardner's only son, Sewell. Mrs. Gardner's first husband died in 1924. The first Mrs. Gardner, formerly Miss Ruby Small of Kansas City, Mo., died two years ago.

Mr. Gardner was graduated at the University of Chicago in 1911. He is a member of the Saddle and Cycle, Onwentsia, Casino, and Racquet clubs.

COL. A. V. SMITH TO MAKE RACE FOR CONGRESS

Lake County Prosecutor Opposes Chindblom.

Col. A. V. Smith of Waukegan, state's attorney of Lake county for the last nine years, yesterday announced his candidacy for congressman from the Tenth Illinois district. He is to make the race on the Republican ticket, opposing Carl R. Chindblom of Chicago, who has held the office for five terms.

COL. A. V. SMITH. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

State's Attorney Smith is a native of Lake county. He was born on Dec. 1, 1876, in Fremont township, in the western part of the county. He is the son of W. B. Smith, a retired Waukegan real estate and insurance dealer. His grandfather, A. V. Smith, was a Lake county pioneer.

Col. Smith was graduated from Waukegan Township High school in 1896 and from the University of Wisconsin in 1901. He was admitted to the Illinois Bar association in 1904 and has since practiced in Waukegan.

Long Army Service Record.

He has a distinguished army service record. In 1904 he organized battery C of the Illinois National Guard in Waukegan and became captain. He was major of the Illinois field artillery on the Mexican border in 1916. In the world war Mr. Smith served overseas 18 months, being a lieutenant colonel of the 149th field artillery [Reilly's Bucks], Rainbow division.

Upon receiving his discharge from the army in April of 1919, Col. Smith returned to Waukegan to resume his practice of law. He was one of the organizers of Homer Dahringer post of the American Legion in Waukegan and was the second post commander.

Col. Smith became state's attorney of Lake county in December of 1920 and has been reëlected twice. He has been the only state's attorney elected three times in Lake county. At the last election he was unopposed.

Prosecutor of Len Small.

By his prosecution of Len Small, then governor, in 1922, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the state of large sums of money, Mr. Smith became widely known.

During the nine years Col. Smith has been state's attorney 120 persons have received penitentiary sentences, 29 being convicted on murder and manslaughter charges.

He has succeeded in driving scores of divekeepers out of the state, his friends say. Last summer, it is recalled, he prevented George (Bugs) Moran, Chicago gang leader, from operating a slot machine racket in Lake county. During State's Attorney Smith's administration of the prosecutor's office, more than $500,000 has been collected in fines. After paying all expenses of his office there has been a balance for the county educational fund.

WIFE PUT ON PROBATION.

Mrs. Charlotte Timke, 23 years old, 816 Cornelia avenue, was placed on probation for six months yesterday by Judge Immenhausen after her husband and two policemen testified they had found her and Anthony Pagluighi, 39 years old, 537 North Franklin street, in her apartment on Monday. Pagluighi was discharged.

HAS 100 MILLION AND HOLDS JOB AS ERRAND BOY

New York, Feb. 1.—(AP)—The Herald-Tribune tomorow will say John Hay Whitney, son of the late Payne Whitney and possessor of a fortune estimated in excess of $100,000,000, has been employed during the last three months as a "buzzer boy" in the firm of Lee Higginson & Co., at a salary of less than $20 a week.

He went to work for the firm last October to learn the banking business from the ground up and, since that time, has run errands, delivered messages, and made himself generally generally useful about the office from 8:45 to 5:15 daily.

Mr. Whitney is a director of the Great Northern Paper company, a post to which he wa selected in 1928 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of his father. Since his employment as a buzzer boy, he has occasionally run erands for men with whom he sits at the directors' table.

Warrant Out for S. Dakota Official as Auto Killer

Blunt, S. D., Feb. 1.—(AP)—A manslaughter warrant was issued tonight for the arrest of Frank K. Kriebs, state secretary of agriculture, following a coroner's jury verdict which found him "guilty of gross negligence" in connection with the death of George S. Marsh of Blunt.

Gunmen Hold Up Hotel; Get Loot Valued at $3,000

Ely Horwitz, owner of the Franklin Manor apartment hotel, 3124 Franklin boulevard, was alone in the lobby of the building last night when four armed men entered and backed him into his own apartment where his wife, Lena, was sitting with two tenants, Harold Johnson and Thomas Arrigo. While two robbers stood guard the other pair ransacked the apartment, taking $1,000 in currency and jewelry valued at $2,000 from a bureau drawer. They escaped in a sedan.

Gold Coast Electric Service Off Three Hours

Dinner was served by candle light and the evening was passed in darkness in scores of gold coast residences last night. Two electric light circuits, leading from the power house at Mohawk and Menominee streets, were shorted about 7 p. m. Lights in all dwellings on Astor street from Division to Burton place, on Dearborn street from Division to Schiller, and in other blocks near the south end of Lincoln park were out. Service was restored about 10 p. m.

MAN ACCUSED BY SISTER FREED.

Charles Robinson, 23 years old, salesman, who was arrested after his sister, Mrs. Alice Rodgers, 50 years old, had charged him with beating her and smashing the furniture in their apartment at 20 East Bellevue place, was discharged in the Chicago avenue court yesterday when his sister failed to appear against him.

FILING DAY AT SPRINGFIELD, BUT NO EXCITEMENT

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Because of the announcement that no official list of filings for the April primary would be made public until Monday, there was little interest in the initial filing today in the office of Secretary of State Stratton.

All petitions received today will be refiled Monday for the reason that there is a technical dispute as to whether this should be considered the first filling day.

William Crudden of Chicago brought to Springfield the petition of Senator Charles S. Deneen, but did not mail it today. Neither was the petition of Ruth Hanna McCormick in the early mail.

The petition of Justus Johnson of Aurora, candidate for congressman-at large, was among those in the mail today.

Lake Created by Quake in '95 Reappears with Quake

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Feb. 1.—A baffling natural phenomenon was produced last night twenty miles from Rome when a twenty acre lake was suddenly formed by a faint earthquake at Capena. This was a duplicate result of a slight quake at the same spot in 1895. During the course of years, however, the lake dried up only to reappear last night.

ENTRIES PROVE 500 WORDS CAN TELL U. S. STORY

History Contest Writers Cover Facts.

It can be done! Readers of THE TRIBUNE are demonstrating daily that Calvin Coolidge has not undertaken a hopeless task in pledging himself to pen a 500 word history of this country to be carved on the Mount Rushmore memorial in South Dakota. Excellent manuscripts covering the salient points of American history are being received by the score at the desk of the history editor, in charge of the contest which closes on Feb. 15.

From various states and numerous cities come entries seeking the first prize of $1,000, or one of the other prizes. These include a second award of $500, a third of $250, and seven prizes of $50 each. While the earlier entries revealed a tendency to grow lyric over their country's glorious past, rather than coldly historical, the trend now is markedly toward presenting the most facts in the fewest words.

Tells Story Clearly.

One of the most praiseworthy manuscripts received to date, which keeps scrupulously within the limit yet presents the points with clarity and judgement, starts off as follows:

"In fourteen ninety two Christopher Columbus, an Italian seaman sailing under the Spanish flag, searching for a western route to India, landed among the islands now known as the West Indies. This led to the discovery of the two great continents of the western hemisphere. It is now evident that Norsemen visited the mainland earlier, but to Columbus goes the credit for bringing America to the world's attention.

"The leading nations of Europe conducted expeditions of exploration and colonization, and England gained control of that part of the northern continent which was destined to be the cradle of a great republic."

How Words Are Counted.

For the benefit of those who have not seen the explanation of rules governing the computing of words, these points are repeated. A date like July 4, 1776, counts as three words. A year, such as 1492, is counted as one word. Compound words or hyphenated words, such as District of Columbia, New York, United States, German-American, etc., are counted as two words. Initials, as in Robert E. Lee, are counted as one word each, but in the case of a state, as N. D., or S. C., they will be considered as a single word.

Address entries to the history editor, THE TRIBUNE, Tribune square, Chicago.

New School Principals Take Up Duties Tomorrow

Twenty-three new school principals were congratulated by Supt. William J. Bogan and welcomed into membership in the Chicago Principals' club at the club's final meeting of the semester yesterday in the Steuben building. The school heads, who were named recently to fill vacancies caused by retirements, will take up their new duties tomorrow.

"You have not been paid much, but your value to the city cannot be estimated," Supt. Bogan told the retiring principals, who were attending their last meeting as members of the club.

RUM RUNNER'S PLANE BEATS CAR OF COAST GUARDS

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—A rum smuggling airplane and a government automobile staged a race across a field on the outskirts of Detroit this morning. The airplane won, successfully taking the air and disappearing in the direction of Canada.

The officers then followed a car into which the plane had discharged its cargo. After a long chase they found the machine abandoned. The car and its load of 15 cases of whisky were confiscated.

The officers were members of the customs border patrol and were attracted to the plane when they saw it cross from Canada.

Charges Church Trustees Kept $1,500 Collections

Circuit Judge William V. Brothers yesterday issued an injunction to restrain three trustees of the Holy Trinity church, 1101 South Peoria street, from taking up the collection this morning. The injunction was obtained by Nick Kokinas, president of the Association of the Greek Community, who charged that the trustees have held out $1,500 in collections since last Nov. 2. The trustees are John Antonopoulos, Strovros Karigranis, and Christos Kotsonatos.

CITE LAKE LEVELS IN EXCEPTION TO HUGHES REPORT

In a bill of exceptions to be filed Monday in the Supreme court at Washington the present high lake levels will be emphasized as one of the principal reasons why the sanitary district should be allowed to divert water for its sewage disposal operations, Walter E. Beebe, attorney for the sanitary board, announced yesterday.

The bill contains thirteen exceptions and objections to the report of Charles Evans Hughes, special master in the lake level controversy.

The district will contend that the great lakes states which protest diversion of lake water through the Chicago river now face extensive damage from high lake levels. Mr. Hughes, the bill says, failed to consider the fact that since the filing of the original report in November, 1927, the levels of Lakes Michigan, Huron, Erie, and Ontario have risen approximately three feet nine inches, causing damage to riparian interests, docks, wharves, and similar structures and that such damage will be even greater if diversion is halted.

The bill also objects to the special master's findings because he did not allow sufficient time for constructing the sewage disposal plants required under terms of the permit.

GRUNDY MAKES SCOFFERS VOTE HAITI INQUIRY

Meets Jeers with a Smile and Shames Senate.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Senator Joseph R. Grundy, Pennsylvania's superlobbyist before he became its junior Republican senator in December, today shocked the senate by a stinging rebuke in his maiden speech into hurried approval of the resolution authorizing a $50,000 appropriation for a study of conditions in Haiti.

"Old Joe." has never concerned himself with the Haitian controversy, but radical Republican-Democratic coalitionists, still smarting under his characterization of their "backward" states, sought to drag him into it today by caustic comment on his pre-inauguration fears of President Hoover's inability to deal with the vexing problems facing the country.

Smiles When Pestered.

For more than half an hour Senators J. J. Blaine [Rep., Wis.], B. K. Wheeler [Dem., Mont.], G. W. Norris [Rep., Neb.], and Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], jibed at Grundy, contending that his appraisal of Hoover's supposed weakness was vindicated by the presidential request for the creation of an advisory commission to solve the Haitian problem.

Grundy sat smiling and silent, apparently enjoying the spectacle, as his would-be tormentors read and re-read his prophecy that "the agricultural interests will commandeer the senators from the pocket boroughs of the west," and his assertion that the electorate had been adulterated by the addition of women voters who know nothing about the tariff.

Challenge Hurled and Accepted.

Then came an indirect challenge to him to disavow the criticism of Hoover and the other remarks attributed to him in minutes of a speech made to the National Wool Manufacturers in December, 1928, and discovered by the lobby investigating committee in the association's files yesterday.

"Can it really be true that the senator from Pennsylvania made such a speech as that?" asked Harrison.

"There is absolutely no doubt about it," answered Blaine. "I don't think he would deny it."

That was enough for Grundy, who rose and demanded recognition.

An Extemporaneous Address.

"I made that speech about a year ago," he declared, adding that it was an extemporaneous address which he had since forgotten until made public by the lobby investigators.

"But," he added, solemnly, "the exhibition that has gone on here this afternoon for the last half an hour, in my opinion, justifies about everything that I understood the senator from Wisconsin to read from his memorandum of what I said, excluding, of course, the reference to the President of the United States.

"I think this exhibition certainly ought to be notice to every right thinking person in the United States as to the character of discussion which is occupying the time and attention of some members of the senate to the exclusion of important problems which are now confronting the country."

Prompt Action Results.

The effect of the rebuke was electrical. Senators, including Norris, who a few minutes before had been participating in a near filibuster to delay passage of the resolution, hastened to secure the floor, to express their belief that the President should be given whatever assistance he deems necessary to solve the Haitian question.

As approved, the resolution throws responsibility for the inquiry upon the President by providing for an investigation "by such means as he may determine," and is a substitute for the measure passed by the house which would have created a seven member commission as suggested by the President in his special message to congress.

In the course of the debate on the resolution, Senator Claud Swanson [Dem., Va.] declared he hesitated at sending a commission to Haiti on the eve of the presidential election in that country in April, but, he added, "this is the first time in eight years any one in the executive department has shown any interest in Haiti and the President is entitled to have the hearty support of congress in securing any information needed as the basis for recommendations of wise policies to congress."

BONE DRYS FLAY "BLASPHEMOUS" HOUSE RECORD

Wage Battle to Expunge Wet Speech.

agreed to withdraw the purported resolution that the real battle over it began.

"Why expurgate the remarks of the gentleman from Wisconsin?" spoke up Representative B. H. Snell [Rep., N. Y.]. "You will accomplish nothing. The gentleman from Georgia, Mr. Crisp, put them in again in his speech."

"Yes," added Representative C. W. Ramseyer [Rep., Ia.], "they will appear in the Record tomorrow morning."

Majority Leader John Q. Tilson [Rep., Conn.] proposed that the words also be stricken from Crisp's speech. To this Minority Leader John Garner [Dem., Tex.] objected. Mr. Ramseyer suggested that the entire Crisp speech be kept out of the Record, but Mr. Brand objected.

"Well," commented Mr. Snell, "if the gentleman doesn't strike them out, they are still there, aren't they?"

Wets Smile, Drys Scowl.

By this time all the wets were smiling, the drys were scowling, and the galleries snickering. Half the members were on their feet, crowded around the speaker's platform. Representative F. H. La Guardia [Rep., N. Y.], whose lungs were stronger than those of the others, obtained the floor and made confusion worse confounded by insisting that Schafer didn't want to expunge his remarks at all, but merely to revise them.

The speaker hammered for order and when he finally secured it, Mr. Tilson asked and obtained unanimous consent to have Schafer's remarks revised and let Crisp do as he pleased. Mr. Crisp said he would talk it over with Mr. Brand and there the matter ended.

Today's attack upon Representative Schafer's statements was the third attempt of the drys in two weeks to censure a wet member for remarks derogatory to the prohibition law. On Jan. 17, the drys, whose nerves have been frayed by constant wet attacks, sought to force Representative Adolph Sabath [Dem., Ill.], to retract a comment upon the attitude of the federal courts toward dry killers. A day or two later, Representative J. L. Black [Dem., N. Y.], was criticized for referring to several senate drys as "lightweights."

Speech Stirs Fight

Congressman John C. Schafer of Wisconsin, whose wet speech caused storm, shown when he was a railway engineer.

Christ Erred, Is Charge.

Probably no speech during the session has enraged the drys more than the "Christianity" address of Representative Schafer, in which he quoted the Scriptures as proof that prohibition is un-Christian. The alleged ministerial association resolution was cited as evidence that the drys are willing to denounce the Bible to promote their cause. In addition to saying Christ "made a mistake" in performing the wine miracle, the resolution added that he belonged to "a lower order of Mediterranean civilization."

"That statement," declared Crisp, as he took the floor today, "was a false slander on the Christian ministry of this nation."

The supposed resolution, he declared, was never proposed or adopted by the ministerial association, but appeared in an anonymous advertisement in a Charleston newspaper. He read affidavits from officials of the association denying that such a resolution had been considered. If Representative Schafer "measures up to his duty," Crisp said, "he wound have the resolution expunged from the Record."

Taking up the cudgel where Crisp dropped it, Representative Branch asserted that Schafer's act not only was sacrilegious, "but a violation of the law against blasphemy." Thereupon he quoted from court decisions making the point that to make such statements was an "infamous crime." Warming up to his plea, Brand declared that every mother, daughter and "manly" son in the country considered the resolution an insult.

"And the word mother is the sweetest word in the world," he added. At this juncture, he extracted his handkerchief and his voice quavered as he launched into scriptural quotations to put Schafer to shame.

Apparently, by a preconcerted arrangement, the third Georgia member, Mr. Edwards, leaped to his feet as Brand finished and moved that Schafer's "blasphemous" remarks be expunged from the record. The chair informed him that a resolution would be required. He attempted to offer the resolution, but again was checked by a ruling that he would have to wait until the pending business was finished. Edwards then announced that the resolution would be offered later in the day.

During these onslaughts, Representative Schafer was not in the chamber and he learned of them when he arrived later in the day. After a checkup, he decided he really had been in the wrong, and near the end of the session, asked for the expurgation voluntarily. It was then that the parliamentary tangle ensued.

Woman Arrested on Arson Charge; Husband Hunted

Mrs. Laura M. Secker, 35 years old, 237 South Elmwood avenue, Oak Park, was arrested early yesterday on a warrant charging her with setting fire to her own home. Her husband, Fred Secker, an insurance salesman, is being sought on a similar charge. Deputy State Fire Marshal Bertram obtained a warrant after two insurance companies had asked the state to investigate fires at the Secker home. Bertram said furnishings in the house had been damaged six times by fire within the last five years.

Wedding Gown Pawned for Rum, Wife's Suit Says

Because she said her husband, Peter, pawned her wedding dress to buy liquor, Mrs. Cecilia Ortling, 3529 McLean avenue, yesterday filed a bill for divorce in the Superior court. The bill, drawn by Attorney Victor Frohlich, charges habitual drunkenness. The Ortlings were married on June 16, 1928, and separated last Nov. 14.

St. Louis Fair Building, Used as Dormitory, Burns

Hollister, Mo., Feb. 1.—[U. P.]—Maine's contribution to the St. Louis world fair in 1904, now used as Dobbins hall for girls, burned today. Clothing and personal possessions of 60 girls and eight teachers were destroyed.

HERE'S CHANCE TO WIN $50 WITHOUT LEAVING YOUR FAVORITE CHAIR

Nineteen prizes aggregating $100 are the inducements held out to armchair sleuths in a new TRIBUNE contest, a treasure hunt for hidden want-ads. Each Sunday, beginning today, a large advertisement displaying a "key" picture will be printed conspicuously and those hunters who can dig clues from the want-ad section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE will have a chance at the money.

First prize is $50, the next eight are of $5 each, and ten others carry $1. The contest is open to all—men, women, boys and girls—except TRIBUNE employés and their families. All solutions for today's contest must be received in the office of THE TRIBUNE not later than 6 p. m., Thursday, Feb. 6.

The treasure hunter must first guess the want-ad classification suggested by the picture found in the contest advertisement. If correctly interpreted the picture will send him through the want-ad section, one clue leading to another. Prize winners will be judged by the neatness and exactness of their solutions.

DRYS GET 3 YEAR TERMS AND FINES IN BRIBERY CASE

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 1.—[U.P.]—Benjamin G. Finke, federal prohibition agent, and Henry Strawn, former agent, were sentenced to three years in prison and fined $2,000 today after being convicted on charges of accepting bribes to protect bootleggers.

Finke came into court today from St. Paul, where he had continued his prohibition work after the conviction two weeks ago. Finke was convicted on four counts and Strawn on two.

ST. LOUIS LOSES AIR LINE OFFICE; 6 CHIEFS RESIGN

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 1.—(AP)—In line with a reorganization policy announced today in Los Angeles by J. L. Maddux, new president of the Transcontinental Air Transport-Maddux Air Lines, immediate discontinuance of general offices here and the resignations of six officials stationed here were announced.

Eastern operations headquarters were moved, effective today, from St. Louis to Columbus, O.

The officials no longer connected with the company, effective today, are: Paul Collins, general superintendent; Don Bartlett, assistant general manager; Joseph H. Magee, vice president in charge of operations; John A. Collings, superintendent of the eastern division; John A. Herlihy, chief engineer; and Eugene Vidal, chief inspector.

H. S. Jones, formerly with the Pennsylvania railroad, has been appointed assistant to the president in charge of an economy program, made necessary, officials said, by the recently reduced fares. Elimination of company buses, in which passengers were transported to and from airports, is another economy measure.

DR. E. A. PRINTY ENDS OWN LIFE; ILLNESS BLAMED

Despondency over ill health is believed to have caused the suicide of Dr. Emmet A. Printy, 37 years old, who shot himself early yesterday in his apartment at 453 Webster avenue. Dr. Printy was a director of the Laboratory of Surgical Technique at 2040 Lincoln avenue and was a graduate of Northwestern university.

The physician had been ill for six years and three weeks ago was confined to bed. The police notified Dr. Printy's widow, Mrs. Kathryn Printy of 1052 Sheridan road from whom he had been separated for four years. A daughter, Jane, 6 years old, also survives. Printy was the author of several books on surgery.

PARROT SUSPECT IN FEVER FIGHT FOUND IN STORE

Dr. William Tyler, health department expert on psitticosis, or parrot's fever, located a parrot yesterday in the Bee Zee Bird shop, 618 Maxwell street, which is suspected of having associated with another of its kind that suffered from the disease. The door of the shop, padlocked in observance of the Hebrew Sunday, prevented a close examination.

After a visual diagnosis through the glass windows, the expert reported to Dr. G. A. Koehler, acting health commissioner, that the bird seemed lively and in good health. It jumped from perch to perch and occasionally screeched, Dr. Tyler said.

The parrot was one of two bought by Robert Shatkus, 2077 Canalport avenue, and shipped to Mr. and Mrs. John Ashment of Roundup, Mont. One bird died and the other was sent back to Shatkus. In the meantime Mr. Ashment had died of psitticosis and Mrs. Ashment was reported seriously ill.

LIGHT CRUISER AUGUSTA TAKES PLACE IN NAVY

Newport News, Va., Feb. 1.—(AP)—The Augusta, speedy light cruiser, took her place as the latest addition to the United States navy today. Hundreds of notables cheered and applauded while she slipped gracefully down the ways to the blue waters of Hampton roads.

Miss Evelyn McDaniels of Augusta, Ga., christened the craft with a bottle of Savannah river water.

The launching ceremony required only a few moments. Striking the water with a splash, the ship moved slowly into the stream, keeping a true course with the slack tide.

The vessel was gayly decorated with flags and bunting, bearing the colors of the United States, the state of Georgia, and the city of Augusta.

LOYOLA FEATURES SPIRITUAL LIFE OF ITS STUDENTS

Many Teachers Pledged Not to Accept Pay.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Suppose—merely suppose—that you were to come upon something like this in tomorrow morning's newspaper:

"More than half the unmarried members of the faculties of the colleges of liberal arts of the University of Illinois, Northwestern university, and the University of Chicago have pledged themselves to accept no salaries for the rest of their lives and to deposit in a common fund, for the benefit of their respective universities, such sums as may be given them for outside lecturing and for service in social settlements. These educators declare that henceforth they will specialize in the spiritual development of students intrusted to their care and that their supreme aim will be 'the application of the principles of Jesus to present day problems.'"

Believe World Would Smile.

With what wonderment in some quarters, with what incredulity in others, and in still others with what amusement not unmixed with scorn would such an announcement be received!

And yet, on a campus fifteen miles from the University of Chicago, and seven miles from the downtown campus of Northwestern university, precisely that scheme works to the entire satisfaction of those who are directing it. In Chicago, amid vicissitudes and slow advances, it has been working for sixty years, until now it represents a value in land, buildings, books, manuscripts, investments and endowments of nearly six million dollars, and an enrollment of five hundred students in the College of Arts and Sciences of this strange university and nearly four thousand in its professional schools.

Counting the enrollment in its preparatory schools, its summer school and its home study courses, the grand total of young people who come under the influence of Loyola university is nearly seven thousand three hundred.

Once Harold Swift, president of the board of trustees of the University of Chicago, was talking with Father Kelley, president of Loyola, about budget making at the great school on the Midway. "Financially you have the advantage of us, Father," said Mr. Swift.

Dr. Kelley—whose proper title among the Jesuits is "Father Rector," but who, like the heads of other Jesuit universities in the United States, is now designated as "President"—looked up, a little startled. It had never come to him that Loyola, where the only embellished room on the campus is the chapel, had any signal financial advantage over the University of Chicago with its millions upon millions of endowments.

Much of Teaching Free.

"Yes," continued Mr. Swift, "you see, about fifty per cent of our budget goes for salaries, teaching and administrative. Think of your advantage! So much of your teaching is a free gift. You can call it an endowment. And it's permanent. It goes on forever and will go on so long as the Society of Jesus endures."

Father rector smiled. It may be doubted whether he had ever thought of the Jesuit teaching service in terms so specifically fiscal.

I spent an afternoon with some of the teaching fathers who conduct Loyola university. After recent observations in universities where the air was clamorous with the spirit of step-and-fetch-it and presidents were premier go-getters, this visit to Lake Shore campus, as the seat of the college of arts and sciences of Loyola is called, was like stepping into a world where the abiding note was serenity.

Serenity the Note.

Everybody was busy, but nobody seemed hurried. Luncheon was brief and it was very simple. Nobody talked about a million dollars, and, far from being irked by the fact that they were receiving—in President Hutchins of Chicago's not wholly felicitous phrase—"janitor's salaries," these teachers seemed oblivious of the fact that they were receiving no salaries at all. They did not resent the fact—a source of woe to many a secular pundit to whom I have listened—that they had to teach undergraduates and could not devote themselves wholly to research work. They appeared to think that a human soul, whether it were graduate or undergraduate, was the most precious treasure that could be intrusted to a teacher.

Tell of Rigid Training.

They gloried—if brethren so serene can be said to have vaunted themselves on anything—in the rigorous training to which men of their order are subjected before they are fully accredited university teachers, and they patiently described the six stages of that training, which, if a man enters upon it at the age of 18, carries him to his thirty-third year:

Thus:

"First stage: Two years of a novitiate given to asceticism, prayer, meditation, and study of the life of Christ.

"Second stage: Two years' study of the humanities, comprising literature and languages—Greek, Latin, English, a modern foreign language, and normal school work in education.

"Third stage: Three years' study of philosophy, science, and mathematics.

"Fourth stage: Three years of teaching in secondary schools. (Academies and high schools).

"Fifth stage: Four years' study of divinity. (Dogmatic and moral theology, liturgy, church history, canon law, and Hebrew.) A Jesuit is usually ordained after his third year of divinity.

"Sixth stage: A year of asceticism, during which the life of Christ is restudied and, in so far as is possible, relived."

The total is fifteen years.

"After that," said Father Francis J. Meyer, manager of funds and teachers in Loyola, who was one of the group at luncheon, "we ought to be pretty decent. If we're not, it's our own fault."

And then what?

A lifetime of unsalaried teaching and plain living; a little room—not much larger than the typical hall bedroom—in the Faculty building, which is the center of the group of university structures now rising on Loyola's Lake Shore campus. The furnishings of that room are a bed, a dressing table, two chairs, a desk, a prie-dieu, a narrow strip of carpet, books, and a sacred picture or two.

Most Interest in Souls.

The talk at the luncheon and afterwards ran cheerfully along. The fathers, without moralizing in an oppressive strain, were less vividly interested in subjects than in souls. A share in the development of a human soul seemed to them the most precious privilege of the educator, and everything they said along those lines recalled to me a remark of the eminent Jesuit historian, Father Campbell, who once said: "There is not a Jesuit in the world who would not walk out of his class tomorrow if he were told that he had nothing to do with the spiritual formation of those committed to his charge."

When I was ushered into the president's office he was smiling over a twelve-page pamphlet which contained an address entitled "The Changes of a Quarter Century," delivered in Albany at the recent convocation of the University of the State of New York by that provocative—and Protestant—veteran of American education, Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columia university and author of "The Faith of a Liberal." With an appreciative pencil Dr. Kelley marked certain passages in the address before he shared it with me, saying, as he passed the pamphlet over, "I shall send for more copies of this address.

Quotes from Butler Address.

Four of the marked passages are here reprinted:

"The pretty complete abandonment of the doctrine of formal discipline has deprived school teaching of any objective that really matters.

"The unreasoning outbursts of exhortation, fanaticism, ignorance, intolerance that continue to sweep over our people from time to time are the direct product of the lack of that discipline leading to 'self-discipline which it is the first business of education to give.

"The unsatisfactory form and content of our present day education is to be found in the excessive and impossible burden which is put upon the school by the collapse of the family and the church as coöperating educational agencies. . . . The church, or at least the Protestant church, as a coöperating educational instrument is to all intents and purposes nonexistent.

"The important point that the pupil should be brought to understand is that he is entitled to share in the religious inheritance of the race, and that this is not something for Friday, or Saturday, or Sunday alone, but for use every day and for his whole life."

Those words by Dr. Butler so tersely convey certain educational ideals of Loyola that they might have been written on Lake Shore campus, Chicago, instead of on Morningside Heights, New York City.

"Just what," said Dr. Kelley, taking up some leaflets of his own composing, "is our purpose on this campus? What are we trying to do in this college of arts and sciences of Loyola university? We are trying to impart a certain amount of information to our students. But that is really secondary. It could be done with less elaborate machinery than that which we have devised.

"The more important object which we have in mind is to develop in our students a proper appreciation of the true and beautiful, the noble and important in God's creation and in man's handiwork, in personal and social relations. We are trying to develop habits in the student—the habits of the natural and supernatural virtues, the habit of doing his best, the habit of being prompt, regular, accurate. We are trying to develop in the student skill and facility in the use of his God-given faculties of body and soul, of mind and heart. We are trying to help the student to live, to 'have life and have it more abundantly.'"

Here Virtues Are Charted.

Then the president showed me a kind of chart on which all these "purposes of the college" were scheduled and rescheduled in orderly array. At the top of the sheet the impartments aimed at were designated as: "(1) God, religion, the church. (2) Self—soul and body. (3) Men, their problems, achievements, history. (4) The world, its constitution, laws."

Where the chart detailed habits which the fathers wished to develop in their students I noted, "Self-dependence, initiative, inquiry, observation, investigation, coöperation, courtesy, unselfishness, faith, reverence, obedience, hope, fortitude, charity, prudence, temperance."

At a time when the attitude of many educators toward students—especially undergraduates—is marked by intense sophistication and a degree of aloofness, it was a strange experience, and one not without its refreshment, to hear a university president with a student body of more than seven thousand on his mind thus insisting that a university education, if it is to be comprehensive, must equip youth for more than triumphant go-getting.

And so the fathers stand fast by their fundamentals, and one of them as voiced by Dr. Kelley is this: "The nation cannot be strong unless it is moral and it cannot be moral unless it is religious." And here is another of their fundamentals as released by Father Joseph S. Reiner, dean of the school: "The supreme aim of Loyola is to teach the applicability of the principles of Christ to present day problems."

Completing $320,000 Library.

On such fundamentals Loyola flourishes. It is bringing to completion on the lake shore campus at a cost of $320,000 a stately library building which will house 250,000 volumes. Just to the south of its campus Mundelein college for women is rising. It will be conducted by the Sisters of the B. V. M., and it will be an affiliation of the university to the degree that the university faculty will assist in the teaching and be responsible for its standards. This structure will be fifteen stories high and will cost two millions.

In hand for the construction of the chapel of Our Lady of the Wayside on the south side of the campus is the sum of $185,000, and one of the most significant facts in connection with the accumulation of that fund is that Father James Joseph Mertz, unsalaried teacher of the classics on Loyola's faculty, has in five years brought to it $10,000 which he earned by assisting in parish work and by giving outside lectures.

Altruism is no theory on that campus. It is a matter of course.

CRUISERS.

We are asked by a business man to "explain this question of cruisers, what we have and what we ought to have and why." The cruiser question ought to interest every American business man, as well as every one who has a stake in the security and prosperity of our country. It presents a problem of first rank importance to the welfare of the people of the United States, present and future. We have already pointed out that the protection of our exports and essential imports is vital to the welfare of all our people. This protection, both in war and peace, is directly the mission of cruisers. They are essential to both the physical and moral support of our rights under treaties and under international law. By carrying our flag in every sea they insure respect for these rights and give a valuable prestige to our nationality.

The question of cruiser strength involves two main and interrelated factors, bases and cruiser types. Any ship's efficiency is dependent upon a base where it can be repaired and supplied. If the base is far away the ship will lose more time from its mission and the number of ships assigned to accomplish any mission, as blockade or the protection of a place or trade route, must allow for the absence of ships while going to and returning from their base, as well as the time spent at the base for repairs and supplies. Great Britain has by far the greatest number of bases, and they are the best situated of any power, and this is in effect a very large addition to its naval force. The United States has few bases and its overseas commerce is carried on long sea journeys dominated by the naval bases of other powers. From this fact arises the need of the United States for cruisers large enough to remain a long time at sea and strong enough to meet the forces of powers possessing bases nearer at hand and situated at strategic points on the highways of commerce.

Also, Great Britain and France have bases along the most important coast of the United States, at Halifax, the Bermudas, and the West Indies. These are not now heavily fortified, but they will be if conditions favor it, and if we were to abolish the battle fleet they would become a greater menace to our security. The development of aviation and the submarine and the possession by Great Britain and France of large fleets of cruisers and submarines make these bases more important than they have been since the days of sailing vessels. There is an effort among American pacifists and internationalists to minify their significance, but no naval man does so, for he knows what their military possibilities are. Our delegation at London should not make any agreement which does not take them into account at their full potential value.

As to the present cruiser situation, measured merely in ships, we are far behind. When we had surrendered at Washington our right to develop bases in the far east and our approaching primacy in capital ships we also ceased to build cruisers. As no limitation or cessation of cruiser building had been agreed upon, the other chief naval powers took advantage of their relief from expenditure on capital ships to build cruisers and submarines. We shall write of submarines another day, but the cruiser situation as it has developed has been summarized by Commander Howard of the construction corps of our navy as follows: At the time of the Washington conference, 1921, we had a fair number of old armored cruisers built in 1904 and 1905, but hopelessly out of date when viewed in the light of after-war conditions. Eleven of these old vessels have been kept on the lists, since it was felt that in time of real need they might well be better than nothing. Of modern cruisers we possessed but ten fine, up to date ships of 7,500 tons, all completed between 1923 and 1925. Even these ships, however, are small and outclassed by the new type created by the treaty. Do the people of this country realize that from that day to this the United States has not completed and put in service a single cruiser, and those ten ships designed and built during the war, with the 25 year old armored cruisers, are all the ships of this type we have now in service?

After many explanations and arguments by the navy department, the country and congress were brought to understand that we must build cruisers of the type developed under the treaty, and in 1924 the building of eight 10,000 ton cruisers was authorized. The first two of this group of eight will be completed in the course of the next few months, but the last six will not be completed until 1930 or 1931. The President has since ordered postponement of plans for two cruisers.

Realizing that this group of eight ships made only a good start toward the navy's needs, an endeavor was made in congress in 1928 to authorize a regular program of building of big cruisers which would give the navy the absolutely minimum number which was needed to round out its deficiencies in this type of ship, and would spread the building of these ships over a period of years so that construction would not be too concentrated upon the shipyards, and new ships would join the fleet at regular intervals.

After a year or more of discussion fifteen new cruisers were authorized in March, 1929, five to be started in 1929, five in 1930, and five in 1931. Contracts for two out of the first five were let, but as construction of the other three of this first group was about to be started, the suggestion for a conference on naval building was made by the British prime minister, and in response to this suggestion but two ships are at present going forward. Future events only will show how many of these cruisers will actually be completed for the navy.

During these years England was building cruisers, slowly but steadily, each year a number being authorized. The result of this program is that she has now, completed and in service in her navy, 10 cruisers with 8 inch guns, eight of 10,000 tons, and two of about 9,000 tons, all started and finished since the treaty, and she is in addition building seven 10,000 ton cruisers more. Mr. MacDonald is said to have ordered cessation of work on three cruisers not yet under construction.

Similarly, Japan, after the Washington treaty, began building 10,000 ton cruisers, and she now has eight of these ships completed or nearly completed. In addition, recent press reports have stated that she is to build more cruisers definitely of this same size and type and a number of other vessels which may or may not be similar.

France and Italy have not been far behind and, although their navies are admittedly in a class below that of England, Japan, and the United States, they have each completed two big cruisers and two or three more are under construction.

In spite of our great weakness in cruisers and the special disadvantages our lack of bases creates, the British government, at the conference on naval limitation held at Geneva in 1927, attempted to impose upon us a limitation upon the type of large cruiser required by our conditions and an agreement to leave unlimited the smaller type efficient for the British empire with its world encircling system of bases. Fortunately for us, our delegation, supported by President Coolidge and by the majority of the American press, refused this further sacrifice, which would not only have disposed of parity but put us permanently in a position of hopeless inferiority on the high seas.

Influences opposed to an alert and self-respecting American policy on naval defense are considerable. Other governments at the present conference are not seriously afflicted by such influences. It is the more important that our delegation and our government be impressed with the American people's determination to have its interests throughout the world supported by adequate organization of the nation's strength. Whatever agreements are reached at London must meet this test or they will not be accepted by this nation.

THE OPERA SEASON.

The first season of Chicago's grand opera company in its own home closed last night. It is one upon which Mr. Insull and his collaborators may be congratulated. The artistic level attained has been higher than the preceding seasons, and the spirit of the company excellent. In a noteworthy revival Beethoven's opera, "Fidelio," not heard in Chicago for a generation, and Ponchielli's "La Gioconda" were added to the company's repertory. What is even more important for the present, the new opera house has been received with approval by the public and a substantial increase of the opera clientèle has occurred. In short, the Civic Opera has made a substantial advance in merit and popularity. Its new home has received the public approval, and upon the financial foundation created by Mr. Insull's extraordinary achievement the future of the whole enterprise is not only secure but full of promise.

Meanwhile in the Civic theater, the smaller audience room adjoining the grand opera auditorium, a creditable season of Shakespearean plays generously underwritten by Mr. Harley L. Clarke has been given, and the theater itself has proved to be a welcome addition to Chicago's resources for better class entertainment. A season of light opera of the highest type has been announced for the spring and fall, a project which, we think, will be cordially welcomed by the public. It is long overdue.

DRY LAW ENFORCEMENT.

A lawyer reader sends us remarks of Judge Ritter of the federal District court at Miami which we think, with our correspondent, are worthy of note. Judge Ritter, addressing fifty jurors at the opening of the Criminal court session, informed them there would be a large number of cases involving violations of the national prohibition act and he was therefore moved to make a special plea for impartial consideration of the evidence and verdicts free from prejudice. He said: "I have found that some men have such deep prejudices against the law they release every one, not knowing the duty cast on them. I would like to know if there is any man on this jury who feels that he is so prejudiced against the prohibition law that he cannot eliminate his prejudice; or if there is any man who cannot be impartial in considering a case in which the prohibition law is involved. It is due yourself, due the government, due to the court, due to the attorneys on each side that if you have any prejudices that you let it be known."

The judge also appealed to the jurors not to cherish prejudice against prohibition enforcement officers, saying that a person otherwise impartial as to the dry law might say: "I will not believe a prohibition officer under oath." In fact, the judge cited such a case in his own experience.

It is very seldom if ever a judge has to make such an appeal to jurors except in case of dry law enforcement, or especially beg jurymen to give credence to the testimony of government officials. This incident, which is not exceptional but typical, well illustrates the fatal weakness of national prohibition and is more significant than an ocean of talk about respect for law and enforceability of the mandate on teetotalism. The history of jurisprudence and of government abundantly shows that juries will not enforce tyrannical regulations, nor will they accept the testimony of paid government informers. Appeals to an abstract theory of obedience to law are not persuasive when made on behalf of statutes lacking the sanction of the common conscience and held by self-respecting and normally law-abiding citizens to be invasions of their inalienable rights.

The following Bible reading begins with the first verse of the eighteenth chapter of I. Kings. The American standard version is used. The only change is in paragraph form and punctuation method.

BEHOLD, ELIJAH IS HERE

And it came to pass after many days, that the word of the Lord came to Elijah, in the third year, saying, "Go, show thyself unto Ahab; and I will send rain upon the earth." And Elijah went to show himself unto Ahab. And the famine was sore in Samaria. And Ahab called Obadiah, who was over the household. (Now Obadiah feared the Lord greatly; for it was so, when Jezebel cut off the prophets of the Lord, that Obadiah took a hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water.) And Ahab said unto Obadiah, "Go through the land, unto all the fountains of water, and unto all the brooks; peradventure we may find grass and save the horses and mules alive, that we lose not all the beasts." So they divided the land between them to pass throughout it; Ahab went one way by himself, and Obadiah went another way by himself.

And as Obadiah was in the way, behold, Elijah met him; and he knew him, and fell on his face, and said, "Is it thou, my lord Elijah?" And he answered him, "It is I; go, tell thy lord, 'Behold, Elijah is here.'" And he said, "Wherein have I sinned, that thou wouldest deliver thy servant into the hand of Ahab, to slay me? As the Lord thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom, whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee; and when they said, 'He is not here, he took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that they found thee not.' And now thou sayest, 'Go, tell thy lord, behold, Elijah is here.' And it will come to pass, as soon as I am gone from thee, that the Spirit of the Lord will carry thee whither I know not; and so when I come and tell Ahab, and he cannot find thee, he will slay me; but I thy servant fear the Lord from my youth. Was it not told my lord what I did when Jezebel slew the prophets of the Lord, how I hid a hundred men of the Lord's prophets by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water? And now thou sayest, 'Go, tell thy lord, behold, Elijah is here'; and he will slay me. And Elijah said, 'As the Lord of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, I will surely show myself unto him today.'"

So Obadiah went to meet Ahab, and told him; and Ahab went to meet Elijah. And it came to pass, when Ahab saw Elijah, that Ahab said unto him, "Is it thou, thou troubler of Israel?" And he answered, "I have not troubled Israel; but thou, and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord, and thou hast followed the Baalim. Now therefore send, and gather to me all Israel unto Mount Carmel, and the prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the prophets of the Asherah four hundred, that eat at Jezebel's table."

So Ahab sent unto all the children of Israel, and gathered the prophets together unto Mount Carmel. And Elijah came near unto all the people, and said, "How long go ye limping between the two sides? If the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him." And the people answered him not a word. Then said Elijah unto the people, "I, even I only, am left a prophet of the Lord; but Baal's prophets are four hundred and fifty men. Let them therefore give us two bullocks; and let them choose one bullock for themselves, and cut it in pieces, and lay it on the wood, and put no fire under; and I will dress the other bullock, and lay it on the wood, and put no fire under. And call ye on the name of your god, and I will call on the name of the Lord; and the God that answereth by fire, let him be God." And all the people answered and said, "It is well spoken."

And Elijah said unto the prophets of Baal, "Choose you one bullock for yourselves, and dress it first; for ye are many; and call on the name of your god, but put no fire under." And they took the bullock which was given them, and they dressed it, and called on the name of Baal from morning even until noon, saying, "O Baal, hear us." But there was no voice, nor any that answered. And they leaped about the altar which was made. And it came to pass at noon, that Elijah mocked them, and said "Cry aloud; for he is a god; either he is musing, or he is gone aside, or he is on a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth and must be awaked." And they cried aloud, and cut themselves after their manner with knives and lances, till the blood gushed out upon them. And it was so, when midday was past, that they prophesied until the time of the offering of the evening oblation; but there was neither voice, nor any to answer, nor any that regarded.

And Elijah said unto all the people, "Come near unto me"; and all the people came near unto him. And he repaired the altar of the Lord that was thrown down. And Elijah took twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the Lord came, saying, "Israel shall be thy name." And with the stones he built an altar in the name of the Lord; and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed. And he put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid it on the wood. And he said, "Fill four jars with water, and pour it on the burnt offering, and on the wood." And he said, "Do it the second time"; and they did it the second time. And he said, "Do it the third time"; and they did it the third time. And the water ran round about the altar; and he filled the trench also with water.

And it came to pass at the time of the offering of the evening oblation, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, "O Lord, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word. Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that thou, Lord, art God, and that thou hast turned their heart back again."

Then the fire of the Lord fell and consumed the burnt offering, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench. And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces; and they said, "Lord, he is God; Lord, he is God." And Elijah said unto them, "Take the prophets of Baal; let not one of them escape." And they took them; and Elijah brought them down to the brook Kishon, and slew them there.

Let me not stumble blindly down the ways,
Just getting somehow safely through the days,
Not even groping for another hand,
Not even wondering why it all was planned,
Eyes to the ground unseeking for the light,
Soul never aching for a wild-winged flight,
Please, keep me eager just to do my share.
God—let me be aware.

God—let me be aware.
Stab my soul fiercely with others' pain,
Let me walk seeing horror and stain.
Let my hands, groping, find other hands.
Give me the heart that divines, understands.
Give me the courage, wounded, to fight.
Flood me with knowledge, dredge me in light.
Please, keep me eager just to do my share.

RHEUMATISM AND BAD HEART.

It is commonly held that somewhere about one-half of all the heart disease occurring at all ages is the result of rheumatism or some kindred malady from which the person suffered in infancy. Somewhere about one-tenth of the heart disease is fatal in persons under forty years of age. Practically all of that group are caused by the various rheumatisms and near-rheumatisms of childhood.

Let us illustrate what we mean by near-rheumatisms. Scarlet fever is due to a coccus which is probably akin to that of rheumatism. Scarlet fever in children often results in the same kind of heart disease that follows rheumatism. On the other hand, the probability is that a heart attack during or following diphtheria will be acute; but, if the immediate trouble is recovered from, chronic heart trouble is not to be expected.

Rheumatism in children is not always easily recognized. We do not expect a joint to swell up typically as in old fashioned rheumatic fever. There may be sore throat, fever, and aching without much joint involvement. Some cases do not show anything more than sore throat. What most of us call growing pains is very apt to be rheumatism. Chorea, or St. Vitus dance, is another of the rheumatism kinsmen.

Dr. C. C. McLean says, "Every rheumatic child is a potential heart case," and with this most will agree cordially. In fact, the prevailing opinion is that the heart shows signs of pathology in rheumatism at the time of the attack as well as afterward, and that this is an essential feature in rheumatism.

There is evidence that in mild climates there is less heart disease, and certainly that less of the heart disease they have results from the diseases of childhood. For instance, in Oregon Dr. Coffen found that the children had very little rheumatism and that much of the heart disease among old residents could be charged up against sore throats, rheumatism, chorea, and growing pains in childhood. On the other hand, most of their heart disease is of the kind which accompanies arteriosclerosis in elderly people. An unusually high percentage of their heart disease is due to goiter, as was to be expected.

Physicians and health departments are trying to discover why children have rheumatism and heart disease; how much of a factor is cold, rain, humidity, lack of sunshine, type of housing, diet, complexion, body build. These questions have not been answered satisfactorily yet.

NO OBJECTION TO USE.

C. W. W. writes: I would appreciate your advice on psyllium seed. It is recommended for constipation. What damage or unfavorable feature is there, if any, in its daily use?

REPLY:

There is no objection to the continued use of this seed in the treatment of lazy colon.

IT IS NOT CONTAGIOUS.

S. S. writes: The other day my employer and I were in the uncomfortable position of helping an epileptic woman into the rear of the store. She had fallen into a fit and we wanted to get her away from other patrons. Was this harmful to us in any way? Her saliva did not come in contact with us. Would it be better, if possible, to take some preventive?

REPLY:

There is nothing you need do. Epilepsy is not contagious and the saliva is harmless.

RUBBERS AND SORE EYES.

G. R. writes: Does the wearing of rubbers in the house cause sore eyes? Practically every child in Chicago has been told that this is true. Some give doctors and some give teachers as their authority. What is your opinion?

REPLY:

No.

I doubt if doctors tell this to anybody. I am sure teachers would resent the charge. Possibly this is told as an April Fool joke.

POOL ROOM DISTURBS ROOMERS.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A pool room below my rooming house makes so much noise that I cannot keep roomers. Could I break my lease?

A. L. P.

There is no express time limit in our statutes or ordinances, but noises amounting to legal nuisances can be enjoined or if the facts amount to disorderly conduct can be stopped by the police. In determining whether a noise amounts to a nuisance the previous character of the neighborhood must be considered.

DEMOLISHING A "HAUNTED HOUSE."

Chicago, Jan. 23.—[Friend of the People.]—I wish to report the premises at 11935 Wallace street. The house at this number has been abandoned for more than five years. All the windows are broken, spouting is rotted, causing dripping of water and accumulation of ice in adjoining passageway, the yard is heaped with débris and the house is a rendezvous for rowdies and tramps. Could not something be done about this?

H. S.

Our district inspector reports that while the building is unsightly it is not in a dangerous condition.

The owner has been in Belgium for four years and there are no known relatives in this country. We understand the property has been sold for taxes. This department is trying to make arrangements to have the building repaired or demolished. The matter of the insanitary condition of the premises has been referred to the department of health.

Chicago, Jan. 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If a tenant slips and falls on the icy steps of an apartment building [due to negligence of janitor] and receives injuries, should the landlord be responsible for the doctor bill and the tenant's rent while he is unable to work?

J. B.

Yes, but in assuming the negligence of the janitor you are assuming the whole case. For example, failure to shovel off the front walk would not legally be negligence.

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 2, 1865.

WASHINGTON.—The courtroom that a few years ago heard the decision that "a Negro has no right which a white man is bound to respect" today witnessed the admission of a Negro as a counselor of the Supreme court. Senator Sumner brought him in and moved his admission. Chief Justice Chase directed the clerk to administer the oath and the whole ceremony that marked the practical reversal of the Dred Scott decision by the same tribunal that had pronounced it was over in three minutes. Judges Nelson, Wayne, and Grier, who united in rendering the Dred Scott decision, were on the bench but made no objection. The Negro is a full black and is a practicing lawyer of Massachusetts.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Immediately after the passage of the resolution in the senate and house today ratifying the amendment to the constitution forever prohibiting slavery in the United States, Gov. Richard J. Oglesby sent this telegram to President Lincoln: "The legislature of Illinois has, by a large majority, ratified the amendment to the constitution. We suppose you have signed the joint resolution of congress. Great enthusiasm prevails." Probably Illinois will prove to be the first state to ratify this second Magna Charta of human liberty. Glory be to God!

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Efforts to peacefully relieve Kentucky of its dual government by throwing the question into the courts to let them decide whether Gov. William S. Taylor, Republican, or Claimant William Goebel, Democrat, is the rightful and legal governor failed today. Circumstances now point to a contest of force. More militia and mountain men, the latter armed with rifles, are entering Frankfort to support Taylor's cause. Goebel partisans are organizing companies and regiments of volunteers in various sections of the state. An operation performed on Goebel for a kidney complication resulting from the wound inflicted by an assassin's bullet has not been satisfactory and his condition is reported as practically hopeless. Gov. Taylor appealed to President McKinley for official recognition by the national government as the rightful governor.

LONDON—The city is full of rumors again in the absence of any direct news from the South African war. One has it that Gen. Buller has again crossed the Tugela river and is now advancing by a new route to Ladysmith. Another insists that Buller is fighting again on the banks of the Tugela.

CHICAGO.—Terence McGovern of Brooklyn knocked out Eddie Santry of Chicago in four and one-half rounds with a blow on the jaw in their fight at Tattersall's last night.

WEDNESDAY.

Winnetka, Ill., Jan. 7.—For sixty years I have been an active printer. During all that time I have wondered why the English writing and printing public has encumbered itself with such an awkward word as Wednesday. There are hundreds of others as bad. Wednesday is pronounced Wensday, not Wed-nes-day, nor Wed-ens-day, as, occasionally, ignorant people pronounce it. The word is derived from the name of Woden, an old god now long dead. Why load down for all eternity the language with a word so awkward for the sake of commemorating a god so dead and so mythological? This is an age of utility, of labor saving tendencies. When a linotype operator comes to the end of a line and Wednesday looms up before him, he hasn't the time to fuss with respacing, so in it goes as Wed-nesday, a syllable split in two—an orthographical outrage. He is in a hurry, and doesn't give a cuss for lexicographers; so he rips the dead god up the back and helps get the paper out on time, as he should.

Now I suggest that from this time on, when the lino man comes to such a predicament, he celebrate his personal freedom and the eternal fitness of things by spelling the word phonetically—Wensday—and then spelling it always that way, whether at the end of a line or not. If the linotype operators and the proofreaders will do this in response to my suggestion, I will make my short journey to the crematory with a light heart when I have to make it, delighted that at least in one respect I have been a benefactor of the great branch of the human race to which I belong, and which, if it desires its language to become universal, must slough off a multitude of similarly useless crudities.

TAX FIXING.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—It is time that THE TRIBUNE or some one in authority investigate the associations and individuals who prey upon the small property owners and collect large fees upon the pretense that they are obtaining for them reductions in special assessments. NOT A SOUND INVESTMENT.

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 12.—Many natives and residents of Chicago feel reasonably assured that the 1930 census figures will show that the city will have a population of at least three and one-half million people. I, for one, do not believe that Chicago will reach the three and one-third million mark. Neither do I believe that Detroit's population will be at least two million, as many people predict.

I am writing this letter to try to save money for some of the readers of your paper who may feel inclined to place bets on the census figures and lose their wagers through not giving more careful study to the subject.

THE JOKE OF SAVAGES.

Mountain View, N. J., Jan. 17.—I am a subscriber to your paper although a long way from Chicago, chiefly for your fine editorials. Some day your masterly handling of prohibition will be productive of great good and you've fought a good fight for a long time before other papers had the courage to attack the problem. In time to come even the fanatics will concede prohibition a failure and that you fought a good fight.

We travel a great deal and know what a huge joke we are through the Volstead act. In 1928 in South Africa a half naked savage, working in the mines, said to me, in good English, "You live in America?" I replied, "Yes." He said, "You live where they don't drink but they get drunk just the same." Then he laughed. When we are the joke of savages we need to turn over a new leaf. MADGE L. PARISH.

IRRIGATING THE DES PLAINES.

Highland Park, Ill., Jan. 23.—I read Mr. Wagner's protest against a drainage channel in the center of the Des Plaines river. It seems to me such a method of taking care of the sewage of the districts west of our city, adjoining the river, would serve to destroy the beauty of the river and with that the beauty of the forest preserves through which the Des Plaines river flows.

It was in the beginning of the century that I discussed with Isham Randolph, the great engineer for the development of the drainage canal, some way of flooding the Des Plaines river during summer months. One way, was to buy up marsh lands in Wisconsin at the source of the river, to serve as a storage basin during the flood season, this water to be used during the summer for cleaning out the river. Another method was to pump water from Lake Michigan into the Des Plaines drainage basin during the dry seasons of the year. Since then farms have grown into villages and villages into towns, and the importance of a clean flow of water has grown with them.

Almost thirty years has passed since the initial studies of what later became the forest preserves of Cook county. What was suggested then is yet to be considered by the authorities in charge. I think the drainage board and the forest preserve commission should prevent any method that will destroy the beauty of the Des Plaines river valley. It is the only river valley we have close to the city. It is today a sanctuary of our native landscape. It is historic in its relation to early Chicago. It is therefore a sacrilege to destroy its natural beauty. JENS JENSEN.

GANG DRINKING.

Mishawaka, Ind., Jan. 23.—If 1,000,000 citizens should take a drink and plead guilty to a violation of the 18th amendment, what would the government do with us? We would all be guilty, but Uncle Sam would have to go some to lock us up. A new federal prison should be located at Miami or some other southern resort with golf links, bathing beaches, etc. As soon as the first million was disposed of the second million should step up to the bar, take a drink openly, plead guilty and then watch Uncle Sam do his stuff. If ten per cent of the population that is now drinking secretly would do so openly what would become of the 18th amendment? Why not organize the Take a Drink Club? O. H. DOWNEY.

BANK, FACTORY FIND NO PROFITS IN MAKING WAR

Lamont and Du Pont Give Views.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—President Hoover's campaign for naval reduction has the united support of the business men of America, Merle Thorpe, editor of the Nation's Business, asserted tonight in a radio address.

Mr. Thorpe read letters from two outstanding American business men, one an international banker and the other a munitions maker. Both asserted that the "popular notion" that business grows rich out of war and is indifferent to efforts to bring about peace "is an outrageous slander."

One of the letters was written by Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co. The other was sent to Mr. Thorpe by Pierre Du Pont, chairman of the board of E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. Both letters united in asserting that there is no group of men in America more anxious for the success of the present London conference than the business men.

Normalcy Best Hope.

The views of these two men were that business thrives best under normal, peaceful conditions and that any disturbance, such as a flood, a hurricane, a war, or even rumors of war, upsets business calculations and often results in bankruptcies.

Their expressed opinion was that big manufacturing companies thrive in spite of and not because of war.

"There is no slander quite so unfounded and outrageous as that to the effect that men of affairs, manufacturers, and bankers, are not averse to war because of the fancied or fleeting profits sometimes flowing from war," Mr. Lamont asserted. "No suggestion could be falser, more abhorrent than that.

"There is no group of men in the world more anxious for the success of the present London conference than the business men of America. From the material aspect, the reduction in armament means reduction in taxes. Reduction in tax burden is a help to all business, to wage earners fully as much as to employers."

Taxes Eat Up Profits.

Mr. Du Pont, whose companies manufactured large quantities of powder and munitions for the United States and the allies during the war, asserted that few munitions makers gain much financially from their operations. He asserted that in the case of the Du Pont company, taxes paid during the war years not only ate all the profits made on powder sold to the government, but wiped out profits made on the sale of powder during the preceding twenty years.

"The popular conception of a munitions maker is a sinister individual with a deep hatred for peace and a contempt for the pursuits thereof," Mr. Du Pont said. "He is pictured as doing all in his power to fan the flames of distrust between nations and to delight in the conflicts that ensue, since they create enormous and immediate profits for his corporation.

"He called this the popular conception of the munitions maker; in reality it is the popular misconception.

Record of Du Pont Company.

"Consider the Du Pont company, whose history is coincident in point of time with that of the United States. We have furnished a great part of the explosives used in all the wars in which the United States has engaged. Therefore we feel that our records should show conclusively what war will do for—and to—a maker of munitions.

"No munitions concern can live by war alone. During the 139 years of the existence of the United States as a nation, there were four major conflicts before the world war. They lasted about ten years in all, or about 7 per cent of the time. How could any independent corporation keep itself alive for 139 years by turning out a product that was only wanted ten years of the time."

Sees Good Business

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

On his way to Chandler, Ariz., for a two months' rest, Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the New York Life Insurance company, stated last night that January new business listed by his company reached $186,000,000, or $60,000,000 more than that noted in any other month in the company's history. Pressed for a reason for this large increase, Mr. Kingsley shrugged, smiled, and opined, "The agents worked like the devil!" The executive left at 8:30 on the Golden State Limited of the Rock Island railroad after a day spent in conferring with Chicago officials of his company. Former President Coolidge is one of the directors of the New York Life.

BOMB FOUND IN BRITISH MUSEUM; HINT INDIAN PLOT

LONDON, Feb. 1.—(AP)—A home made bomb with a fuse attached was discovered in the Indian room of the world famous British museum today.

Warned by a telephone call from a man who gave the name "All Khan" that Indian students had been overheard talking about a bomb in the Indian room, the museum officials found the explosive contraption wrapped in newspapers near the priceless collection of Indian exhibits.

Police cut away the fuse and took the bomb away for examination by experts. Officials said they could not be sure whether an attempt really had been made to blow up the museum or whether the museum authorities had been hoaxed.

Political feeling against Great Britain has been running high among Indian students in London, many of whom work in the museum. The struggle for independence in India has assumed a more determined aspect since the leaders of the Nationalist party decided recently to work for complete independence, by means of "civil disobedience," instead of for dominion status.

YOUTH HOLDS UP FATHER IN BANK; LOOT REGAINED

Confesses When Caught in Kentucky.

Rocky Hill, Ky., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Carl C. Spillman, 19, was placed in the county jail at Brownsville tonight after a day in which he had robbed his father, a bank cashier; fled with $2,239, told a long story of being enticed into the crime by two men, and then confessed and showed where he had hidden the money.

The youth, fleeing from Rocky Hill after holding up his father, Porter Spillman, 50, cashier and sole employé of the small bank here, was halted forty minutes after the robbery on the Green river bridge near Bowling Green by police from that town who were guarding the highway. A policeman recognized Spillman as the son of the cashier.

When several hundred dollars was found in the machine the youth confessed, but he told a story of having been in Indianapolis during the last ten days and said that two men had promised him $200 to show them an easy place to rob a bank.

He said he had not taken actual part in the robbery but that he and one man had sat in the machine while the other held up the elder Spillman. Later he admitted he had been alone and accompanying officers to a place on the highway 20 miles from here he showed where the remaining money lay under a pile of rocks, $2,185 in gold and silver coins and bills.

The elder Spillman, who was grief-stricken over the robbery, said that he had not recognized his son. He said a masked man entered the bank, pointed a pistol at him and forced him to lie face down on the counter while the money was taken.

FEAR EIELSON, BORLAND EATEN BY WILD BEASTS

NOME, Alaska, Feb. 1.—(AP)—Pilots of two Russian planes, who arrived at North cape, Siberia, to take more than a score of passengers off the ice bound ship Stavropol, have received new orders from Moscow to proceed to the wrecked American plane, 90 miles southeast of North cape, and to remain there until the bodies of the flyers, Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, have been found.

All Russian dog teams in the vicinity have been commandeered and today a number were rushing supplies to a temporary camp at the scene of the wreck, where a number of men have been digging in ice and snow for the last week in search of the bodies. Three American pilots and the Canadian flyer, Pat Reid, have also declared their intentions of remaining in Siberia until the remains of the flyers are recovered.

Because of the prevalence of wild animals in the region and the fact that the accident occurred nearly three months ago, belief is growing here among old Alaskan residents that the bodies may never be found. They are also convinced the two men could not possibly have gotten away from the wreck. Widely scattered parts of the plane indicated it crashed flying full speed.

A. E. Johnson, Engineer, Killed in Mine Accident

Word of the accidental death of A. E. Johnson, field superintendent for the Allen and Garcia company, consulting engineers of 332 South Michigan avenue, in Beckley, W. Va., was received in Chicago last night. The dispatches stated he had been killed in the shaft of a coal mine while atempting to rise from the bottom in a bucket, but no other details of the accident were given. Johnson's address was given as 2127 Englewood avenue. His body was held pending word from relatives here. The Allen and Garcia company are designers and builders of coal tipples.

Former Officer of Royal Flying Corps Wins Divorce

The Suters were married in London, Feb. 5, 1922. She is the daughter of Capt. Thomas Spicer, C. A., and said to be prominent in London society. Suter declared that his wife deserted him and their 22 months old son, Gerald, last July 15, to return to London. He is a bookkeeper in a La Salle street brokerage firm. Judge Lindsay awarded the father custody of the child.

Infinitely superior to any instrument method or other procedure and producing results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secure a lifetime as against further trouble or expense. TWO FORT WORTH BANKS ARE SHUT; DEPOSITS SAFE

Fort Worth, Tex., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Two Fort Worth banks whose deposits at the last bank call totaled $6,282,257 were "temporarily closed" today while the Fort Worth Clearing House association announced it was working out a plan "through which depositors may receive their deposits in full."

The institutions, closed by order of the Clearing House association and the board of directors, were the Texas National bank and its associate, the First State Bank of Polytechnic, a suburban section.

Crowds which gathered in front of the institutions as the report spread were assured by business men that their deposits were safe.

DEATH MYSTERY CLEWS TANGLED IN LOVE STORY

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 1.—[U. P.]—A house full of chemicals, retorts, and test tubes, the accusation of a dying man that he had been poisoned, a missing insurance policy, and the testimony of a woman made a tangle of clews tonight to the death of Verne Hogue, 46.

Hogue died last Wednesday in acute pain crying to physicians that some one had poisoned him. The resulting investigation disclosed that Hogue had been living with Mrs. Manette Moehl, 23, caring for her two small children, and that Ralph Townsend, a world war veteran, was secretly intimate with Mrs. Moehl.

Yesterday police searched Townsend's home and found a complete chemical laboratory. They also learned that the trio held a drinking party Monday night.

Meanwhile Mrs. Moehl in her cell at the city jail tearfully declared: "I know Verne was poisoned, but I didn't do it."

Trio Arrested After They Fire Guns at Foe's Home

Three armed youths last night fired a volley of revolver shots into the home of Frank Formanski, 21 years old, 1302 Wayne avenue, after an argument over the ownership of a watch. When neighbors' heads started popping out of windows the trio fled, one of them, Andrew Holas, 21 years old, 768 Milwaukee avenue, accidentally wounding himself in the leg. He and Walter Fairchild, 19 years old, 1260 North Wood street, who claimed a watch held by Formanski, and Stanley Papek, 17 years old, 1308 Crittenden avenue, were later arrested.

How Far Away Do You Live?

Long ago Hursen wiped out distance, in its relation to funerals. Before that, distance between the home and the "funeral establishment" was important. Today, and every day, Hursen demonstrates that distance away from any one of the 3 Hursen "funeral-homes" in Chicago is the least important factor to consider.

It is only an organization as "Hursen's" that can forget the question of distance. No day passes that a "Hursen" funeral is not seen even at as great a distance as 15 miles, either to the North, to the South or to the West. The reason for it is that there are thousands of families in every part of Chicago who will have no one but "Hursen."

There is a good reason, too, for this preference. It is in the unusual elegance of all Hursen funerals. It is in the usual method, in the unusual generosity of service, in the unequaled automobile equipment in automobiles and Hursen "limousine-hearses" that Hursen funerals excel, no matter whether the funeral be large or small.

"Hursen" Organ Chapels are the most beautiful ever built. There is no charge whatever for their use. "Hursen" automobile equipment, all specially built for "Hursen," are furnished at no greater cost than the usual auto hire.

There is another important factor. The cost of Hursen funerals is invariably less than the charges made elsewhere. Yet, quality is never sacrificed for price. It is this policy of giving the most for the least that has made "Hursen's" the largest and the greatest funeral establishment in America today. So, call Hursen, of course!

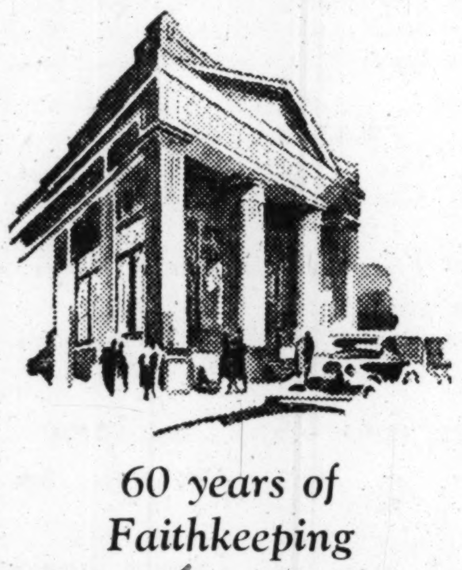
SKEELES-ROCKEFELLER



60 years of Faithkeeping

The conception of value is often lost when it comes to selecting the items for a funeral. It is difficult, under the circumstances, for the average person to know whether one charge or another is reasonable. The judgment must be based on the confidence that a family has in its funeral directors.

Through three generations, Skeeles-Rockefeller have proved worthy of the complete trust of the families they have served. A strict adherence to the highest standards has always been maintained. Thanks to our one complete charge plan, you know the entire cost of the funeral the minute the casket selection is made. The price marked on the casket covers every item, including the use of our two beautiful chapels . . . and that price is final.

North—South—wherever you live—Skeeles-Rockefeller are ready to serve you at any hour of the day or night. And when you call us, you can rest assured that we do everything humanly possible to relieve the family of all responsibility. A complete Skeeles-Rockefeller funeral can be obtained for as low as $125.

Every item in a Skeeles-Rockefeller funeral is included in one moderate charge. Two chapels, strategically located on the north and south sides, are easily accessible from any part of the city—conveniently reached by elevated, surface lines or bus. Wherever you live our service is available.

BISHOP'S FURS FOR FEBRUARY

We are making this most unusual reduction on all our fur coats because at this time of the year we always purchase a year's supply of raw fur pelts from the trappers in the country, and it takes a large amount of ready cash. Consequently, it is financially good business to sell what we have in made up merchandise in order to make these purchases possible.

When you consider that most of our present showing, which is of the proper silhouette and length, were made in the Fall, you can readily see what an advantage it is to you to be able to buy The Old Reliable Bishop quality and style at these remarkable and genuine price concessions. . . . they are priced in plain figures and you take off the one-third reduction at the time of purchase. These coats were not made for sale purpose but are the ones which have made this house famous for fine furs properly made, lined, and reasonably priced at all times. . . . All sizes from 4 to 50 but not in all furs.

No C. O. D.'s, approvals, or refunds during February. Compare these unusual values and be convinced.

GEMS IN VAULT RECALL FAMOUS WITCHES STORY

'Bathtub Murder,' Black Magic of Long Ago.

Murfreesboro, Tenn., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—They found the diamonds of the three witches of Murfreesboro in a bank vault here yesterday and tonight the Main street merchant, the members of the Kiwanis club in biweekly session, and the stay at homes of this southern town where James K. Polk found his bride and practiced law, are talking of nothing else.

Every town has its favorite story of black magic. The favorite mystery saga of Murfreesboro is the tale of the Wardlaw sisters, prominent as educators and leaders in church work. Their lives here some twenty years ago became shrouded in deeds real or imagined as dark as the fabric of Poe's murder mysteries. Murfreesboro parents, passing a certain dilapidated old house, still point it out to their children, and whisper: "The home of the three witches."

And even if mention of the three witches of Murfreesboro fails to arouse the memory of Chicagoans, readers of unsolved murder mysteries may place them under a different setting.

Remember Bathtub Murder?

A quarter of a century ago the press of the country was full of the story of the "Bathtub Murder." A beautiful young woman had been found drowned in a dingy house in the outskirts of East Orange, N. J. Three women, one of them the mother, the other two the aunts of the bathtub victim, were tried for the alleged murder. The mother was found insane and placed in a New Jersey asylum where subsequently she died.

One of the aunts, a Wellesly graduate and former president of a famous southern girl's seminary, Soule college, located here, died of self-starvation in the Essex county jail while awaiting trial and another aunt was acquitted. She since has died.

The trio of sisters accused of the murder were Miss Virginia Wardlaw, ex-president of the girls school, Mrs. Caroline Martin and Mrs. Mary Snead. All had been residents of Murfreesboro where they began the practice of what their neighbors called "black magic." Mrs. Martin it was who died in the asylum, Miss Wardlaw was the victim of the jail starvation, and Mrs. Snead was the aunt freed.

Old Gems Sewed in Mitten.

The Bathtub victim was Mrs. Ocey Martin Snead, niece and daughter-in-law of Mrs. Mary Snead.

The finding of the diamonds turned back the pages of Murfreesboro memory. A reporter on the Murfreesboro News Banner brought the diamond find to light when he overheard John Butler, president of the First National bank, discussing the problem of finding a keeper for the diamonds. Butler had found them, sewed inside a black mitten in a safety deposit vault rented years ago by Miss Virginia Wardlaw, the college president. The reporter broadcast the news of the find. And now the search is on for an heir. But that is inconsequential to the story of witchcraft the diamonds unloosed.

Strange Stories Retold.

Here are a few of the tales Murfreesboro folks are telling and believing tonight, though the stories are apocryphal and unproven:

"The three sisters, their reason unhinged by the study of New Salem witchcraft, began the practice of weird rites in 1903. They discarded all but black clothing. They veiled their faces in black veils; they visited the Murfreesboro cemetery in the black of night to chant hymns. They shuttered the windows of their home so that no ray of light pierced the gloom for years.

"They crazed Wardlaw Snead, son of Mrs. Mary Snead, and forced him to end his life on a kerosene pyre as a flaming sacrifice to the god of darkness; they caused the death of their father, Capt. John Wardlaw, by 'dark practices'; they murdered Col. Martin, husband of one of the sisters, and they capped their life by murdering their niece in a bathtub in New Jersey."

The death of Ocey Martin Snead is the one story of record. The other stories, of course, are unproven, but common talk in Murfreesboro.

Always a New Feature.

Every one has a new and grewsome bit of black magic to ascribe to the three sisters. After the telling, each narrator shakes his head and adds: "It's the gospel truth, them women was witches."

Thus has the finding of diamonds sewed inside of a black mitten in a bank vault in this old southern town unloosed a new chapter in the almost forgotten lore of witchcraft.

FLYNN RESIGNS AS TEAMSTERS' UNION DICTATOR

John W. "Skinny" Flynn, secretary-treasurer of the Excavating and Asphalt Teamsters' union, yesterday resigned as boss of the organization. It was learned the resignation of Flynn was handed in by request.

Flynn succeeded Edward Coleman, who was murdered in his office at 184 West Washington street on the afternoon of April 22, 1920. Since assuming leadership Flynn has dictated the terms under which loop buildings were wrecked and the by-laws of the excavating teamsters' union confine this loop work to four favorite wrecking firms. It is said that certain wreckers underbidding a favored group would find themselves with the bid and no workmen.

CONTINUES PLEA FOR ANNULMENT ON TIPSY CHARGE

Mrs. Nettie Schmid, 3421 North Ridgeway avenue, yesterday appeared before Superior Judge Sabath to demand annulment of her marriage to Edward W. Schmid, a structural ironworker. The judge continued the case to make an investigation after Mrs. Schmid admitted that she had answered fifteen questions asked by the officiating justice of the peace before the ceremony was performed. She declared that she was intoxicated.

Mrs. Schmid was married Aug. 24, 1928, in Wheaton. She said that Schmid was only a casual acquaintance when he called at her home and took her to his home. There, she testified, Schmid plied her with wine, which she believed to be drugged, and threatened to kill her unless she married him. She admitted she had answered all questions put to her by the justice.

"You could have avoided the marriage if you had spoken up," the judge said. "The story of the drugged wine looks rather weak. I will continue this for more evidence."

CONVICTS STAB 'SNITCH' DURING PRISON BLAZE

Guards Avert New Riot at Colorado Pen.

Canon City, Colo., Feb. 1.—[U.P.]—The Colorado state penitentiary, where thirteen were killed last October in one of the wildest prison riots in the nation's history, was the scene of a disastrous fire today.

While the flames raged, convicts took advantage of the confusion to attack Daniel Reardon, one of the convicts who helped the prison authorities in the October mutiny. He received a deep stab wound in the body, but will live.

Reardon was one of thirty-five prisoners who were rewarded recently by Gov. W. H. Adams for their services in the October outbreak. He received a reduction of 100 days in his sentence:

Daniel Reardon claimed tonight that he was attacked while blocking the attempt of a group of prisoners to make a break for liberty under cover of today's fire, but Warden Francis E. Crawford attributed the stabbing to the grudge of the other prisoners against Reardon.

Three other convicts were slightly injured in fighting the fire.

The situation was tense within the prison walls when the fire started. The menace of another prison mutiny was uppermost in the minds of guards.

Warden Crawford said guards were sent to man machine guns on the walls, ready to sweep the courtyard at the first threat of an outbreak. Members of the Canon City howitzer company of the Colorado National Guard were mobilized outside the walls, ready to aid, if necessary.

An alarm brought firemen from Canon City and soon seven lines of hose were playing streams of water on the blazing structure.

Fifteen thousand dollars' worth of clothing and supplies were consumed in the fire, which destroyed the building housing the carpenter and tailor shops. Damage to the building was not estimated. It was one of the structures damaged in the fire that attended the October prison mutiny and had only recently been repaired by convict labor.

SAMOA, CRUSHED BY NEW ZEALAND, CRIES FOR U. S.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

APIA, British Samoa, Feb. 1.—A month has passed; the graves of the victims all are marked; but there is one certain result of the tragedy of Dec. 28. The desire of all Samoans for independence has been cemented. Tamasese, their tribal leader, their virtual king, their national hero, lies in his tomb. He now rests in the memory of all his people as the father of his country. By his death, the cry for independence has grown by leaps and bounds.

Already the day of Tamasese's death has become a national holiday. The name is Black Saturday: the Massacre of Apia Beach. And even though rough ridden by the New Zealand mandators, ignored by the league of nations, their petition for direct admission to the British empire as a crown colony rejected, the residents of western Samoa have resumed their peaceful ways and await the day when they can come under the American flag through their own petition.

Realize It Will Be Long Wait.

They realize that they may have a long wait; that the people of the great western world are passively indifferent, but already there are more American than British flags flying in Apia, and the Samoan chieftains themselves say that when their petition is definitely turned down by the king and privy council, because of the delicate position of Britain with reference to New Zealand, which is a crown colony itself, they are willing and eager to draw deeds of cession to the United States, just as the people of eastern Samoa did at Tutuila a third of a century ago and are more proud of this than of any other action in their history.

One paragraph sums up the situation and the contention of the people, and this is confirmed by foreigners, including the British and even the New Zealanders. It can be best stated thus: New Zealand as a mandator is treating the Samoans as a conquered people. Eighty per cent of the people of New Zealand have taken no notice of the Samoan question, being self-centered in their home problems.

Samoan a Superior Man.

New Zealanders say the Samoan is a far superior man in every respect to the Maori. Unbiased world travelers and students have gone so far as to state that the Samoan is superior to the Hawaiian and the Filipino and to the greatest extent of any peple in the south seas has maintained the purity of his race, the kindliness of his nature and a courtesy exceeding that of the white man. In fact, all that Stevenson wrote of him seems true.

The Samoans always have had a great belief in British justice; but now they openly say the treatment New Zealand has given them is so bad they cannot stand it any longer. For several years they have been making comparisons with the benign treatment being given by the American naval occupation in eastern Samoa.

Samoans Cite U. S. War.

The Samoans refer to the American war of independence, to the Boston tea party, and to the laying down of America's constitutional principle of no taxation without representation. Any student of a junior high school in America will be able to appreciate the position of the Samoan.

Since the mandated period, the people's money has been wasted, and, in addition to some thousands of pounds left on hand when Germany was ousted, further thousands of pounds have been borrowed from New Zealand and it is all gone. In November, 1928, the New Zealand government sent financial agents to review the situation. This report is in itself an indictment.

The New Zealand Samoan Defense league sent an appeal, in which the charges of misfeasance, malfeasance, and violation of Samoan women and children of both sexes are too shocking for publication. The final sentence is this query: "Can we be surprised at the Samoans en masse resisting administration of this kind?"

STEALS MAN'S CLOTHES.

After a gunman had robbed Lawrence Fosse, 2619 Blaine avenue, a cab driver, of $6 at Wood and Division streets early yesterday, he forced Fosse to undress and walked away with his clothing, leaving the cab driver clad only in his underwear.

with a larger, longer, roomier car . . . with even faster speed . . . with greater power . . . with quicker get-away . . . also challenges in good looks —in real values—in reliability and in price . . .

The NEW ESSEX Challenger

The common exclamation of everyone when he has ridden in the new Essex Challenger is: "How did you do it! How do you get this greater power and faster get-away! How do you get this speed?"

"My Essex the Challenger is a wonder—but, man, this is a revelation."

It is a new Essex Challenger from front end to tail light. It is a longer, larger car. The Super-Six motor is made smoother and given a wider performance range. The motor retains every advantage you know in economy and long life. The car must please you in every way. It is so distinctly modern in all the things that count that you must want to own it.

The bodies are roomy. Three won't crowd the rear seat. There is room for your hat. You don't have to squeeze into the driver's seat. The clutch and brakes operate at the slightest foot pressure. Proper balance and mechanism make it easy to steer.

It doesn't look like any other car. The radiator is different. The fenders are different and the wide variety of colors gives each owner practically individual choice.

And in price it challenges. When you know what the Essex Challenger is, you won't be content with any less comfortable—less good-looking—more common car. You will know what smoothness means. You will understand the meaning of relaxed driving.

This sweeping challenge is for you to know the facts. It is for you to know that a thoroughbred automobile is available at a price all can afford.

Advantages that Challenge

- Greater Power—Faster Speed—Quicker Get-Away—Added Economy.
- Smoother Performance at all Speeds.
- Even Greater Choice of Colors.
- Four Two-Way Shock Absorbers.
- Richer Upholstery, Harmonizing Hardware.
- Larger, Finer, Roomier Bodies.
- Radiator Shutters, Electrolock, Starter on Dash, Electric Fuel and Oil Gauge.
- Newly Designed Radiator, Fenders, Body Lines and Body Mouldings.
- Glare-Proof Rear-View Mirror.
- Disappearing Rear-Window Curtain.

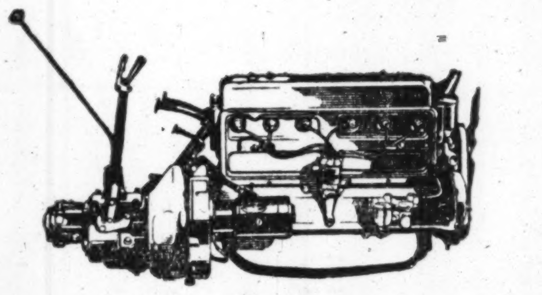
Greater Beauty - Finer Performance

BODY by FISHER

Year after year, Chevrolet has brought to the low-price field a constantly increasing measure of beauty and style—but never has a Chevrolet car won greater praise for its appearance than the new Chevrolet Six. Its new Fisher bodies reveal in every detail the artistry that has made the Fisher name famous throughout the motor car world. In beauty of line and color, in balance and harmony of design, they represent one of the greatest style triumphs in Fisher history. And the promise of this exterior beauty is more than fulfilled when you look inside the car. Upholsteries are richer and more durable, and have been carefully chosen to harmonize with the prevailing body colors. The hardware is an exclusive pattern by Ternstedt. The instrument panel carries a new and more attractive grouping of the control instruments. Seats are wider and deeper. The steering wheel has been lowered to provide a more restful driving position. In fact, not a single feature has been overlooked that would add to the comfort and convenience of both driver and passengers.



In addition to its new beauty, the new Chevrolet Six represents a remarkable advance in every phase of performance. Its improved six-cylinder valve-in-head engine has been increased to 50 horsepower—giving faster acceleration, greater reserve energy and more comfortable high speeds. A heavier crankshaft, bronzed bushed pistons and more positive lubrication of the main bearings result in unusually quiet operation. Steering has been made safer and easier by a new front axle assembly. Four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers provide exceptional riding comfort—as well as greater roadability under every condition. Fully-enclosed, internal-expanding, weather-proof brakes give positive braking control. And numerous structural improvements—such as a heavier and stronger rear axle, and a sturdier drive shaft—add to the car's dependability, endurance and long life. Come in today and see this car. And remember, as you admire its new beauty and check its new features, it is available—

PRIMATE BURIED AS THRONGS PAY FINAL TRIBUTES

Church Leaders at Rites for Bishop Anderson.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

The Most Rev. Charles Palmerston Anderson, late primate of the American Episcopal church and for 25 years the bishop of Chicago, was buried after simple funeral services at St. James' cathedral yesterday morning. Bishop Anderson died at his home at 4512 Drexel boulevard on Thursday morning of heart disease.

There was no eulogy. The presence of the silent crowds within the cathedral, as well as those who were unable to gain entrance to the edifice, paid more eloquent tribute to the bishop than oratory could have given.

Mourners in Procession.

At 10:30 o'clock the long procession formed at the cathedral parish house, while the great organ softly played Handel's "Dead March." Thirty seminarians from the Western Theological seminary, Evanston, followed the crucifer. More than a score of visiting priests from other dioceses, together with 130 diocesan clergy, entered the cathedral two abreast. The pallbearers formed the next unit.

Following a third crucifer, the clergy directly assisting in the service entered the cathedral. They were: The Rev. Dr. Edwin J. Randall, executive secretary of the diocese; the Rev. Gerald G. Moore, rector of the Church of the Advent, and secretary of the diocesan convention; the Rev. Dr. George H. Thomas, rector of St. Paul's church; the Rev. J. Herbert Edwards, dean of the northern convocation; the Very Rev. Duncan H. Browne, dean of St. James cathedral; and the Rt. Rev. Sheldon M. Griswold, acting bishop of Chicago and celebrant at the Eucharist.

Bishops in Procession.

Fourteen bishops of the Episcopal church and the Rt. Rev. Bishop Philateros, head of the Greek Orthodox church in America, with four of his clergy, were next to enter the cathedral, while to the Rt. Rev. Hugh Latimer Burleson, bishop of South Dakota and assessor to the late primate, was given the ecclesiastical precedence at the end of the procession, which more than reached around the historic cathedral.

As Bishop Burleson entered, he began to read the funeral sentences of the Episcopal church.

"I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die."

Then the great congregation sang one of Bishop Anderson's favorite hymns—"Ancient of Days." After St. James choir sang the 39th and 129th psalms set to ancient Anglican plain song, the Rev. Dr. Thomas read the lesson from the eighth chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Romans.

Bishop Griswold then began the requiem Eucharist, assisted by Deans Edwards and Browne, the Rev. Dr. Randall and the Rev. Mr. Moore.

Temporary interment was made in a vault in Rosehill cemetery. The words of committal were read by Bishop Griswold. On Feb. 24 the final burial will be made at the Anderson Memorial chapel of the Western Theological seminary, Evanston.

Want Election in Spring.

The diocese of Chicago has cabled Bishop A. W. Leonard of Ohio, senior bishop of the Episcopal church, who is now on his way to Bermuda, inviting him to call a special meeting of the house of bishops in Chicago in the spring, when Bishop Anderson's successor will be elected.

Diocesan clergymen seem to be virtually unanimous in the belief that the diocesan convention, which opens Tuesday should elect a diocesan bishop for Chicago at once. Bishop Anderson's death has eliminated all party lines, it is said.

Simple Funeral Held for Episcopal Primate

School Board President Is Charged with Theft

Pontiac, Mich., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Otto Sachse, bank vice president, millionaire real estate man, and president of the Pontiac school board in 1928, was arraigned in Municipal court today on charges involving theft of $15,000 from the school board. He was released under bail of $10,000 and his examination set for next Wednesday.

C. E. Keye, president of the Peoples' State bank, of which Sachse is vice president, announced that Sachse has tendered his resignation.

COMPANY OFFERS POWER RATE CUT IN GARY DISPUTE

Settlement of a dispute of eight months' standing between the Gary Heat, Light and Water company and patrons of the utlity in Gary, Ind., was indicated yesterday when E. J. Buffington of Chicago, president of the Illinois Steel company and the Gary utility, appeared before a Gary citizens' committee. The committee, which had planned to appeal to the Indiana public service commission for a lower electric current rate, decided to hold their plan in abeyance when Mr. Buffington proposed a new rate schedule for all classes of consumers excepting householders, and promised the latter class would also receive consideration for a rate adjustment.

MR. GROUNDHOG LIKELY TO ORDER AN EARLY SPRING

If the groundhog lives up to tradition and makes his customary sally out of his hole this morning it is highly probable that he will decide that winter should be somewhere near its close and that spring should be around the corner. The official weather forecast for today is cloudy, possibly rain, and rising temperature. A hint that spring may not be so far away was given yesterday when the temperature climbed above the freezing point for the first time in three weeks, ushering in what appeared to be a meek and mild February. The government weather table showed only one zero temperature in the United States, at Duluth, Minn.

I. C. C. EXAMINES UNION OF RADIO AND PHONE CO.'S

J. P. Morgan's Role in Deal Investigated.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Investigation of correspondence relating to the proposed merger of the communications facilities of the Radio Corporation of America with the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation to ascertain what part J. P. Morgan & Co. played in the negotiations was begun today by the senate interstate commerce committee.

The correspondence was turned over to the committee by Sosthenes Behn, chairman of the Telegraph Corporation, who denied that the Morgan banking firm had "brought pressure to bear" in favor of the merger.

Denies Any Match-Making.

Referring to the Radio corporation as "our fiancee," Behn said the Morgan firm "had never indicated to us that marriage was even desirable."

At an executive session this afternoon, the committee decided unanimously to turn the correspondence over to attorneys for the telegraph company and committee counsel to determine what part was relevant. Behn then will be recalled, probably next week, for further questioning.

Says Young "Won Out."

A tentative agreement has been reached between the two companies whereby the communication facilities of the Radio corporation will be purchased for stock in the International Telephone and Telegraph valued at the present market price at about $78,000,000, and with a par value of $40,000,000. At the time the merger was proposed last summer the market price of the stock was about $100,000,000.

Behn said he had opposed the price desired by Owen D. Young, then chairman of the board of the Radio corporation, but added that Young "won out."

"I came to the conclusion," he said, "that the purchase price was a price we could afford to pay to complete our cycle. I tried to get it cheaper. I always do."

Killed by Elevated Train as He Leans Over Platform

Samuel Dreyer, 62 years old, 1215 Lunt avenue, a clothing manufacturer, was injured fatally yesterday when struck by an elevated train at the Morse avenue station. Dreyer was standing on the platform and had leaned over the edge just as the train rolled up. He was hurled backward against a crowd waiting for the train. He was taken to the Rogers Park hospital, where he died several hours later.

Titled British Shop Girl to Wed

Worked in U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 1.—This cold and drizzly February day set a record for marriages that the balmiest June day might envy. The most brilliant of them all was that of Lady Margaret Douglas-Hamilton, second daughter of the duke of Hamilton, and James Richardson Drummond-Hay.

At the same time another titled engagements was announced, that of Lady Doris Hope, the eldest daughter of the duke of Newcastle, to Freddie Childs, a member of a well known Shropshire family. Lady Doris is the girl who achieved fame a year ago when it was discovered that she was working as a salesgirl in a New York department store under the name of "Miss Hope" at a salary of $25 a week. She gave up her place on account of resultant publicity.

Today's matrimonial news also contained the name of Flight Lieutenant D'Arcy Greig, a member of the Schneider cup team, who celebrated his 30th birthday by marrying Lorna Dean.

GROWTH OF ICE GORGE IN WABASH RIVER WATCHED

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—The ice gorge in the lower Wabash river today was under constant observation by flood relief workers. It starts near Mackey's Ferry and continues eight miles upstream, and is growing larger.

Thomas Rowe and Robert Vines narrowly escaped death when, in returning from a visit to the overflow district of Illinois, their light skiff was caught in floating ice and carried almost to the gorge before they could pull into open water.

Relief workers today reported all marooned families here provided for and additional relief work is planned by airplane.

Mrs. Charles Holtzclaw, who unattended gave birth to a child in a barn near New Haven, was reported recovering today.

GIRL, 12, KILLED BY AUTO; DRIVER MAKES ESCAPE

Two deaths yesterday raised the 1930 Cook county auto toll to 56.

Anistasia Warren, 12 years old, was killed when she was struck by a hit-and-run automobile as she was crossing the street in front of her home at 3416 Wallace street. According to witnesses, the car, a blue sedan, was traveling at a high speed and sped away before its license number could be obtained.

Victor Carlson, 43 years old, 1307 Roscoe street, was fatally injured at Ashland avenue and 37th street when he was struck by an automobile driven by Edward Whisler, 5031 North Avers avenue. Whisler was held.

FORESTRY SERVICE OF U. S. CELEBRATES ITS 25TH BIRTHDAY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Veteran forestry workers and conservationists commemorated the 25th anniversary of the United States forest service at exercises here today.

Clifford Pinchot, first chief of the service, in a radio address said the forests of America "were never more in peril than at this moment."

"There is not one state in the Union where new growth of timber equals the drain on the forests," he said. "Fires, due in large part to forest devastation, have already increased to something like 200,000 a year."

BANKERS SUED FOR LIBEL BY COMPANY HEAD

New York, Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Eric P. Swenson, president of the Freeport-Texas company, brought suit in the Supreme court today against the investment banking firm of John L. Williams & Sons of Richmond, Va., for $1,000,000 for libel because of alleged false statements in letters, telegrams and circulars to officers and stockholders of the Sulphur Producing company impugning the good faith of Mr. Swenson in his acts as president and charging that he was working in the interest of himself and his family.

One allegation is that on Oct. 16, 1928, the Williams firm wrote A. W. Jenkins, a director of the company, accusing Mr. Swenson of "lack of frankness and fair dealing" toward the stockholders.

NEGRO LYNCHED FOR SLAYING OF WHITE GIRL, 14

Ocilla, Ga., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Overpowering Sheriff W. C. Tyler and his deputies early today, a mob of 500 men took Jimmy Levine, Negro, from the officers and lynched him ten miles from town. The Negro had been arrested about an hour before at Mystic, Ga., for attacking and slaying a 14 year old white girl.

Sheriff Tyler, who was roughly handled by 25 or 30 members of the mob when he resisted their efforts to remove the prisoner from his automobile, tonight said he had made little headway in investigating the affair. He expected to be joined tomorrow by Roy Foy of Sylvester, solicitor general for this district, when efforts probably will be made to identify some of the members of the mob.

The mob met the officers in the center of town, and with the prisoner in their hands, they sat out for the scene of the crime.

Later the body was found on a blazing pyre of logs. Reports said the Negro was beaten and his throat cut, after which the pyre was built. The logs and the Negro's clothing were saturated with gasoline and a match applied.

Sheriff Tyler said the Negro had confessed to committing the crime.

The girl, daughter of a planter, was attacked and slain near her home yesterday and her body was found in a creek nearby. More than 1,000 men joined in the search for the Negro last night.

PORTO RICO GIRLS STUDY THEIR A B C TO WIN 1932 VOTE

Feminist Gets Up Course to Teach Use of Ballot.

BY HARWOOD HULL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Feb. 1.—To learn how to vote intelligently when they get their first ballot in 1932, leaders of the feminist movement in Porto Rico have enrolled at the University of Porto Rico for a special course on practical government. When the course was offered it was stated the class would be limited to 30, none of whom were to be university students. Before the lectures commenced the demand for admission was so great that the limit restriction was removed and a second group, for university women only, was organized.

Porto Rico is the first country in Latin America to grant votes to women. Practically all the women enrolled in the first course had been active in the campaign to win the ballot for their sex.

Law Insists on Literacy.

Since the first election following the American occupation Porto Rico has had universal male suffrage. At the last election, in 1928, the voters were about equally divided between literate and illiterate, with the percentage of new voters presenting themselves for registration increasingly literate. The new election law provides that new voters, both men and women, must be able to read and write.

One of the first spontaneous responses of prospective women voters was the offer of leading feminists to teach illiterate women how to read, to do everything, in fact, to wipe out illiteracy before the 1932 election.

While in rural Porto Rico the status of women has changed less noticeably than in the towns and cities the last 30 years has brought many new opportunities to island women. Only since the United States acquired the island have women gone into business. Now San Juan stores are filled with girls and women as clerks. There are some three thousand women school teachers in the island. Many others are in government and private employment. There are several successful women doctors, a few women lawyers, while scores of women drive their own cars—unchaperoned.

Follows Father's Footsteps.

The idea of a special course in government was conceived by Mrs. Pilar Barbosa de Rosario, herself an ardent feminist and the daughter of the late José Celso Barbosa, who for more than 25 years was a leader in the island's Republican party. A graduate of the medical school of the University of Michigan, Dr. Barbosa declined to seek American citizenship while a student in the United States, but preferred to return to the island and wait for the time when Porto Rico should become a part of the United States. During the Spanish-American war he served as an officer of the Spanish Red Cross. Before his death he was honored by every President from McKinley to Wilson. When an elective senate was established he was chosen senator-at-large.

Among those enrolled in the course in government are Dr. Marta Robert, Republican committeewoman for Porto Rico, and Mrs. Isabel Andreu de Aguilar, first woman member of the board of trustees of the university and recently elected vice president of the board. Others in the class are equally representative of the feminist activities in the island.

There has developed a demand for the course by mail and to an extent this is being met by supplying those who request it a written outline of the lectures and references.

MELLON PROPOSES INCREASE IN GUARD OVER WHITE HOUSE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Increased police protection should be thrown about the lives of those living in the White House in the opinion of both President Hoover and Secretary Mellon, and today the treasury head so recommended to congress.

In a message sent to the Capitol, Mellon urged legislation that would increase the detail of 35 privates and four sergeants to 43 privates, a captain, a lieutenant, and three sergeants, and would place this entire guard around the chief executive under the chief of the secret service division of the treasury.

"The President believes," Secretary Mellon wrote, "that in the interest of good administration, the control and direction of the White House police should be vested in the chief of the secret service division of this department, as that division is charged with the protection of the President and his family and the person elected to be President."

Grady, president of the concern, and Stanley Lorenz, the cashier.

CHIEF OF AUSTRIA SEEKS PACT WITH DUCE, IS REPORT

On Way to See Mussolini and Pope Pius.

BY ROBERT SAGE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Feb. 1.—Interest has been aroused in international political circles concerning the forthcoming visit to Rome of Johann Schober, Austria's chancellor. He will arrive in the Italian capital Tuesday, and will devote the remainder of the week to conversations with Premier Mussolini and Pope Pius XI.

Contrary to reassurances handed out by the Socialist press in Vienna, it is now know that one purpose of the chancellor's trip is to discuss the question of Facism with its founder.

Sympathizes with Fascists.

Just how far Chancellor Schober hopes to go in making a rapprochment between the Austrian Heimwehr and the Italian Fascists is a matter of speculation. However, it is no secret that his sentiments have long been with the Austrian Fascists, and well informed observers here believe he will take advantage of the present occasion to fortify Fascism's position against the Socialists in Austria.

From a religious point of view, Chancellor Schober's trip is just as important as from the political standpoint. He intends to readjust Catholic Austria's relations with the holy see. Austria is at the present time bound to the vatican by a concordat signed by Emperor Francis Joseph and Pope Pius IX. on the emperor's birthday in 1855. This concordat, which was framed after three years of indefatigable endeavor and which is strongly tinged with "Hapsburg Caesarism," has never been entirely satisfactory to Rome and it is believed that a revised understanding between the church and the Austrian state would greatly improve the situation.

Will Take Up Minority Question.

The ostensible purpose of Chancellor Schober's trip is to thank the Italian government for the part it played during the second Hague conference in removing difficulties which blocked Austria's long needed loan. It is even possible that the chancellor may request better terms.

The final item on Chancellor Schober's heavily charged program is the settlement of the minority question. According to reliable information, he intends to take up the south Tyrol problem with Premier Mussolini. He hopes to settle the question definitely to the mutual satisfaction of both countries.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 1.—(AP)—An explosion, believed to have been caused by escaping gas, today brought death to a family or four at North Braddock, a suburb. The victims were Mr. and Mrs. James Wolford and their children, Jack, 5, and Lucille, 3.

SLANDER SUIT OF WARREN TO REOPEN MONDAY

Rockford, Ill., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Retrial of the slander suit brought by John A. Logan Warren, unfrocked Methodist minister, against five church members whom he blamed for his dismissal from the Durand, Ill., Methodist church, will open in Circuit court here Monday. Warren won a $20,000 verdict at the first trial, in November.

The defendants are Postmaster George Fritz; Albert E. Swinson, bank president; Henry Graham, Edgar Best, and Judd Van Sickle. Circuit Judge Arthur E. Fisher set aside the first verdict in December on the ground that there were errors in the trial judge's charge.

Interest in the second trial centers in Mrs. Hazel Lamb Lathery of Kansas City, Kas. Warren was unfrocked because, it was alleged, his relations with her had been improper while she was a maid in his parsonage in 1926. The defense tried to persuade her to come to Rockford to testify against Warren in the first trial. She refused. Now, however, it is said she has consented to testify.

Albanian Army Chief Denies Illness of King Zog

VIENNA, Feb. 1.—(AP)—Gen. Von Mirdatsch, chief of the general staff of the Albanian army, has informed Viennese newspapers from Tirana that King Zog is in the best of health. He stated that reports the king was suffering from various diseases including tuberculosis and cancer were unfounded.

ENDS LIFE BY LEAPING FROM WINDOW IN LOOP

Rollo H. Snow, 52 years old, 9111 South Marshfield avenue, committed suicide yesterday by jumping from the nineteenth floor of the Steger building and landing on the roof of the adjoining Ampico hall building at 234 South Wabash avenue.

Snow's permanent home was in Reading, Mich., and his wife, Mrs. Theresa Snow, was notified by the police of her husband's death. According to F. C. Nelson, 1702 West 82nd street, a son-in-law, Snow was fairly well to do and recently took over an important sales territory for the A. Nash company of Cincinnati.

Nelson stated to the police that Snow had only roomed at the Marshfield avenue address and that he traveled constantly and visited his home in Michigan every two weeks. He said Snow had no domestic troubles but had been ill for some weeks. Police were convinced that Snow had committed suicide as they found the washroom window on the nineteenth floor of the Steger building raised and imprints of rubbers on the window sill.

Apologizes for Accident, Steals Judge's Overcoat

While Judge Herbert G. Immenhausen of the Municipal court was dining with his wife, his son, and a friend in a loop restaurant early yesterday, a diner leaving a neighboring table upset a coat rack beside the judge's table. The man righted the rack, apologizing profusely, but when Judge Immenhausen started to leave, he discovered his overcoat was gone. In its place was a shabby coat about six sizes too small.

ARMY TO STATION ANTI-PLANE UNIT AT FT. SHERIDAN

Crack Regiment Will Be Used for Training.

Washington, D. C. Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Chicago's importance as an air center is to be enhanced this fall by the transfer to Fort Sheridan of one of the army's crack anti-aircraft regiments.

According to a disclosure made at the office of Maj. Gen. Andrew Hero, chief of coast artillery, the 61st regiment now at Fort Monroe, Va., will be stationed permanently at Fort Sheridan, where it will be utilized to train National Guard, C. M. T. C., and R. O. T. C. units.

The 61st regiment is one of the units that has been used in the past for exhibition purposes at the army's annual ordnance show at Aberdeen proving ground, where thousands of civilians go each year to see the army's newest weapons. Army officials said today that the 61st will be equipped with automatic electrical robots for aiming the guns at aerial targets. It will be one of four anti-aircraft regiments maintained by the coast artillery.

Air Defenses Stressed.

Transfer of the 61st to Chicago was decided on as a part of a general reorganization of the coast artillery corps just approved by the war department. Under the reorganization more emphasis will be placed on the air arm and mobile defenses, although the use of fixed guns along the sea coast will not be discontinued.

As finally approved, the reorganization will maintain only six harbor defenses on an active status. The other 17 harbor defense establishments now maintained as a part of the nation's military equipment will be retained on a caretaking basis with only sufficient personnel to keep the armament in a state of readines and prevent its deterioration. Several of the army's 23 harbor defenses already are on a caretaking basis.

Constant Preparedness Is Aim.

"It is difficult to visualize in all details the form future wars will take," Gen. Hero said today, in explaining the need for thorough training of coast artillerymen in the use of antiaircraft guns. "Judging from present trends, air forces will play an important part in any war. Under such an assumption, it is reasonable to suppose that a hostile air attack striking at the industrial and commercial heart of the nation would be launched within a few days after a declaration of war.

"The nation which desires to effect a complete and terrorizing surprise may dispense a formal declaration of war. Under this condition it is obvious that time is a most important factor and that the agencies upon which we rely for protection must be kept in constant readiness."

Savings to U. S. Considered.

Under the new organization harbor defenses will be maintained on an active status at Long Island sound, Sandy hook, Chesapeake bay, Pensacola, San Francisco, and Puget sound. Four anti-aircraft regiments will be located at Fort Totten, New York, Fort Crocket, Texas, Fort Sheridan, Illinois, and Fort MacArthur, California.

The railway regiment and the tractor drawn regiment now stationed at Fort Eustis, Virginia, will be sent to Fort Hancock, Virginia, and Fort Monroe, Virginia. The government will close Fort Eustis, which is described by Maj. Gen. Hero as so deteriorated as to furnish a "heavy expense for upkeep."

Savings effected through training the civilian components of the army at a regular army post in the central states was one of the reasons for transferring the Fort Monroe regiment to Fort Sheridan.

"As an alternative to training the civilian components in the middle west the trainees might have been sent to either coast," Maj. Gen. Hero said. "The increased cost to the government in mileage would have been considerable even if the time lost from the active duty period in travel were not taken into consideration."

Mrs. Jackson K. Dering Wins Bridge Game Divorce

Mrs. Dorothy Rohem Dering, 155 Church road, Winnetka, yesterday was awarded a divorce before Superior Judge Sabath from her husband, Jackson K. Dering, president of the J. K. Dering Coal company, 332 South Michigan avenue. Mrs. Dering is the daughter of George Rohem, president of the Chicago Thrift company. The Derings were married June 12, 1926, and separated last Oct. 1. She testified that her husband threw a deck of cards at her and beat her during a bridge game in their home on Jan. 29, 1928, and struck her again last Aug. 28.

Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

Pain Stops Instantly!

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

WARRANTS OUT FOR 4 OFFICIALS OF AIR SCHOOL

Charged with Fraud by Eight Students.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

Judge William E. Helander in felony court yesterday issued warrants for four officials of Aviation Service and Transport, Inc., 4050 South Michigan avenue, charging them with operating a confidence game. The complaints were signed by seven men and a woman who declared that they had paid sums ranging from $60 to $1,000 on promises.

The court action revealed that among those who had paid money for flight instruction were a deaf mute and a woman suffering from goitre, both of whom would never have been permitted to fly by department of commerce inspectors. Neither, it was pointed out, would have been able to pass the department's physical tests.

The officials named in the warrants are Donald M. Mackenzie, president and secretary of the concern; T. L. Evans, treasurer; G. A. Robarge, sales manager; and John Miller, vice president. The court action followed a recent walkout of employés of the company, as the result of internal strife.

Attorney Frank Tyrrell, representing the complainants, declared that at least 50 persons, nearly all from outside of Chicago, had been defrauded by the company. The court was told that in nearly every case the complainants came here and began payment for flight training after reading glowing advertisements stating that any one taking a course from the school would be given a license and that the company would obtain part time work in Chicago for its students until they had completed their course. The promises, the court was told, were never fulfilled.

Says Concern Has Four Planes.

Attorney Tyrrell declared that the company has but four airplanes in its hangar at the Municipal airport and that not one of the fifty persons whom he represented received a pilot's license which had been promised them after a certain period of instruction.

An investigation several months ago revealed that all but two of the A. S. and T. shops had been grounded by the department of commerce and that some 70 students were enrolled for instruction. Operators of air lines have repeatedly complained that the company's school with its corps of green pilots flying about over the city field and landing simultaneously with big transport ships provided a hazard to the operation of commercial planes. Their efforts to remove the school from the field were futile because of a lease held with the city.

Eight Sign Complaints.

Those who appeared in court yesterday to sign complaints against the officials are Thomas Cain of Flint, Mich., at present living at 5720 Belmont avenue, who said he paid $235; Arthur G. Vaughn of Denver, $69; Miss Josephine McGovack, 30 years old, 201 East Delaware place, $1,160; Harold Travers of Albany, N. Y., $140; Ralph Duerdon, at present living at 4319 Drexel avenue, $195; Virgil Emdsley of Omaha, $125; Edward Dickson, Wyoming, Pa., $65, and John Podwika, Wyoming, Pa., $95.

Attorney Tyrrell and Assistant State's Attorney Frank Mast, who will prosecute the case, pointed out to the court that Miss McGovack was suffering from a goitre, that Cain is a deaf mute, and that Vaughn has difficulty with his speech.

Mackenzie denied the charges.

FLYING BECOMES SAFER, MOTORING LESS SO IN ARMY

Surgeon General Notes Aviation's Advance.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Piloting an airplane is becoming less hazardous in the army while the dangers of chauffeuring an automobile appear to be increasing.

Figures compiled by Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland, surgeon general of the army, show the percentages of fatalities in airplanes per 1,000 miles of flight have dropped steadily from .49 per cent per 1,000 soldiers and officers in 1922 to .26 per cent in 1928. During the same period fatalities per 1,000 officers and enlisted men resulting from automobile accidents jumped from .23 per cent to .30.

One Death Per 7,316 Miles in 1928.

According to Maj. Gen. Ireland's statistics a big improvement has been registered in the number of miles flown per fatal accident. His table shows that in 1922 one fatality occurred for every 2,717 miles. In 1928 the number of miles flown per death was 7,316.

Greater stress has been placed in the army in recent years on the improvement of aviation medical service. The decision to emphasize the development of facilities for bettering the physical condition of aviation personnel was made after analysis of airplane accident statistics had revealed that failure of the human element causes far more deaths and accidents in the air than any other factor.

Pilots to Blame Most Frequently.

"Statistics recently published indicate that 59 per cent of the accidents for commercial flying, 63 per cent for the army and 74 per cent for the navy are due to faults of pilots and the human element," it is reported.

"During the last few years there has been a regular decrease in flying casualties in air corps of the army but there has been no decrease in the casualties caused on account of faults of pilots.

"Generally, the increase of safety in flying has been caused by improvement in airplane construction and safety devices, increased knowledge of the causes of crashes and the subsequent application of this knowledge, the thorough and systematic training of flyers in the army aviation school, and the systematic and thorough inspection of aircraft before every flight.

Surgeons Fly Regularly.

"The importance of looking after the physical and mental condition of flyers has been recognized in the army since the early days of aviation, and aviation medicine is yearly becoming of more and more importance.

"The aviation branch of the medical corps has consistently stressed the necessity of 'air mindedness' as a prerequisite in the qualifications of its flight surgeons. Hence all flight surgeons are required to fly regularly and frequently. Several are qualified air pilots."

The two biggest shoe problems in the world

YOU HEAR IT on all sides: "Johnny goes through his shoes in a month" . . . "Peggy's not much better, and besides she's getting mighty particular about how hers look." It's an old, old story that parents know so well.

The International Shoe Company knows these youngsters, too. It recognizes in them the greatest proving ground for shoes in existence. But it hasn't stopped there. It has met these children on their own ground. It has given them sturdy, solid leather shoes for wear. It has given them scientific design for proper growth and support. It has given them good shoes and charming styles to meet the critical eyes of youth.

The result is a remarkable tribute. Parents have turned to International for one-fourth of all the children's shoes worn in America—obviously because they are convinced that they are getting the best values they can buy.

To make sure of it, every one of the score and more factories which make International children's shoes concentrates on just one type. From the designer's board to the last stitch, hands especially trained for their tasks build these shoes with an understanding of the growing feet that will wear them and with sympathy for the service they must render.

Supporting this exceptional workmanship are seventy-five different plants, making everything from leather to shoe boxes and maintaining a control of quality in materials that is one of the most remarkable in all industry. Moreover, by making these materials itself, within its own plants, instead of buying them, International saves millions of dollars a year. That's why the price of its shoes is so much less than you would ordinarily expect to pay for such quality.

Millions have learned through experience that it pays them to patronize stores that are identified by one of the marks of quality shown below. Wherever you are, you can enjoy the benefits of these unusual values, for one of these stores is near you.

Pay it a visit. You'll be glad you did.

The Producing Units of International Shoe Co.

44 Specialty Shoe Factories—each making just one particular type and grade of shoe, together producing 50,000,000 pairs a year.

14 Tanneries—each specializing in one particular type of leather, producing 25,000 sides and skins a day.

1 Rubber Heel and Sole Plant—producing 135,000 pairs of heels and 35,000 pairs of soles a day.

1 Cotton Mill—producing 7,000,000 yards of lining fabric a year.

59 Auxiliary Plants—producing welting, dyes, chemicals, shoe boxes, shipping cartons, trunks, gloves, etc., to the value of more than $30,000,000 a year if purchased from outside sources.

INTERNATIONAL SHOES comprise more than 1,000 styles of footwear for men, women, children and infants. They are sold by more than 70,000 leading merchants, distributed throughout every state in the Union. Regardless of the brand you select, the style you prefer or the price you pay, International Shoes represent the greatest shoe value you can buy.

RUSSIA SEIZES FARMS SET UP BY U. S. MILLIONS

Jews Forbidden to Own Private Property.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Feb. 1.—The final chapter in the struggle of the Jews to preserve their religion and family life in Russia is being written, and the $20,000,000 investment of American Jews, which is being used to combat communist attacks against Judaism, is being expended in vain.

Jewish agricultural colonies which were established with American money in the Crimea and Kherson districts of the Ukraine are being destroyed by the soviet government, which has decreed that all individual Jewish farms must be united to the communal agricultural establishments under the direction of communists.

Reds Overwhelm Colonists.

According to a communist Jewish paper published in Moscow, the Komzet — communist Jewish colonization committee—held a three day conference at Kharkov. Already, according to the delegates to the conference, the Jewish colonies in Kharkov province have been communized 100 per cent. Those at Krivoy-rog have been communized 82 per cent, and at Nikopol, 80 per cent. In the Odessa district 90 per cent of the Jewish colonists have been communized.

The crudely built synagogues of the colonies have been converted into communist clubs and movies by the bolsheviks, and the rabbis have been forced to leave.

The communist newspaper Emes reports that the small Jewish towns near the colonies are famine stricken because of the lack of trade. Private trade has been abolished.

List of Taboo Commodities.

MOSCOW, Feb. 1.—(AP)—As a further step in the abolition of private trade, the Russian government today forbade any one except government and coöperative institutions, to trade, either by wholesale or by retail, in a long list of goods ranging from soap to radio apparatus. Among the articles falling under the injunction are textiles, clothing, shoes, rubbers, paper, office supplies, metal articles, construction materials, chemicals, paints, electrical appliances, glass, radio apparatus, lumber, soap, kerosene, sugar, salt, matches, tobacco and cigarets.

ACOSTA JAILED FOR FAILURE TO SUPPORT FAMILY

New York, Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Bert Acosta, co-pilot with Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd in the latter's trans-Atlantic flight in 1927, was sent to jail for a week today in Nassau county court at Mineola for failure to support his wife and children.

BERT ACOSTA.

Acosta was paroled ten days ago when arraigned on an indictment charging nonsupport on his statement that Charles A. Levine, first trans-Atlantic flight passenger, was to give him employment. He said today that the job failed to develop.

Acosta was led from the courtroom handcuffed to Joseph S. Post, who pleaded guilty of driving an automobile while intoxicated and had been sentenced to six months in the county jail.

Victim Trails 2 Robbers, Shoots One at 2d Holdup

Alton, Ill., Feb. 1.—(AP)—After trailing two robbers who had taken his automobile and $100 on a highway near here last night, Buy Yoder, Alton merchant, shot one of the men at the scene of a second holdup. A suspect, who said he is William Roberts of Alton, was found wounded later and confessed, police said. His companion escaped.

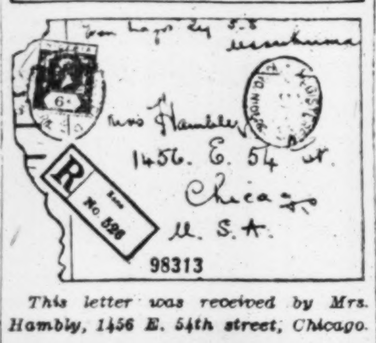
From Lagos, Nigeria



This letter was received by Mrs. Hambly, 1456 E. 54th street, Chicago.

Lagos was once a center of the West African slave trade, dominated mainly by the Portuguese after their discovery of the coast in the fifteenth century. Stations were established along the coast, to the east and south, at the mouths of the various streams forming the delta of the Niger.

The ships of Portugal found the native Benin kings in control, and their rule was not disputed until the British traders appeared, early in the seventeenth century. In less than a hundred years the well known British formula of expansion had begun to be felt, and "by the end of the eighteenth century British enterprise had almost entirely displaced that of other nations on the Niger coast."

For a time the French in 1880 competed for the trade of the "oil rivers," as the delta of the Niger was known, but the British met this move in "the scramble for Africa" by the formation of the United Africa company, which later became the Royal Niger company. Clashes of interests with Germany on the east, in Cameroon, and with France on the Dahomey frontier on the west and Senegal on the north, resulted in Nigeria passing under direct control of the British crown in 1897.

Slavery had been abolished by most of the civilized nations during the first half of the nineteenth century, with the exception of the southern states, Cuba, and Brazil. Lincoln's emancipation Jan. 1, 1863, freed those in the United States, and Cuba and Brazil abolished slavery in 1886 and 1888.

Lucky Mother

"My success with Dorothy isn't just luck," says Mrs. I. Alvine, 7636 Blackstone Ave., Chicago. "It is due to a plan.

"She has escaped the ill-effects of colds and upsets because, at the first sign of a cold, of bad breath, coated tongue or feverishness, I open her bowels with California Fig Syrup. She loves its taste and I like its gentle, thorough action."

Mothers by thousands praise California Fig Syrup. For fifty years physicians have endorsed this pure vegetable product. It tones and strengthens stomach and bowels; stimulates appetite; encourages digestion and assimilation. Its use helps make sallow, listless children rosy and energetic.

Look for the name California when buying. That marks the genuine; safe for infants, effective for children in their teens.

NEW U. S. ENVOY OFFERS CHINA AID TO SECURE PEACE

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 1.—Nelson Trusler Johnson, new American minister to China, presented his credentials to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, head of the Nationalist government at Nanking, this morning. He was introduced by Dr. C. T. Wang, foreign minister.

Following the formal presentation ceremonials, Mr. Johnson conversed with Gen. Chiang for several minutes in the Chinese language.

"The Chinese and American peoples look neighborly upon one another across the peaceful Pacific," Mr. Johnson said. "The goal sought by both is peace and security in order to enjoy a mutual exchange of material and cultural goods, which makes for better understanding of one another's ideals and problems.

"The United States has no other object in its foreign policy and is prepared to meet and coöperate with the Chinese government."

"I am grateful for the friendly sentiment entertained for China by the President of the United States," Gen. Chiang replied, "and I fully agree that the aims of the Chinese and American peoples are to bring about better understanding of one another's problems. The Chinese government is ready to coöperate in this quest for peace and security. Due to your long residence in China and your understanding of our problems, I am confident that friendly principles will again find immediate application to the relations of the two countries."

Mr. Johnson went to Nanking accompanied by Mahlon Fay Perkins, legation counselor; Maj. John Magruder, military attaché; Commander Charles C. Hartigan, naval attaché; A. Bland Calder, acting commercial attaché, and Howard Bucknell, legation secretary.

Mr. Johnson placed a large wreath on the tomb of Sun Yat-sen at Nanking.

JUNK MAN TAKES HIS $5 COMPLAINT TO UPPER COURT

Waterbury, Conn., Feb. 1.—[U. P.]—When Aelia Kapeliowitz, junk dealer, wants justice he doesn't bother with the little fellow.

Angered because a veterinary charged him $5 for shooting an aged horse instead of allowing the horse to die a natural death for nothing, Kapeliowitz wrote a letter of protest to the United States Supreme court. He received the following reply from Chief Justice William Howard Taft:

"Mr. A. Kapeliowitz: Dear Sir—I have nothing whatsoever to do with the matter of which you write me for the reason that I and my colleagues only hear cases when they are presented in our court and within our jurisdiction. It will do you no good to send me any complaint. You should consult a lawyer.

"[Signed] W. H. TAFT."

Peggy Joyce Recovering from an Appendectomy

New York, Feb. 1.—[U. P.]—Peggy Hopkins Joyce successfully underwent an operation for appendicitis today and is recovering nicely, according to her physician, Dr. I. L. Hill. The operation was performed at the Harbor sanitarium by Dr. Philip Grausman. "The operation was not an emergency measure," Dr. Hill said, "but since Miss Joyce has had symptoms of appendicitis, it was thought advisable to operate now and not run the risk of having the case become acute at a less advantageous time."

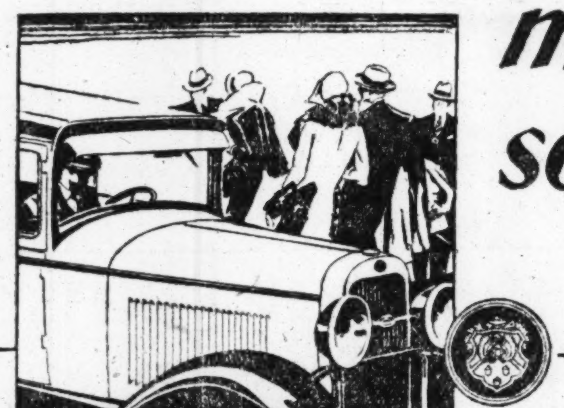
OLDSMOBILE offers IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENTS

- but not one change in fundamentals that made this car so popular - -



Oldsmobile announces improvements and refinements which add definitely to Oldsmobile's beauty, comfort, interior luxury, and increased driving satisfaction. The sum of these advancements is substantially increased value—an even finer car of low price.

In no case have changes been made for the sake of change alone. Every improvement serves a particular purpose—actually adds some desirable advantage to the car.

The bulk of the improvements are in the body. Refinements in body contours result in smarter style and longer, lower appearance. Interiors are roomier and more luxurious, with deeper seat cushions. Chassis refinements include improved, fully-enclosed four-wheel brakes; more responsive steering, and improved carburetion.

If you expect to buy a car this year, you owe it to yourself to see Oldsmobile—to drive it yourself—in order that you may make comparisons and form an accurate opinion of its value. You incur no obligation. Come in—soon.

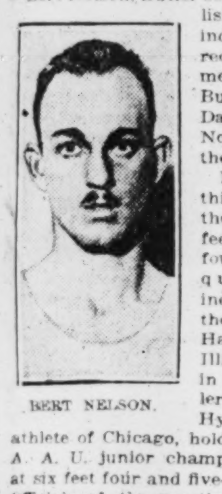
Notre Dame, Ind., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Bert Nelson, Butler sophomore, established a world's indoor high jump record in a dual meet between Butler and Notre Dame here today. Notre Dame won the meet, 71 to 15.



BERT NELSON.

Nelson, on his third try, cleared the bar at six feet six and three-fourths inches, a quarter of an inch higher than the mark set by Harold Osborn, Illinois A. C. star, in 1925. The Butler star, former Hyde Park High athlete of Chicago, holds the National A. A. U. junior championship record at six feet four and five-eighths inches. Officials of the meeting said today's mark should be recognized.

Long shots gave the Buckeyes the lead in the middle of the first half and they led, 16 to 12, at the intermission. Minnesota started its comeback on shots by Loose, Schoening and Nowotny, and clinched victory on baskets by Schoening and Sommer.

Earl Loose led Minnesota with four field goals and Ervin did the best work for Ohio with four baskets and two free tosses. Lineup:

DONNAY WINS BY NOSE IN $10,000 N. O. HANDICAP

New Orleans, La., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Donnay, Rancocas stable colt, won the sixth renewal of the New Orleans handicap, $10,000 added, today in the closest finish ever seen in the running of the classic at the Fair Grounds. Under an excellent ride by Jockey Earl Steffen, Donnay, shoved back right after the start, came around his field, and in the stretch gradually wore down the leaders, to nose out Uncommon Gold. Uncommon Gold, after a slow start, came with a rush in the final three-sixteenths and disposed of Star o' Morn and Dinah Did Upset, the pacemakers. The time was 1:45 1-5 for the mile and one-sixteenth.

The winner paid $15.40 for a $2 mutuel ticket to win, $7.60 to place, and $5.10 to show. Uncommon Gold paid $23.70 to $2 to place and $9.80 to show. Star o' Morn paid $4 to show.

There was a delay at the post when Paul Bunyan, the favorite, cut up, but the field was sent away to a good start. Star o' Morn and Dinah Did Upset set the pace, only to weaken at the end. Inception, which was fourth, came from seventh place in the stretch drive. Leucite, which finished fifth, ran well all the way, being second at the three-quarters pole. Patricia Marian tired. Old Slip did likewise. Calf Roper could never get going.

The race was witnessed by a crowd of more than 10,000.

CONTRACT BRIDGE.

WE had suspected that contract bridge was a device or wily scheme of bridge instructors who had exhausted the supply of auction candidates anxious to be taught at so much per teach, or candidates coerced by the better half at so much per coerce. It seemed not dissimilar to the long skirt edict of the style mongers.

As our bridge compares favorably with our golf, we asked the opinion of a chap who likes cards, other than poker, and has run the gamut from duplicate bridge, through auction, to contract. He said: "From the viewpoint of pure card playing, auction is as superior to contract as old whist was to auction. In interest and possibilities, especially when playing for stakes, contract is as superior to auction as auction was to whist.

"I do not think contract will supplant auction as auction did whist. Both games will be played. Here in Chicago, it has started at several downtown clubs, but auction still prevails. Contract requires even more concentration. It is interesting because the game score is such a factor in the bidding—that is whether or not you are 'vulnerable.'"

That "vulnerable" intrigued us, so he suggested a few hands among the group of four. Well, we still don't know much about what "vulnerable" is, but we know what he said when we took him out of a no-trump from "weakness" and we were set 1,400 points at one-tenth of a cent a point. We suspect we must have been "vulnerable."

Now if this contract thing is to go the way of mah jong, of which we have three sets in the attic bought for fear the dealers might run out, we're satisfied. If it's to stay, we foresee much pain and agony for our partners while we're trying to learn about being "vulnerable."

TORONTO, Feb. 1.—(AP)—The leg weary Chicago Black Hawks fell victims of the concerted rushes of the fresh Toronto Maple Leafs tonight and Toronto ran up a 6 to 0 victory in the last two periods of their National Hockey league clash. It was the season's worst defeat for the Chicago team.

The first period was slow and the Hawks were able to hold their own, but in the second, Toronto's kid front line started the scoring and the Leafs gained a two goal lead. The Hawks, on the last leg of a strenuous road trip, tired noticeably in the final frame, yielding to Toronto's well timed attacks for four goals in less than six minutes.

The game, though fairly rough at times, was not marred by penalties. Only ten were imposed. Lineup:

Iowa Athletes Call Conference Ruling Unfair

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 1.—(AP)—While pleased at the action of the Western conference in restoring the University of Iowa to good standing today, Hawkeye athletic authorities were obviously ruffled over the declaration that "it would be inadvisable" for the local officials to push their plea for reinstatement of disqualified Iowa athletes.

Neither C. C. Williams, head of the athletic board, nor E. H. Lauer, director of athletics, would comment on the conference resolution which apparently barred the way to further attempts aimed at restoring the athletes to the eligible list.

The debarred athletes were outspoken in their disappointment and in their belief that the ruling against them was an unfair one. Mike Farroh, co-captain-elect of the football team, said the conference action against the disqualified athletes, of whom he is one, was "one of the greatest disappointments of my life."

FACULTY CHIEFS FAVOR BAN ON HAWK ATHLETES

Advise Against Plea for Players.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

University of Iowa, suspended from the Western conference last May for subsidizing and proselyting athletes, yesterday was reinstated at a special meeting of the faculty committee at the University club. The reinstatement is effective immediately.

While Iowa was restored to good standing, the action was not without qualification. In a supplemental statement to the one giving Iowa a clean bill the faculty committee members advised Iowa authorities against applying for reinstatement to eligibility of any of the athletes disqualified Dec. 11, 1929. At that time twenty-seven men, including eleven who still are in school, were banned from further competition.

Yesterday's action was evidently timed to aid Iowa. If the suspension had been in effect when the north central conference of colleges holds its annual meeting, March 7, Iowa would have risked banishment or expulsion from that organization, and its credits would not be acceptable to other colleges and universities in the north central jurisdictional area.

Because of that threat, the faculty committee is supposed to have acted as quickly as it did.

The vote of the committee was unanimous.

It was taken after the report of the eligibility committee had been read. This group, composed of Prof. Thomas E. French of Ohio State, Prof. A. C. Cullan of Illinois, and Prof. Prof. A. C. Callen of Illinois, and Prof. investigated conditions at Iowa.

Text of the Resolution.

The resolution follows:

"Whereas, The conference is satisfied that the athletic authorities at Iowa have reëstablished the principle of faculty control and are endeavoring earnestly to correct the conditions which led to the suspension of athletic relations;

"And, Whereas, although there is reason to suspect that certain forces outside the administration are still resorting to improper methods of aiding athletes, the conference has confidence in the ability and determination of the Iowa authorities to ascertain the facts and to deal effectively with such abuses as may be found to exist.

"Therefore, resolved that athletic relations with Iowa be resumed, effective at once."

The following supplementary resolution was passed:

"It is the opinion of this meeting that Iowa authorities be informed that it would be inadvisable to apply for the reinstatement to eligibility of those athletes disqualified on Dec. 11, 1929."

Who the Athletes Are.

The eleven athletes named in the supplementary resolution were:

Monte Stewart, swimmer; Theon Boyer, pole vaulter; Floyd Mitchell, basketball; Mike Farroh, captain elect of the 1930 football team; Seward Leeka, basketball and football; Lawrence Benson, basketball; Boyd Liddle, swimmer; Doyle Plunkitt, basketball; Irvin Nelson, football, basketball, and baseball; Pete Affre, football, and Homer Mosgrove, baseball. These athletes were charged with accepting money, through promissory notes, from the so-called Iowa slush fund.

Although reinstated, it may be difficult for Iowa to schedule contests with other members of the conference immediately. Iowa has an open date on its football schedule, and it may be filled by a Big Ten eleven.

This is not true of other sports. Coach George Bresnahan can enter his track team in the indoor and outdoor championships. He also can schedule dual meets with other conference teams. Iowa's next year's schedules, with the exception of football, will be with Big Ten teams.

The faculty committee was in session for four and one-half hours. The report of the eligibility committee was read by Prof. William Marshall, secretary. Although there was a friendly

ILLINOIS RECALLS GRID MASSACRE OF 1897 EVENING

Played Night Game wtih Carlisle Indians.

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Night football games are not such a novelty after all, as shown by the results of a search of the archives of the University of Illinois. Thirty-two years ago the Illini and Carlisle Indians played a game at night in the old Coliseum, 63d street and Stony Island avenue, Chicago.

About 10,000 are said to have attended the contest, for which the Illini and Indians each received $4,000 after expenses were paid. The wealth and chivalry of Chicago, men in formal soup and fish and women in décolleté, sat in boxes. The field was of tanbark and sawdust, according to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Nov. 21, 1897.

Two special trains carried 700 Illinois rooters to Chicago, many bearing "trumpets," which was 1897 lingo for megaphones.

Although Illinois led at the close of the first half, 6-5, the Indians eventually won, 23-6.

White Warriors Massacred.

"A gathering of all the tribes of palefaces from the big camps of all the universities and from the scattered families that dwell in the thick woods of the common reservations saw their warriors massacred by the redskins last night in the big council tepee in Woodlawn," THE TRIBUNE said.

"Nearly 10,000 singers of the war songs gathered in response to the signal fires that have been burning for a whole moon on the high bluffs of the Illini and saw the warriors of the redmen battle to a victory which was translated into the whiteman's tongue as 23-6. They came with their squaws and even with their papooses, and the braves smoked the pipe of peace and the cigaret of battle while the two war bands of their young men battled before them.

"It was the story of the game between the Indians and Wisconsins of last year over again. It was the same crowd of dilettantes at the sport, the same hard, brilliant play of the whitemen at the opening, and the dogged resistance of the Indians, rising at last over the tired efforts of the whites to a triumphant plunging march again and again down the field for touchdown and goal.

Indians Fierce and Cunning.

"The Indians played their familiar twisting, brilliant game. Fierce as the blood of their warrior fathers and cunning as the blood of the new civilization which is creeping into their savage veins. They played with a dash, a leap, a struggle, and a twist ending in a squirming pile of red and white.

"The Indians gained the ball on a fumble soon after they had returned it to Illinois with a punt, and there were two fierce rushes before the Champaign men again secured it. Then Illinois pushed the ball steadily down the field. The linesmen followed them in their march toward the goal which loomed white against the dark mass of people at the entrance.

"There were two revolving wedges almost on the line, and then a mass play at the Indians' right tackle which carried the ball across. The goal was kicked and the Illinois battalions shouted their glee.

Redskins Show Grittiness.

"After this first rebuff the Indians' play became fiercer. Their traditional grittiness came into view. They pushed their heads deep into the soft footing in the energy of their tackling. There was an exchange of punts and low, hard drives through the line, and then Hudson dropped back for a kick. It looked like a simple punt, but the ball bounded from the ground almost before he kicked it, and sailed straight through the goal posts.

"But ten minutes' time was lost in the first half, and not a man had been hurt enough to attract the attention of the most humanely disposed. It was a lesson for the decriers of the sport. In the second half the play became fierce. Man after man went down in the desperate rushes—some for but a moment to collect their scattered wits and others for three or four minutes, while the trainers bathed their faces and massaged their injured limbs. The men were worn with their struggle, and the hard falls and knocks that they threw off with a shrug at the first of the play staggered them and dulled their tired senses. It was the darker side of the picture."

Personnel of Teams.

Bemus Pierce was the captain of the Indians and others of their players were H. Pierce, Seneca, Smith, Wheelock, Rogers, Hudson, Miller, McFarland, Metoxen, and Cayou. Cayou afterward attended Illinois and was a member of the football and track squads.

Don Sweney was captain of the Illini, whose players were Beadle, Fischer, McLane, McCormick, Von Oven, Coffeen, Wilmarth, Hall, Majors, Enochs, Shuler, and Forbes.

The Indians accepted an invitation to visit the university on Monday and Tuesday. Their second team defeated the Illini reserves. Citizens of Urbana treated the redskins to a banquet.

Illinois lost a second game to the Indians in Chicago in 1898, but it was played in the daytime and the Illini never have appeared again under the glare of the arc light.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS by Westbrook Pegler

The champion and the challenger often "put on the squirm" in the Moose hall or the Bijou theater.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—[Special.]—I am beginning to believe that the idea of appointing useful citizens to regulate the ring trades, instead of professional honest johns and popular precinct baby kissers, might work out well since Brig. Gen. John V. Clinnin, the chairman of the Illinois prize fight commission, forbade all heavyweight wrestling matches until such time as the boys agree to pair off and wrestle through a progressive tournament to a championship. If it is the duty of prize fight commissioners to insist upon systematic defense of the championships against the best available opponents, then Gen. Clinnin has contributed the first useful idea that has been promulgated by any commission in the last ten years.

In this I am assuming, of course, that the customer deserves protection from conniving, evasion, false representation and extortion. Perhaps this is a faulty idea. I could set up a very plausible contention that any customer who pays more than $5 for any seat at any wrestling bout or heavyweight fight in this day, after all that has been revealed about the business, has only himself to blame and neither desires nor deserves protection. Certainly the customers who will pay $25 for ringside seats at the impending obsequies over Fainting Phil Scott in Miami must realize that Jack Sharkey selected Scott for his opponent and evaded Tuffy Griffith for the same reason that Gene Tunney, in his farewell performance, preferred Thomas Heeney to Sharkey. The customer is a touchy species and jealous of his constitutional right to support a numerous and constantly changing clan of amiable racketeers in the style to which kings once were accustomed.

Might Get Aid of Other Commissions.

The Illinois cloture against wrestling cannot drive the wrestlers into fields of useful toil, because wrestling has not thrived in Illinois for some time. But if Gen. Clinnin could persuade the thirty-odd other commissions with which his board is more or less cordially allied to accept the same idea, then the boycott would become effective, and one band of predatory tramps would find themselves enjoined at last.

But, compared with the heavyweight prize fighters, the wrestlers have been a relatively mild nuisance. They have their business agreements, and they rollick from town to town along a routed itinerary not unlike the old burlesque wheels, champion and challenger often riding in the same drawing room on the trains, to put on the squirm in the Moose hall or the Bijou theater at modest rates of admission. They usually give an entertaining, though fraudulent show, and in the course of an average season will expend enough energy to shove a grand piano from Battery park, New York, to Market street, San Francisco, by hand.

The leading heavyweight prize fighters, however, generally may be found under contract to the Madison Square Garden corporation, on retainers, and for the last six years the Garden has carried on endless and erratic pairings of its house heavyweights, deriving millions of dollars from a series of bouts, ostensibly intended to isolate a challenger or champion, according to the requirements of the situation. But, actually, there has been no progressive plan to these tournaments, and the confusion has been a business boon to the stockholders, for it has prolonged the quest indefinitely, leaving the customers always in doubt as to the standings in the league.

Prize Fight Customer Has Little Discrimination.

Again I doubt the sense of bothering good citizens who have risen to high position in the community with the work of regulating a racket for the benefit of patrons who have so little discrimination as the prize fight customers. The baseball customer demands and receives a daily statement of the standing of the clubs. In golf, tennis, polo and all the track and field sports, the champions meet the oncoming challengers every year or waive their titles in default of such defense.

Yet, prize fighting in the heavyweight branches pays most money to the sorriest class of performers in all the industries of sport in America and nobody is deceived but nobody seems to care. Far from attempting to regulate the competition the New York prize fight commissioners, with jurisdiction over the Garden corporation's monopoly, actually have muddled the situation whenever it seemed that order might emerge from the confusion.

The recent reinstatement of Phil Scott, notwithstanding a record of one Fabian victory, one draw, one knockout and one dry dive against third rate opponents was characteristic. Under an orderly system of ranking, Scott would be no higher than No. 12 and Sharkey himself, considering the inconsistent tenor of his career, would be fifth, no better. It will cost the customers about $400,000 to see either or both of them eliminated again in Miami, but, as I have suggested, such customers inspire no sympathy.

Generals Might Move for Joint Boycott.

A brigadier general, John J. Phelan, recently has been appointed to the New York commission. He should impart dignity, principle and intelligence to the board's deliberations, a novel experiment if I may say so. With so much in common, he and the Illinois general might move for a joint coercive boycott against the heavyweight prize fighters for the same reason that the wrestlers were outlawed in Illinois.

But I feel sure that Gen. Phelan would be outvoted by his own board in any such laudable purpose and considering the futility of it all, the abilities of both generals were better employed in some worth while public duty.

Boxing Comish to Investigate Rioux's Dive

Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of ordered an investigation of the Carnera-Rioux fight held Friday night at the Chicago Stadium. Commissioners Fred Gardner and George Getz, who were present at the fight, urged the chairman to find out if there had been any prearrangement which made possible Carnera's knockout of Rioux in forty-seven seconds of the first round. Fans believe that the bout was a part of the build up program to bring the Italian to the front ranks of the heavyweights.

Following is a statement issued yesterday by Walter George, secretary of the boxing commission:

"All moneys due Carnera and Rioux are held up pending a hearing which will be held in the commission's office on Tuesday at 2 p. m. Subpoenas have been issued by the commission for the appearance of all those connected with the bout and the investigation started by the commission will be pressed to the fullest extent.

"Notification has also gone to the Chicago Stadium corporation restraining them from paying Carnera's purse, Carnera being signed for this bout on a percentage basis. The purse of Elzear Rioux now in the commission office is also being held up as are the forfeits of both boxers."

MIANNE PALFREY WINS NATIONAL TENNIS CROWN

Defeats Mrs. Jessup in Final, 7—5, 6—2.

Brookline, Mass., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Eighteen year old Mianne Palfrey, one of Brookline's five tennis playing sisters, today became the women's national indoor singles champion by defeating Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup of Wilmington, Del., a former holder of the title, 7-5, 6-2 on the Longwood covered courts.

MIANNE PALFREY.

Miss Palfrey, probably the youngest player ever to win a national senior tennis title, was unseeded. She won her title by defeating half of the eight seeded players.

Sister Sarah Wins, Too.

Mrs. George W. Wightman and Sarah Palfrey, Mianne's younger sister, retained their national indoor doubles title by overwhelming Marjorie Morrill of Dedham and Edith Sigourney of Boston, 6-3, 6-2. The tournament's other championship, the national mixed doubles title, was successfully defended by Margaret Blake of Lenox and Richard Harte of Brookline. They defeated Mianne Palfrey and Richard Murphy of Utica, N. Y., 3-6, 6-1, 7-5.

In the singles final, Mrs. Jessup won the first five games because Mianne's judgment of distance was off. The Brookline girl, then gained control and set up a cross court attack that gave her the victory in seven consecutive games.

Mrs. Jessup Pulls Tendon.

Late in the first period, Mrs. Jessup pulled a tendon and this mishap was a heavy handicap. As a result Mianne won the first four games of the second set, giving her 11 consecutive games. The final four went with service.

Mrs. Jessup was outclassed from the ninth game of the opening set, when she had set point. She gave Mianne a chance to crash through for the victory by making three consecutive errors.

HUNTER WINS OPENER

New York, Feb. 1.—(AP)—Frank Hunter came back to the tennis wars today after four months' rest, scoring a 6-0, 6-2 victory over E. W. Black, New York youth, in the opening round of the national indoor championship. It took the Rochelle, N. Y., newspaper publisher less than 45 minutes to turn in the win.

Although seven pounds over his best playing weight of 178, Hunter, who is ranked second only to Bill Tilden among the country's players, carried far too many guns for his young opponent.

Udo Zaenglein of Germany, lone foreigner among the 70 entries, used an awkward but effective style to win his first round encounter from Ed Stillman of New York, 6-3, 5-7, 6-1.

Harris Coggeshall of Des Moines, Ia., and Harvard, seeded fifth, outclassed Clarence Rose, Jacksonville, Fla., 6-0, 6-1.

PLAINFIELD PAIR TRAINS TO MAKE GOOD IN CHICAGO

Hurler, 6 Day Racer Eye Chores Here.

Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Two athletes, whose greatest desire is to make good in Chicago sport circles, are training here. They are Dan Dugan, a pitcher, and Fred Spencer, American sprints bike champion. Both are residents of Plainfield.

Dugan is a lanky southpaw, the property of the Chicago White Sox and rated highly among the recruits of last season. He came to the Sox from the campus of St. Louis university.

Aims to Return to Sox.

Last season Dan was farmed out to the American association and then at his own request was transferred to the International league. Announcement was made a short time ago that he had been put out on option to Toledo.

This move has aroused the otherwise carefree Jerseyan, and he is working out at the Y. M. C. A. here daily in order to be in shape when he reports for spring training. It is his ambition to force his way back to the regular lists of the White Sox.

Fred Spencer's greatest feats have been accomplished in the east, but he needs no introduction to Chicago. He first gained prominence there when he won a six day race with Bobby Walthour in 1925. Since then he has been seen in action each year and always has been among the leaders.

Paired with Winter.

Spencer is paired with Charlie Winter of New York for the Chicago race. This is their third time together. They placed second in Chicago in 1927 before moving on to New York to gain first honors.

Spencer, too, is training at the Y. M. C. A. and not only works out on his "home rollers" but also on the bars and rings of the gymnasium. This is the first time he has used this method of preparing for a grind and states that he is in better shape than ever before.

Florida East Coast Golf Champion Retains Title

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Marion Reynolds, Jacksonville amateur, won the Florida East Coast men's golf championship for the second time today by defeating Harold Weber of Toledo, O., state champion, 6 and 4.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send your name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Ed Helmrich, 914 Twenty-third street, Milwaukee, Wis., was awarded $5.

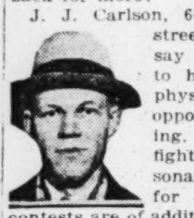
The Question.

Do you consider Carnera a serious threat in the heavyweight ranks?

The Answers.

G. W. Rubelt, 4811 Lake Park avenue, steward—Schmeling could lick Carnera any time. Carnera has a good chance with any of the others, but he never will be heavyweight champion unless he disposes of Schmeling, and in such a showdown Schmeling would show Carnera the way home.

William J. Cariguan, 4832 Kenmore avenue, accountant—I consider him a serious contender. However, can he withstand the punishment he will have to take in this country during the course of the next two months? In other words can he take it on the chin and come back for more?



J. J. Carlson, 64 West Randolph street, lawyer—I would say yes. He appears to have the size and physique to give his opponents a good mauling. He is an unusual fighter, one with a personality and color, and for that reason his contests are of additional interest.

H. L. Bredberg, 1227 Eddy street, insurance—I think so. Judging by his physical specifications, his method of training, etc., everything is in his favor. We need a real heavyweight champion, and I think this fellow has the making of one.

Stuart Osten, 5514 Hyde Park boulevard, clerk—We don't know much about Carnera, but the breeze that precedes him bespeaks a figure of some magnitude. We are at present sitting up and taking notice of him. He looks good, in print. We have no objections to his making good in the ring.

GRIMES MUST PAY $200 ALIMONY A MONTH TO WIFE

Canton, O., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Judge Harvey F. Ake today ordered Burleigh A. Grimes, pitching ace of the Pittsburgh Pirates, to pay his wife, Florence Ruth Grimes, $200 a month as temporary alimony until a hearing is held on a divorce petition now pending. Grimes brought suit for divorce from his wife on the charge she interfered with his profession, alleging that she insisted upon accompanying him to training camps in violation of major league baseball rules.

Denny Shute Holds Lead in Texas Open; Al Espinosa 2d

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 1.—(AP)—A muddy course and a misting rain failed to slow up Densmore Shute, young Columbus, O., professional, today as he continued his quest of $1,500 first prize money in the Texas open golf tournament here. Tied with Al Espinosa, Chicago veteran, at the close of yesterday's round, Shute took undisputed leadership today.

DENNY SHUTE.

With a score of 68, three under perfect figures, for his first round, Shute, winner of the recent Los Angeles open, came back with a 69 today and found himself five strokes under par as he faced the field in the final 36 hole grind tomorrow.

Al Espinosa Is Second.

His total of 137 was two strokes better than the 139 bagged by Espinosa for two rounds, and three better than scores of 140 held by Tony Manero, Elmsford, N. Y., and Neal McIntyre, Indianapolis, tied for third position. Espinosa turned in a par 71 today.

Shute, followed by a large gallery, stroked the same steady golf that marked his game yesterday. In 36 holes played so far he has gone over par just once. That was on the eighth hole today. The other 35 either have been birdies or pars. He sank an 18 foot putt for a birdie two on the last green today. His card:

Out	435	444	444—36
In	344	534	442—33—69

Two Shoot 68's.

The fine golf played by the Columbus pro under the unfavorable conditions today did not match the dazzling pace set by a less heralded pair of professionals, Paul Runyan, Little Rock, Ark., and Neal McIntyre, Indianapolis. Each clipped four strokes from par with 67's. McIntyre's 30 on the par 35 back nine was said to be a record for the layout.

Other low scores gathered over the soggy course included a 69 by Ed Dudley, Wilmington, Del., and 70's by Billy Burke, Greenwich, Conn.; Ralph Guldahl, Dallas; Joe Lally, El Paso, Tex.; Francis Scheider, Dallas, and Tony Manero, Elmford, N. Y.

Pressing the leaders was Mike Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., who put a 72 with yesterday's 70 to hold fifth place with 141 strokes. Burke had 143, while Frank Walsh, Chicago; Lally, P. O. Hart, Wheeling, W. Va., and Guldahl, were bracketed at 144. Bobby Cruickshank, Purchase, N. Y., had 147.

A select field of 64 will tee off tomorrow in the final 36 hole scramble for $7,500 cash prizes. Scores of 155 or better gained entrance.

Scores for today's nine hole rounds, together with two day totals, follow:

Densmore Shute, Columbus, O.	36	33	137

Lamprecht's victory was not assured until the last hole. He was one up as they came up the 18th, but two powerful drives put him on the green while Westland's tee shot landed in the rough, with his second drive out of bounds.

Bruins Play Ft. Wayne, and It's Holman Against Banks

Pro Standings

Cleveland	5	2	Fort Wayne	3	4
Rochester	7	4	Brooklyn	3	6
Chicago	3	2	Paterson	1	4

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS.
Rochester, 25; Fort Wayne, 23.
Cleveland, 18; Paterson, 16.

When the Bruins face Fort Wayne tonight at the Stadium they'll be fighting to stay with the leaders in the second half of the pro basketball race. Cleveland, Rochester and Chicago are in the first division and so closely grouped that one victory can rearrange the standings.

Fort Wayne, Brooklyn and Patterson are in the second division, but the Hoosiers threaten to climb higher, and tonight may be the time they'll start. Rochester nosed out Fort Wayne last night by two points, otherwise they would be there now.

With all the teams playing tonight the whole standings can be scrambled into different form.

Chicago is particularly interested in tonight's battle for it brings Nat Holman of the Bruins against his former protégé, Davey Banks of Fort Wayne. Holman gave Banks his start with the New York Celtics and finally sent him into the regular lineup in place of Johnny Beckman.

The Bruins divided the Rochester series here last week. A poor start, coupled with the loss of Al Kellett at center, helped Rochester's cause in the second game. Tonight with Fort Wayne, their most bitter rival, the Bruins promise another ending.

Every player on the Fort Wayne team ranks as a great basket shot. Rus Saunders will pair at forward with Banks. Chadwick, 6 foot 5 inch center, will oppose Kellett, while Shimek, former Iowa star, and Ralph Miller will start at the guard positions.

The Taylor Trunk girls will meet the Calumet City, Ill., basketball team in one of the preliminaries. The Calumet girls have won 12 games in a row. The Hurley Machines face the Maccabee A. C. in the other game.

REINSTATE IOWA; TO TAKE EFFECT IMMEDIATELY

feeling toward Iowa, some of the professors wanted to make sure of certain facts. These were cleared up by the eligibility committee, which had voted unanimously for Iowa's reinstatement.

Faculty representatives present were Prof. W. J. Moenkhaus, Indiana, chairman; Prof. William Marshall, Purdue, secretary; Prof. O. F. Long, Northwestern; Prof. H. C. Anderson, Michigan; Prof. J. F. A. Pyre, Wisconsin; Prof. Frederic Woodward, Chicago; Prof. James Paige, Minnesota; Prof. Thomas E. French, Ohio State, and Prof. A. C. Callen, Illinois.

History of the Case.

Iowa was suspended from the conference last May at the annual spring meeting of the faculty board. Two weeks later Iowa was given a rehearing at a meeting in Chicago, but the subcommittee denied the plea for reinstatement. Last December Iowa again asked for reinstatement and again was turned down after a 14 hour session at the University club which kept the delegates up till the early hours of the morning.

At that time the pact that Iowa had not barred the athletes who had been aided by funds seemed to be the stumbling block to readmittance. Iowa gave assurance of faculty control by reorganizing its board of athletics. It was made a supervisory board instead of an advisory group. C. C. Williams, dean of the school of engineering, who had experience in athletic control at Illinois and Kansas, was appointed chairman of the board.

Two weeks after the December session Iowa's athletic board disqualified all beneficiaries of the fund.

AMERICAN DERBY, $50,000 STAKE, SET FOR JUNE 14

Early Speculation Likely for Rich Race.

The famous old American Derby, carrying $50,000 in added money, will be renewed at Washington Park on the afternoon on Saturday, June 14. The date was announced yesterday by Col. Matt J. Winn, executive director of the track, after General Manager C. W. Hay had completed his stake program for the Washington Park June season.

The Derby will be run over a distance of one and one-quarter miles and is the richest of seven stakes to be decided this season at Washington Park. The entries will close March 3, and for the first time since racing was renewed here future books are likely to spring up on the running of the historic Chicago race. The entries will be made known nearly three months before the contest is decided.

The seven stakes on the Washington Park program carry a total of $90,000 in added money. Only the date of the Derby has been selected. The stakes follow:

Stake, distance—	Value.
Washington Park handicap, 6 furlongs	$5,000
Debutante stakes, 5½ furlongs	5,000
Curran Memorial handicap, 5½ furlongs	5,000
Sweitzer handicap, 1⅛ miles	5,000
American Derby, 1¼ miles	50,000
Illinois Oaks, 1⅛ miles	10,000
Francis S. Peabody Memorial handicap	10,000

The Derby and Oaks are the only races fashioned strictly for 3 year olds. The Debutante stakes is for 2 year old fillies and the Curran Memorial handicap for 2 year old colts. The other stakes are for 3 year olds and upward.

Skiers Contest in Final Meet at Palos Park

Palos Park, Cook county's winter playground, will be the scene of the third and last ski tournament in the Chicago district today when some of the country's leading jumpers will be seen in action. John F. Berry, director of sports in the forest preserve district, has the Swallow Cliff slide in perfect condition.

Many amateur jumpers who competed at the Ogden Dunes and Cary tournaments, have entered. Harold Sorenson of the Norsemen Ski club of New York, heads the list of nine class A riders.

Five Norge Jumpers.

The Norge Ski club has entered five jumpers, Harry Lien, Einar Jensen, Arne Sletner, Oluf Skogen, and Alf Bakken. Any one of these jumpers has a chance to capture the class A event.

Carlyle Lindhom will carry the red and white colors of the Ogden Dunes club. A. Ranberg of the Forest Preserve club, and Jergen Johansen of the Rockford Ski club complete the list of class A entrants.

Twenty-seven will compete in the class B event. The Norge Ski club will be represented by nine, the best of whom is Rudolph Gundersen. The Forest Preserve Ski club has entered five jumpers, while a team of six will come from the Milwaukee Ski club.

Banquet After Meet.

A. J. Cermak, president of the Cook county board, who has sponsored the tournaments for the last six years, will offically open the meet and will be the principal speaker at the banquet at the Hotel Sherman tonight.

Roads leading to Palos Park, which is located at 111th street and Keane avenue, are reported in good condition by the Chicago Motor club.

KIRKWOOD AND HAGEN EMBARK ON ORIENTAL TRIP

San Pedro, Cal., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Walter Hagen, British open golf champion, and Joe Kirkwood, Australian trick shot artist, today embarked for Honolulu, first stop on their proposed five month exhibition tour of the orient.

While the greater share of the time will be spent in Australia, the pair will make stops in New Zealand, China, Japan, and the Philippines.

Before he departed Hagen said he hoped to build up his game in the extended tour. The Detroit pro, twice national open champion and five times professional title holder, failed to place among the leaders in any of the money tournaments of the Pacific winter season.

Kirkwood was more successful, finishing in a tie for first in the Long Beach open and ninth place in the Agua Caliente $25,000 event.

$25,000 PACING DERBY WILL BE RENEWED IN JULY

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 1.—(AP)—W. P. Engelman, secretary of the Recreation Realty company, announced today the renewal of the Great American Pacing Derby, with its purse of $25,000. The event will be run off at the Grand Circuit meeting, which will be held here the week of July 14 to 19.

It is expected that the 1930 Derby will be for 2:13 class pacers under the money won classification. Secretary Engelman also announced the renewal of the Exchange club's $10,000 trot as one of the headliners of the coming meeting.

IOWA DEMOCRATS SEEK EX-CUB FOR GOVERNOR

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 1.—(AP)—Iowa Democratic leaders announced today they were preparing to draft Thomas J. Walsh, of Davenport, former catcher for the Chicago Cubs and later owner of the Cleveland American league club, as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor. Walsh was the Iowa member of the committee selected at the 1928 Democratic national convention to notify Alfred E. Smith of his nomination for the presidency.

Baseball Worth Remembering: How Want Ad Got 2 Hurlers

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

This is the fifth of a series on interesting baseball happenings of the past. Another will appear next Sunday.

WANTED—PITCHERS. CHANCE FOR BIG money and steady employment. Report immediately to Wm. Armour, manager of the Cleveland Naps.

The above is not from the want ad pages, but was the introduction of a Cleveland baseball writer's story the morning of Aug. 5, 1902. The writer didn't think any good would come from it. But he knew it could do no harm and that the idea, at least, was novel. Little did anybody expect that as a result of the "ad" there would appear immediately, among a flock of youngsters whose ambitions greatly exceeded their ability, two men destined to serve long and well in big league ranks. They were Otto Hess and Charley Smith. Both now have gone on the long journey.

The idea of advertising for pitchers was prompted by Manager Armour's predicament. He had one available worker—Earl Moore. Bill Bernard was injured. So was the immortal Addie Joss, who a few years later pitched a perfect game against Ed Walsh and the White Sox. Joss preceeded Hess and Smith into eternity.

Early on the day of Aug. 5, 1902, there came to the Cleveland park a big, clumsy looking fellow who told Armour he had seen the "ad." The farmish looking fellow said he was left handed and could pitch. He lived in a small town nearby. His experiences were not extensive, but he said he had confidence in himself. Armour believed him. He was in the position of a man who would believe anything.

"We'll Bunt Him Back to Sidney."

Hess was told he could pitch that afternoon and his only reply was that it was just what he expected. The team he had to face was Washington. Tom Loftus, manager of the Nationals, as they then were known, looked over Hess as he warmed up, made inquiry as to his history and then said to his men: "Well, we will bunt him right back to Sidney, Ohio, where he came from." Hess looked like the cumbersome kind that find their doom in the bunting game.

The Washington gang laid down 14 bunts that afternoon. Four blossomed into safe hits. Seven were sacrifices. Hess, always willing and never weakening as the fight progressed, threw away three of them. But he went the route [there was none available to supplant him] and finally won in the tenth by 7 to 6. More than a dozen years elapsed before he finally passed out of the majors for keeps. He is remembered best for his labors with the Boston Braves.

On the following day came Smith, but there was more of the "Dick Merriwell at Yale" atmosphere about his entrance than there had been about Hess. Before the game of Aug. 6, Armour was at a loss as to whom he could pitch. The crop of the "ad" responses had been disappointing. A gate tender had seen the plea in the newspaper the morning before. About an hour before game time he went to Armour and asked him why he didn't get Smith. The gate tender was a semi-pro manager and Smith was his best pitcher.

"Well, where is this fellow," said Armour.

"He went through the bleacher gate just a few minutes ago. He's out there somewhere," was the gate tender's reply.

A messenger went in search of Smith. He was told that Armour wanted him. Smith reluctantly climbed out of the bleacher to meet Armour. He was told he was wanted to pitch against the Athletics that afternoon. He also was told that the peerless Rube Waddell was to work for the Macks. He didn't have to be told that such as Topsy Hartsel, Dave Fultz, and Socks Seybold were in the Macks outfield; that Harry Davis, Dan Murphy, Monte Cross, and Lave Cross were in the infield and that Ossie Shreck would catch. The thought of the entire thing threw fear into Smith, but he finally submitted.

Only the old way back when boys will recall the Cleveland lineup of that period. Bay, Fleck, and Jack McCarthy were the fly chasers. Hickman, Lajoie, Gochnauer, and Bradley comprised the infield. Harry Bemis caught. Silk O'Loughlin was umpiring, those being the days of the one man arbiter.

Rube Fans Twelve, but Smith Wins.

Well, Smith pitched that day and so did Waddell. Rube fanned 12 Naps, which wasn't unusual for him, but the boy yanked from the bleachers beat him. The count was 5 to 4, Cleveland picking up the winning run in the ninth when the fleet footed Bay beat out a bunt, stole second, and scored on Lajoie's single to left.

Three days after making his big league debut, Smith blanked Baltimore, but later was not so successful and the Cleveland club shipped him to Atlanta. Later he came back with Washington and the Red Sox. Then in 1912 the Cubs summoned him from a minor league berth. Overnight he became a "Giant Killer." But while working for the Cubs one day he collapsed from sunstroke. He remained an invalid until his death. In the last few months of his existence American league money helped smooth the road for him.

U. S.-JAPAN GAME TOPS SIDELIGHTS OF NAVAL PARLEY

LONDON, Feb. 1.—(AP)—An American-Japanese baseball game, whereby the Americans hope to regain the prestige in their national sport lost to the Japanese during the 1927 conference at Geneva, will be an outstanding sidelight of the London naval conference.

A group of American delegates and officials, including a number who were at Geneva when the Americans were trounced at their own game, formed themselves into a "policy steering committee" to plan the game.

The two greatest problems ahead of the game are the finding of a suitable field, since London has only cricket or football grounds, and finding a disinterested third party for umpire.

The Americans also are hopeful of arranging golf matches with all the other delegations, since all play that game.

ARLINGTON TRACK BUILDER STILL IS CRITICALLY ILL

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 1.—(AP)—H. D. (Curly) Brown, noted sportsman and builder of the Arlington racetrack near Chicago, who had a severe heart attack Wednesday, today was removed from La Jolla to Glendale, where he is expected to enter a sanitarium. Dr. S. F. Scott, who attended Brown while at La Jolla, said the sportsman still was in a critical condition.

SHARKEY RUNS AND GOLFS WHILE PHIL SCOTT RESTS

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 1.—[U. P.]—Jack Sharkey continued his training for his Feb. 27 fight with Phil Scott today, opening the day with a three mile trot over the Flamingo park course. Sharkey followed his road work with 18 holes of golf, taking a 90 for the round, despite a stiff wind. In the afternoon he went through light camp work.

Failure of a sand bag to arrive and the incompletion of a punching bag platform forced Phil Scott to rest another day before beginning training.

WABASH LOSES CLOSE SWIMMING MEET TO PURDUE

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Led by Johnny Nickerson, who took first in the 40 and 100 yard free style events and was anchor man on the victorious 160 yard relay quartet, Purdue defeated Wabash here this afternoon in a dual swimming meet, 39 to 36. Wabash counted heavily with seconds and thirds. Sheets of Purdue won the fancy diving to clinch the victory.

In an exhibition water polo game, Purdue defeated the inexperienced Wabash team, 11 to 0.

Brady, Veteran Northwestern Trainer, Is Ill

King Brady, Northwestern university's veteran athletic trainer, known to professional and amateur athletes throughout the country, is confined to his home at 2057 Chase avenue, following a heart attack. It is not expected that he will be able to resume his duties for the remainder of the school year.

The Purple trainer has been associated with athletics for many years during which time he has served with professional baseball teams and college athletic teams. He started his career as trainer at Ohio State nearly thirty years ago. He also was trainer for the Columbus team of the American association.

From Columbus he went to the University of Wisconsin where he was trainer until after the war at which time he joined the Cubs and served as trainer until 1922 when he came to Northwestern.

Brady's ability to treat torn muscles and ligaments has made him an authority in this work. Many of the country's leading athletes have journeyed to Evanston to have Brady doctor up a twisted knee or ankle. His famous red oil concoction for rubbing bruised muscles is included in the medicine kit of nearly every athletic trainer in the country.

Columbus, O., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—The Ohio State university fencing team tonight defeated Michigan State 13 to 4.

New yet sixteen years old!
GENERAL MOTORS' lowest-priced eight

$1045 AND UP superior performance

The New Oakland is General Motors' newest eight-cylinder automobile—yet in reality its development goes back sixteen years, to 1914. Several of the engineers who were responsible for the design and development of the New Oakland's power plant were at that time participating in the creation of General Motors' first eight-cylinder car. To the New Oakland Eight, they brought an extensive and thorough knowledge of eight-cylinder engines which has resulted in a car remarkably sound in basic design, as well as one which incorporates many advanced features.

One of the most important qualities of Oakland's engine is its great power in relation to the size and weight of the car. It develops one horsepower to every 37 pounds of car weight. This ratio explains why few cars are as fast as the New Oakland Eight—why few, if any, can climb hills so quickly or accelerate so swiftly in traffic. Those who have driven it know how well it merits the description, "the car with superior performance."

Another notable quality of Oakland's power plant is its exceptional smoothness. Naturally, you expect to find an eight-cylinder engine smooth. But in this one, inherent smoothness has been greatly increased by a complete down-draft fuel system—new type cylinder heads insuring uniform combustion—laminated steel spring and rubber engine mountings—and a short, rigid crankshaft.

Considering its superior performance, exceptional smoothness and the beauty and luxury of its new Fisher bodies, the New Oakland is moderately priced. Thus, many who have been denied the luxury of owning a fine eight-cylinder automobile will find the New Oakland a car of unusual appeal. Come in and drive it today!

The New Oakland Eight, $1045 and up, f. o. b. Pontiac, Mich., plus delivery charges. Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers, rear fender guards and spring covers extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values . . . Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery and the charge for any additional accessories or financing desired.

GOLDEN GLOVES ENTRIES PASS 300 FOR CITY TRIALS

Lists Close Tuesday for First Sectional.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

More than 300 entries have been received for the sectional trials of THE TRIBUNE's annual Golden Gloves tourney. Boxers who desire to enter the first test to be held at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium Feb. 11 have until Tuesday to send in their nominations. No entries for the west sectionals will be accepted after that time.

The second trials are scheduled at the Fronton, Clark street and Lawrence avenue, Feb. 14, and entries close Friday. The third and last set of eliminations will be decided at White City Feb. 17 and entry must be made by Feb. 10.

Winners of the first four places in each class will qualify for the grand finals at the Coliseum Feb. 25, 26, 27, and 28. There will be 32 qualifiers from each district, a total of 96 in all. There will be at least 100 boxers from other cities and towns.

Sectional Rounds Shorter.

In the sectional trials each round will be two minutes and at the Coliseum finals three minutes. Winners of first and second places in each class at the Coliseum will make up the Chicago team which will meet New York's glove swingers at the Chicago Stadium March 19. In the intercity matches, each round will be three minutes. Fighters must be in condition for the finals as well as the trials, for an additional minute is a long time, especially when an opponent is forcing.

Brig. Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the athletic commission, has offered the services of commission referees and judges, while Avery Brundage, president of the National and Central A. A. U., whill have his officials at the disposal of men in charge of the tournament. Roy Davis, chairman of the registration committee of the Central A. A. U., is coöperating in issuing sanctions and membership cards. With this coöperation, the tournament should be more successful than last year's, which netted $25,000 for the Forty and Eight club's war veterans' camp.

Legion Night Feb. 25.

The first evening of the Coliseum show will be American Legion night. Virtually every post in the Chicago district is selling tickets. Army night will be observed on the second day. The Fort Sheridan band and ranking officers will attend along with local dignitaries of these rvice. The Great Lakes band will be on hand on the third evening, which will be Navy night. Officers from Great Lakes and the Naval reserve will be present. The final night will be called Chicago night.

Entries are being received from clubs, gymnasiums, universities, colleges, high school, and academies. It is by far the most representative collection of nominations.

Russell Crane, who captained last year's University of Illinois football team, will be a contestant in the trials at Danville, Ill., Feb. 10. Crane is an aggressive heavyweight who is expected to qualify for the Chicago finals. He is a stiff right hand puncher and also knows the defensive angles of the sport.

Get Instruction at Illinois.

Edward Steeve of Chicago, who is a student at Illinois, will be a contestant in the 160 pound division in the trials at Danville. Jack Hamilton, also of Illinois, will compete in the Danville light heavyweight eliminations. Both have been taking boxing instruction from Coach Ferry of Illinois for the last two years. They can hit and both can take punishment.

Aaron Bray of Champaign High school, who will compete under the colors of the Champaign A. C., is another downstater expected to earn the right to compete at the Coliseum. Bray, a lightweight, has been boxing in tournaments for two years. He is fast and clever and can hit with his right hand.

H. H. Weld of Northwestern university will compete in the trials of the welterweight division at the Fronton. Weld is being groomed by Frank Hill, Purple track and field coach, who was an amateur boxer ten years ago.

Deerfield Boy Enters.

Melvin Mullins of Deerfield-Shields High school will compete in the featherweight trials at the Fronton. He is manager of his school's basketball team and has taken part in athletic activities for the last two years. Mullins is receiving instruction from Ed Jacobson, a former lightweight champion of the Pacific fleet. Lane Tech, De Paul academy, Crane Tech, and Lindblom are other local schools which will be represented.

Dave Barry, former Canadian lightweight champion, is coaching the team which will represent his gymnasium. Barry has some good boxers and he is making a bid for the team trophy. Kid Howard, who will enter a team from his Arcade gymnasium, is developing what he believes is a winning squad. Phil Collins, local referee, is coaching the team which will represent the West Side Knights of Columbus.

Action is promised every night, for out of town boxers are determined to make the Chicago team, while local boys are just as sure the intercity squad will be made up of home talent.

Tickets for the Coliseum and Chicago Stadium shows are one sale at THE TRIBUNE's Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street. The prices are one, two, and three dollars. Admission to sectional eliminations will be fifty cents and one dollar.

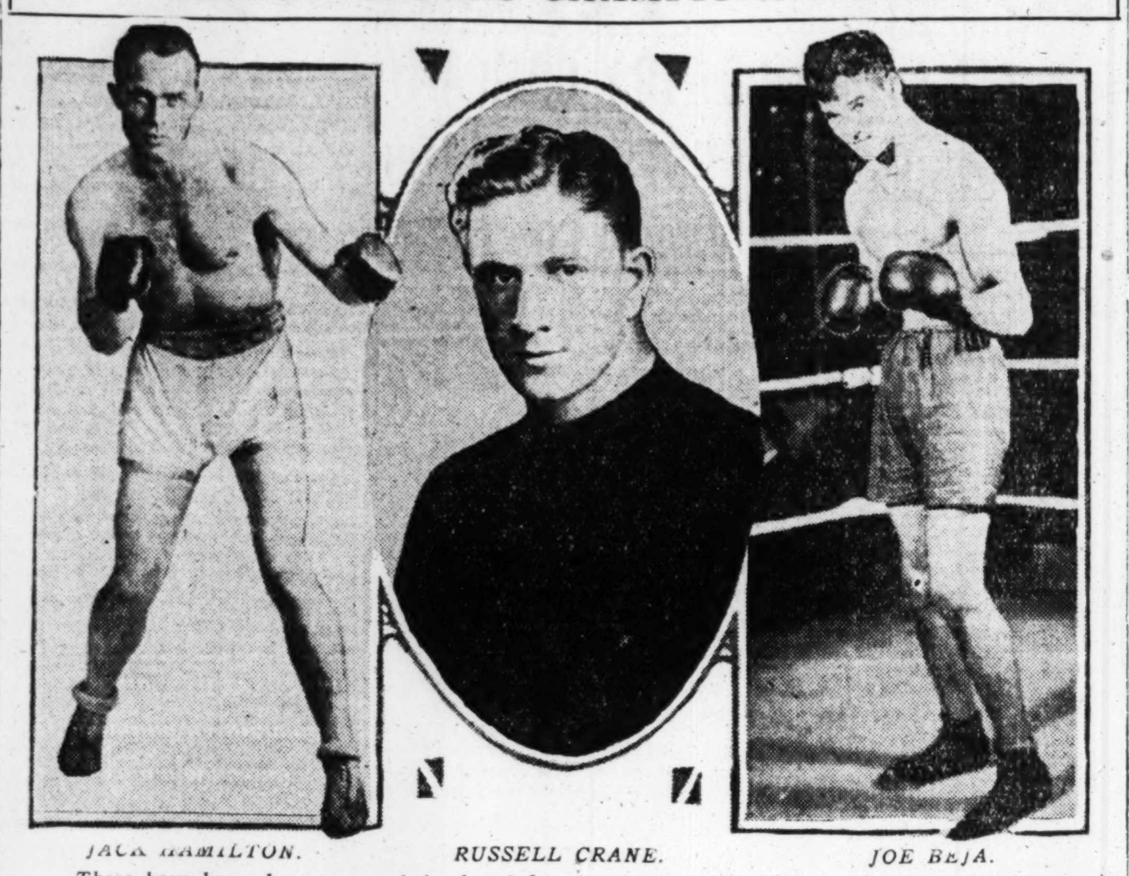
Ohioan Breaks 94 Targets to Win Dixie Handicap

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 1.—(AP)—G. M. Roseborough of Ashland, O., today won the Dixie handicap trap shoot from a field of nationally known marksmen. He broke 94 out of a possible 100. E. J. Pfister of Sorrento, Ill., was second with 93.

COLLEGIANS PLAY SOLDIERS.

The University of Michigan nine has scheduled games with the United States Infantry school team at Columbus, Ga., April 18 and 19.

GOLDEN GLOVES CHAMPIONS HERE?



JACK HAMILTON. RUSSELL CRANE. JOE BEJA.

These boys know how to use their gloved fists in the ring, and perhaps all of them will be seen in The Tribune's Golden Gloves finals, starting Feb. 25. Beja, by winning the 148 pound championship at Springfield, already has earned the right to fight here. Crane, 1929 football captain, and Hamilton are fighting Illini, who will take part in the Danville sectional tourney starting Feb. 10.

Golden Gloves Titles Decided in Six Cities

BY FRENCH LANE.

There are many two-fisted fighting boys in the central states.

Golden Gloves sectional boxing tournaments held during the last few days offer the proof. Big boys and little boys—boys so game they had to be knocked unconscious before they would concede defeat—and lads who can take care of themselves in most any situation thrilled big crowds of spectators in nearly a dozen cities.

In six of the cities—Streator, Rockford, Springfield, Davenport, Peoria, and Kokomo — sectional champions were crowned. In South Bend and Fort Wayne the preliminary battles were staged. The championship matches will be fought in South Bend tomorrow night. The finals in Fort Wayne are scheduled for Wednesday night.

There may be an extra large crop of drug store cowboys in the territory where the scramble for Golden Gloves championships started, but if so the cowboys were on the outside looking in. For only red blooded lads with plenty of stamina who were willing to take a punch to land one were in the spotlight. And there were plenty of this sort, so many the programs ran far into the night before all the fistic arguments could be settled.

The team which will represent the Davenport Times will be one of the hardest punching outfits to invade the Coliseum on Feb. 25 for THE TRIBUNE Golden Gloves meet. More than 70 per cent of their championship matches were won on knockouts. The Springfield, Peoria, and South Bend teams will contain many skilled boxers. The Streator Times-Press team is another outfit of sluggers, while Rockford, Fort Wayne, and Kokomo are evenly balanced in boxers and sluggers.

Most of the teams will bring along a good heavyweight. Adam Smith, a 205 pounder at Rockford, can box and he can hit. Buzz Green, the 200 pound butcher boy heavyweight of the Davenport team, usually knocks his opponent out of the ring. George Myers Jr. of Quincy is coming back to seek another championship. Springfield's heavyweight is a young giant from the coal mines of southern Illinois. We watched him get knocked out of the ring in the first ten seconds of his bout the other night, then come back and knock out his opponent.

The champions crowned in the sectional tournaments will keep up their training drills until the day arrives when they start for Chicago to seek THE TRIBUNE Golden Gloves. Most of the boys will be greatly improved by that time. Professional coaches are to be employed to teach the lads the tricks of the trade. Mike Dundee, the Rock Island fighter, is to train and coach the Davenport team.

10 New Riders in 6 Day Race at Stadium

Chicago bicycle fans will see more new faces in the twenty-third international six day race which opens in the Stadium one week from tonight. Fifteen teams will start and ten of the riders will be making their first appearance in Chicago.

Seven of the newcomers are outstanding riders from Europe, while the other three are young American boys taking part in their first six day race. They are Pete Smessaert, Lance Claudel, Jack Sheehan, American riders, and the following foreign stars: Anthony Piemontasi, Henry Lemoine, Marcel Guimbretiere, Erich Dorn, Maurice Raes, Erich Macynski, and Albert Billiet.

Smessaert, a Chicago youngster, represented the United States in the last Olympic games. He has been racing as an amateur for several years, and local fans expect big things of him. Claudel hails from New Orleans and is a rugged youngster. Sheehan is from the "sidewalks" of New York.

Watches European Stars.

The new foreign riders were lined up by Oscar Egg, veteran six day star, who is Promoter John M. Chapman's representative in Europe. Egg spent several months looking over the talent in Europe and finally selected the aforementioned seven riders. Lemoine and Guimbretiere form a new French team of youngsters with speed and stamina.

The German team will be Erich Dorn and Erich Macynski, who surprised the cycling experts of Europe by winning the recent six day race in Berlin. Belgium will be represented by a pair of rugged riders, Maurice Raës and Albert Billiet. Italy will send a new rider, Anthony Piemontasi.

Seven other teams have been named. They are Reggie McNamara and Gaetano Belloni, Gerard Debaets and Tony Beckman, Freddie Spencer and Charley Winter, Franz Deulberg and Jimmy Walthour, Ernest "Hy" Kockler and Norman Hill, Alfred Letourner and Paul Brocardo, Eddie Merkner and Mickey Rodak.

Won Last Chicago Race.

McNamara and Belloni won the last race here. McNamara, the grand old man of cycling, has won 14 races, more than any six day rider. Belloni is one of the strongest pluggers in cycling. Debaets and Beckman make another formidable combination.

Spencer and Winter form the strongest American team in the race. They won the New York grind two years ago and finished second in a race here. Deulberg and Walthour, the German-American "kid team," which won the last race in the Coliseum, should show up well, while Kockler has a good partner in Hill.

Letourner and Brocardo have finished second in four races in America.

1930 AUTOS ARE FASTER, SAFER, SHOW REVEALS

Motorist's Dollar to Buy More than Ever.

BY HAL FOUST.

The thirtieth annual National Automobile show closed last night at the Coliseum. No actual statistics on attendance and sales were available last night, but officials of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce pronounced the exhibition as a success beyond a doubt.

The success of the show has a broad significance. It is the manufacturer's guide to the condition of the domestic market for motor cars. The market was found to be sound, undamaged by Wall street's blow of a few months ago.

The outlook for the American automobile industry in 1930 is for continued prosperity for the vigorous and healthy companies. It is America's largest industry and one that supports many allied interests through its purchase of material and parts.

1930 Car Faster, Safer.

The foregoing paragraphs give the industry's view of the show. Now for the public's:

The 1930 automobile, under eight days of close inspection, shows itself to be a faster, safer, more reliable and more comfortable car than any of its predecessors. The evolution that transformed the horseless buggy of 1900 to the power carriage of today continues.

Opportunities for rich remuneration have concentrated talent and capital upon the improvement of motor transportation. There is keen competition in the business. The public is benefiting by an ever finer car.

Dollar Buys More.

Prices this year, generally speaking, are slightly higher than last. But improvements outweigh price raises and, as has been the history of the industry for a quarter of a century, the 1930 dollar buys more automobile than ever before.

The assembly of the industry's big men here during the week brought out that there is a growing recognition of the fact that further development of motor transportation is directly contingent upon greater progress in the modernization of streets and highways.

Private capital has produced a vehicle capable of a sustained speed of sixty miles an hour with comfort and safety. Governmental units have lagged far behind in the improvement of boulevards and highways. The sixty mile an hour vehicle is operated on forty-five mile an hour roads and twenty-five mile an hour streets.

The automobile owner is being cheated from obtaining the maximum return from his car investment. This is particularly true in populous areas.

People Reluctant to Drive.

In Chicago, for example, the delinquency in road building deprives many families from a Sunday outing in the country; narrow, dangerous, and congested streets discourage families from moving to the suburbs or where the automobile must be used for daily transportation to and from work; many persons are reluctant to drive to the city to shop.

As for the foreign market, some of the manufacturers have anxious eyes toward the London naval conference. They are interested in maintaining adequate protection for America's foreign trade, which includes a million exported automobiles a year.

During the automobile show officials of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce became interested in Chicago's 1933 fair. It seemed likely that the industry will take an active part in the exposition.

ARMORED AUTOS USED TO MOVE MONEY, CIGARS

People living in large cities are familiar with the sight of armored cars that carry securities, money, and very valuable merchandise. Transportation has advanced in economy and efficiency in proportion to the intelligent application of human endeavor and capital investment, as F. C. Horner pointed out when he recently addressed a meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

The armored cars have steel bodies mounted on high speed truck chassis, the windows are of bulletproof glass, and cab doors automatically lock the chauffeur in until the rear body doors are opened. The steel body is proof against rifle fire, while machine gun turrets can be used by the guards to ward off an attack by criminals.

Money and securities are not the only valuables protected by specially designed vehicles. The billions of cigars and cigarettes consumed annually in this country represent an immense value, desirable in the eyes of holdup men. Hence special metal bodies have been designed, the doors of which are locked with strong bars and are not opened until the trucks have reached their destination.

U. S. MOTORISTS SPENT BILLION ABROAD IN 1929

Simplified regulations surrounding the foreign touring has stimulated travel to the extent that American tourists spent close to a billion dollars outside of the United States during 1929.

The scale of touring costs in Europe can now be brought into the realm of the average pocketbook. Steamship lines have made special arrangements to handle autotmobiles uncrated and as virtually a part of the regular baggage. Customs documents to permit free circulation of the car abroad have been simplified and may be secured through the American Automobile association prior to departure. International barriers no longer confuse the car owner. The A. A. A. foreign travel division now maintains port representatives at all important European ports of entry to serve accredited motorists.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

DUMB PAVING.

Evanston, Ill., Jan. 30.—That editorial, "Pick the Pavement for the Motorists," was fine. No doubt about concrete being the best, in this latitude anyway. Brick isn't worth a hoot.

But please add to that editorial and say "properly laid concrete," of which I've seen little hereabout. They don't provide enough foundation for the surfacing, thus saving a penny in construction and assuring the expenditure of thousands of pennies every year for the upkeep of a very uneven and bumpy road, as bad as brick would have been. Next major offense is that most builders try to make monolithic paving, without any joints, resulting in a mosaic of cracks the first winter.

Then if the builders do joint the paving, they do it in 30 foot units, and the next winter you'll find zig zag cracks throughout those slab units. There should be a joint down through middle of road and others crosswise every 15 feet. Then the surface is smoothed to a nice skating rink shine. Result: skidding and slipping, collisions, and what not.

THE TRIBUNE should head a subscription for a school or at least a class for street pavers. It is needed.

And by the same token, the builders of sidewalks sin as badly.

The least bit of snow, or slime, or even a summer shower makes those sidewalks treacherously, murderously dangerous. I've seen a dozen accidents, bad ones, this winter.

Sidewalk and roadway should be even surfaced, not bumpy but rough, good and rough, "broomed" or scored, well roughened. The only sensible paving surface for rubber tire, or human, or equine hoof.

F. W. FITZPATRICK.

COP TALKS ENGLISH!

Boston, Mass., Jan. 26.—You have in Chicago a traffic officer—a gentleman—that the rest of the world should hear about.

I have always thought of the London "bobby" as the last word in politeness. And the Boston cops are no slouches either, but Boston is a small place. New York stick twirlers are usually too important to say anything and when they do—it is in such broad Irish, you can hardly understand the half of it.

But Chicago—where one expects to hear the roughest kind of language from policemen. What do you suppose I heard from the lips of that very efficient officer of the law who directs traffic at Randolph and State streets?

The lights turned from red to green and with a Chesterfieldian sweep of the arm the crowd is admonished to "Proceed with haste." Believe it or not but 'tis true—"Proceed with haste."

Surely Mr. Whalen should be told about this. And the rest of Chicago policeman should hear too. "Proceed with haste." Well, well! Chicago is a wonderful place.

G. F. COWPER.

PRAISE WHERE DUE.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—I notice in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, Mr. P. J. Foley's praise for the west park board as to keeping the boulevards clear. I say give praise where praise is due.

The west park board hasn't had a plow out all winter. The Chicago Motor Coach company cleaned the boulevards wherever the coaches go on the west park system.

H. GREEN.

A FAIR WEATHER ROUTE.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 29.—In your road map of trip to Excelsior Springs you show route from Chicago to go on Missouri 40, through Kansas City to the springs. I have traveled that part of state pretty often and would suggest taking route 40 to 37 miles east of Kansas City and there turn north to Higginsville and go through Lexington, Henrietta, Richmond and then the Springs.

Road map shows about ten miles of good dirt road between Higginsville and Lexington, and then you have slab all the way. Mileage saved about thirty-five, and it is a beautiful trip. I make the trip yearly in March and it is possible that the short dirt road has been graveled since last March.

A. H. LEWIS.

A LAKE VILLA CASE.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Wish to advise you that Lake Villa, Ill., speed trap is again open. Saw officer settle case with woman at south end of town and then he turned his car around and gave chase after me, but I slowed down to below 25 miles per hour and he left off north of Soo Line tracks going towards Antioch.

HERMAN H. MEES.

ON THE ROAD WEST.

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 26.—I wish to advise you, for the benefit of other motorists coming to California, of a condition of affairs existing at Fort Yuma, Cal. At that point is maintained a quarantine station and motor vehicle department station, both maintained by the state of California, also a special deputy sheriff for Imperial county.

They trump up charges against motorists, arrest them, hold an impromptu court at which the motorist isn't allowed to make any statement.

When I came through there recently on my way from the east to spend the winter in California, I made inquiries and was told that that was a daily occurrence, not only that but that fist fights between the officers and tourists are frequently had there.

The Automobile Club of Southern California says they have had a great many complaints in regard to the situation there but they are powerless to remedy the condition.

IN RIVER GROVE.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—In River Grove they give you a break—"likell."

We drove one block not knowing our lights were out. The fine was $10.

So be careful in River Grove, fellow motorists.

RALPH WEDEMAN.

TOO MANY STOPS.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Why do they have a "through street" at such a place as Homan and Grand? When driving west on Grand you must stop at Kedzie, 3200; Augusta, 3300; Homan, 3400, and no traffic on Homan and an "S" curve.

JOSEPH DEMSKI.

ARRESTS AT SAFETY ISLANDS.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—The enforcement of the new traffic regulation, requiring motorists to pass a safety island to the right seems to produce traffic congestions, where otherwise there would be none. I have had the opportunity to observe that at the corner of Western and Lawrence avenues, where, on account of lack of street cleaning, owning to parking and enforcement of the above regulation, one channel only is available for all the cars going north.

Where, in normal traffic density, all the cars could cross Lawrence avenue between changes of light, the cars are now held up in a long row, because on the other side of the street are officers passing out tickets to any motorist who leaves that lineup of cars, even when there is no street car standing at the island or even approaching.

The cars that are in this way held up by the officers are lined up by them in two rows alongside the island in the square, and block the cars coming through the one channel available, after they have finally managed to cross the street.

To my own and to other people's opinion, which I am voicing here, this state of affairs does not tend to make it any easier for the driver who has to use his car, as winter conditions already reduce every street to one-half of its useful width.

The indiscriminate enforcement of a regulation as exemplified above, tends to convince every motorist that these laws are passed only for the annoyance of the driver and to provide a profitable source of income for the city, and not so much for the purpose of making traffic safer.

FAVORS BRICK PAVEMENT.

Berwyn, Ill., Jan. 30.—The so-called editorial writer who writes with such authority and free abandon on the relative merits between brick and concrete pavements, is invited to tour the state of Ohio, not only for proof against his unmitigated lies, but for educational purposes.

After riding peacefully over the placid surface of Ohio's twenty year old brick roads, let him return to Illinois and bump his way over the cracks and holes of Illinois' two year old concrete.

The latter may serve to give some rigidity to his spinal column and keep him from using the editorial columns of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE as a medium of spreading insidious propaganda and echoing the whimperings of the cement interests without some investigation or knowledge on his part.

AGRICULTURAL GUARDS ARE NOT LOOKING FOR RUM

Fruit Fly Quarantine Men in Florida Not Snoopers

Tourists this winter in Florida are being subjected to searches by United States department of agriculture guards of the Mediterranean fruit fly quarantine. Motorists have to stand aside while inspectors go through baggage and even look under the hoods of the cars for fruit.

The search at Florida's quanrantine lines is more thorough than the ordinary inspection of cars for liquor at the American customs stations on the Canadian border and some tourists have got the impression that the guards are looking for booze. Other motorists, familiar with police rackets, have even suspected that the quarantine officers in their display of zeal might be soliciting tips from those who would be embarrassed should a dry agent see the baggage.

Under Strict Orders.

Quarantine officials and the Florida Chamber of Commerce vigorously protest against such suspicions. For the special benefit of the tourist trade they are loud in their declarations that the fly eradicators have specific orders not in any way to trespass upon the duties of dry snoopers.

"In the course of their work," said Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chief of the federal bureau of entomology and commanding general of the war against the fruit pest, "the quarantine agents necessarily must search trucks and automobiles moving out of infected areas and they have the authority to remove any contraband fruit which they find.

"However, the quarantine agents do not have any authority, either by law or department regulation, to search automobiles for liquor, and I know of no specific instance where they have done so."

Turn Down Snooper Plan.

According to Representative Herbert J. Drane [Dem., Fla.], whose home is at Lakeland, Fla., in the eradication area, the suggestion was made by the superintendent of the Florida State Anti-Saloon league that the fruit fly inspectors be turned into prohibition agents.

"But the plan was not practical, and it was discarded by the department of agriculture," Mr. Drane said.

The Florida congressman added that he has made several automobile trips through the quarantine lines and has jokingly warned searchers of his car not to molest a mythical bottle of liquor. Each time, he said, the guards informed him that their orders were not to molest liquor even if they found it.

At Orlando, Fla., Col. Preston Ayers, in active charge of the fruit fly control, issued a statement saying that the quarantine agents are not searching for liquor and that prohibition officers are not allowed to work with the eradication inspectors.

Spanish Government Seeks to Start Auto Industry

Because upwards of 50,000,000 pesetas [about $7,000,000] are spent by Spaniards every year in payment for nearly 20,000 automobiles imported, mainly from France and the United States, the Spanish government is considering means for promoting a national automobile industry to cut down imports.

DAIRY COMPANY OUSTS HORSE AND WAGON FOR AUTO

Borden's Motorizing Its Suburban Routes.

The Borden's Farm Products company is motorizing all its milk routes in Austin, Oak Park and other western suburbs. One hundred and seventy-five modern vehicles are being put into service to replace horses and wagons that block traffic and dirty pavements.

"The public," said Dr. F. D. Walmsley, president of the dairy, "will have a quieter, safer, and more sanitary vehicle on the streets, and we believe that distribution will be more satisfactory to the consumers than with the horse and wagon."

The original cost of motor equipment is greater than for horse and wagon, and the operating expense may be greater, but it is a good investment in public good will.

Horses Hinder Autos.

There are approximately 7,500 horse drawn milk wagons in Chicago. Slow and awkward in modern traffic, they interfere with efficient use of the pavements by the 400,000 motor cars in the city.

Like the slow driving motorist on the rural highways, the horse constitutes a hazard on the city streets because automobiles must turn out of their traffic lanes to go around the animal. A further hazard lies in the fact that a horse will sometimes walk away from where it is parked while the driver is making a delivery.

125 Electric Cars.

The delay to automobiles by the old milk wagons is no inconsequential item. There is approximately 200 million dollars invested in motor cars in Chicago. Anything that decreases the efficiency of their operation one-half of one per cent means a public loss of $1,000,000 in the value of the investment.

Bordens has purchased 125 electric vehicles for the shorter routes and fifty Divco gas cars for the longer routes. The Divco is a light truck built especially for the dairy industry, designed for frequent stop, house to house delivery, with low consumption of gasoline while idling.

NEW DEVICE IS AID IN PARKING OF AUTOMOBILE

A device which may be installed on any automobile and which, it is said, will save time and space in parking, has been invented by R. W. Branson, an employé in the office of the state auditor at Jefferson City, Mo.

It consists of a set of two small auxiliary wheels that are attached to the front axle and which are hinged so that they may be dropped to the ground through a control on the instrument board. When the small wheels are touching the ground, the driver puts the car in reverse and backs up from 2 to 4 inches, raising the front end of the car on the auxiliary wheels and lifting the front wheels of the car off the ground.

As soon as this operation is carried out the steering gear automatically becomes attached to the auxiliary wheels and the driver may turn the car to either side by merely turning the steering wheel.

WATCH OUT FOR SLUSH.

Slush not only damages the finish of the car in winter. Another of its misdemeanors is to clog up the cooling fans of the radiator.

KANSAS CITY HAS SCENIC DRIVE FOR AUTOMOBILISTS

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The tourist's perplexing problem—how to see a city's outstanding sights in the shortest possible time—has been simplified here.

Thirty-nine miles of selected boulevards, comprising a two hour tour have been designated as a "scenic drive" and marked with signs that guide visitors to points of salient interest.

Kansas City, which boasts nearly 100 miles of boulevards, claims its scenic drive is the country's only such system especially designed for tourists' convenience. Various regions have marked routes through rural districts, but no other city is known to provide a similarly marked tour.

The drive is roughly loop shaped, making it possible for a stranger to enter at any point and includes the complete route. It passes through Kersey Coates drive overlooking the central industrial district; Cliff drive, Kansas City's exclusive country club residential sector and plaza, the William Rockhill Nelson properties and numerous parks.

A reproduction of a statue, "The Scout," which overlooks the whole city from a bluff, has been placed on each sign. "The Scout" is emblematic of a day when Kansas City was the country's westernmost outpost.

Except for a few blocks, the drive purposely avoids all downtown congestion. It skirts the business district.

Three-Quarters of Billion Dollars Spent on Roads

A total of 21,644 miles of roads was built in 42 states in the Union in 1929. Upwards of $744,266,000 was spent for maintenance and construction. This sum includes highway fund apportioned by the federal government to the states, and funds raised by gasoline taxes, motor vehicle registration and various other methods.

SPRING TO SEE EXTENSION OF U. S. AIR ROUTES

New Lines Contemplated by Operators.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

Like the flowers that bloom in the spring the rambling vine of domestic air routes spreading across the map of America is expected to sprout new shoots with the beginning of warm weather flying. Balmy days will see a quickening activity in the air with new lines blossoming out in all sections of the country to accommodate the growing army of sky travelers who prefer to do their flying in the milder months.

Warm weather will not be the only stimulus for the extension of air lines. The wholesale cut in air passenger rates and the amazing increase in the number of persons taking to the air has already taxed facilities of the present air lines and is expected to bring more ships into service to fly more miles each day.

Convalescing from Stock Crash.

Further reason for the expansion of air services is the expectation of the operators that congress will act favorably on the recommendation of Postmaster General Brown that passenger planes be enlisted to carry the mails in order to add to the number of mail flights and foster the development of new air lines carrying both passengers and mail. Then, too, the aviation industry, now convalescing from the punishment dealt by the collapse of the stock market, is expected to be back on its feet again looking for new territory to exploit with air transportation.

All this will have large significance for Chicago. Present indications are that the new development will bring Chicago into direct contact by air not only with many regions in the United States now unserved by air lines but with many new commercial centers in Latin and South America and in Canada.

Improved Schedules Needed.

Chief among the air routes now contemplated is the line from Chicago to Miami, Fla., tentatively planned by Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc. While the company has not yet gone into the matter of schedules, it is believed that T. A. T. is aiming chiefly for direct connection with the planes of the Pan-American Airways flying up from South America, Central America, and the West Indies.

Improvement of the schedule of planes flying between Miami and Chicago has long been needed to make the air mail service to the south effective. At present the mail from South America arrives in Miami at 3:55 p. m. and lies in the postoffice there for some 20 hours until it is flown out to Atlanta the next day at 12:30 p. m. Another delay is met with at Atlanta.

The proposed Miami route would pass through St. Louis. Other extensions now being considered by T. A. T. are lines from Columbus, O., to Pittsburgh and New York and from Chicago to Kansas City and Clovis, N. M. The latter would provide complete air service from here to the Pacific coast.

Air Mail to Canada.

Extension of the Chicago-Twin Cities air route to Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been recommended to Postmaster General Brown by W. Irving Glover, assistant postmaster general in charge of air mail service. The recommendation followed a conference between Canadian postoffice officials and Mr. Glover regarding further extension of air mail service between the United States and Canada.

An air passenger service is now maintained between St. Paul and Winnipeg with stops at St. Cloud, Alexandria and Fergus Falls, Minn.; and Fargo and Grand Forks, N. D. Mr. Glover expressed the belief that the devolpment of business over the proposed new route would justify the extension of the present line.

"I was greatly impressed," said Mr. Glover last week, "with the great progress in air mail being made by the Canadian postoffice department. We in the United States are so busy with our own air mail service that we do not realize that the Canadian routes flown cover over two million miles a year. Their new service, which will go into operation in February and which is known as the 'Prairie Service,' extending from Winnipeg west via Regina to Calgary and Edmonton, will be the second big link to be forged in the Canadian transcontinental line.

Overcome Hazards.

"From a study which has been made by the two departments of the amount of mail from the Twin Cities to Winnipeg we believe that such an extension will result in inestimable value to both the United States and Canada, and such a recommendation has been made to Postmaster General Brown."

Mr. Glover went on to say that too much praise cannot be given the Canadians for the manner in which they are maintaining their present air mail routes as well as the steps they are taking in the direction of extensions of those routes now in existence.

"Flying conditions which we consider unusual in this country on some of our routes," said Mr. Glover, "are met in Canada as every day performances. Hazards are faced and overcome by Canadian air mail flyers which would not be undertaken by those who carry the mails in the air in this country. The records of on-time performances made by Canadian flyers are outstanding."

After the establishment of the St. Paul-Winnipeg route the Toronto-Buffalo route will be made to serve both ways. A route will be established between Great Falls, Mont., and Lethbridge, Alberta, and in the future the present service from Seattle to Victoria, which is used to catch trans-Pacific boats, will be extended to Vancouver. The Lethbridge service, it is understood, would wait upon the extension of a spur of the Canadian Prairie route to that point.

HUNTING WEATHER

The Boeing system has devised a mobile weather station for use in gathering information on storms originating north and south of its transcontinental air mail line between Chicago and San Francisco. The weather bureau on wheels, shown in the photograph, has been put into service in Wyoming. Attendants are shown making observations which they will broadcast to the mail carriers. LIGHT SIGNALS TO GUIDE PLANES AT COAST FIELD

Will Be Operated from Tower.

Flashing lights spelling messages to aviators in the air and comprising a system as complete as the block signal systems used by railroad companies, will control all airplanes operating from the new Western Air Express airport on Valley boulevard, near Alhambra, Cal., according to an announcement made by C. C. Cole, superintendent of operations for the company.

The lights are to be operated by electricity from a glass tower atop the passenger depot, which is now nearing completion. From this tower, dispatchers equipped with binoculars will be able to watch the surrounding horizon for fifty miles or more.

Red and Green Lights.

Every departing plane will be moved to the depot line where it will be halted by a red light. When the ship is loaded and ready to leave the depot a green light will be flashed. The plane will then taxi to the end of the take off runway where it will again face a red light, and it will remain stationary until the dispatcher flashes a green light, showing that all is clear.

There will also be a direct telephone from the end of the runway to the dispatcher's office so that the pilot may talk to the dispatcher if there is any unusual delay.

Incoming planes will be controled by a dot and dash system of flashed signals. These signals will be given from the top of the tower and will be flashed steadily until the pilot has signaled his understanding of them.

Dot and Dash System.

One push of a button will keep the signals going until the reply has been received. If two planes approach the field at the same time, the code signals will designate which ship shall make the first landing and the second plane must remain in the air until it has been signaled that all is clear.

The new passenger depot is to be a four story structure. The lower floor is to house the waiting room, restaurant, baggage room and airmail postoffice. The second floor will be devoted to offices for operation officials. The two upper floors will be a glass enclosed tower accommodating the radio operators and the dispatchers.

NEWARK RUNS ITS AIRPORT AT NEGLIGIBLE LOSS

NEWARK, N. J.—Meeting the problem that will eventually confront every city-owned airport system concerning the financing of the projects, Newark officials announced themselves satisfied with the income for the first seven months of operation.

Although the income did not exceed expenses, they said that the loss was cut to so low a figure as to be almost negligible when it is considered that it is a municipal project.

During the first seven months of operation the income has been $19,541.49 and the expenses $23,506.57, showing a deficit of only $3,956.08, or about 8.3 per cent of the total operating costs.

The income has come from leases, $2,258.30; hangar space, $7,290.70; ten per cent tax on passenger flights, $6,055.85; automobile parking, $2,960.24, and receipts from mail companies, $596.64.

Railroad and steamship facilities adjoin the airport. A canal leads from the bay to the north side of the airport, which when finished will consist of 420 acres. The first commercial steamship to leave the dock did so in 1922. In 1928 the traffic had grown to 700 sailings and arrivals a year, the handling of 16,000 carloads of inbound and outbound freight, and 75,000 truck operations. The total income from rentals and dockage for five years amounted to only $40,00. The total revenue from the post last year was $166,000.

The airport, when completed, will be divided into various zones for flying. One zone, having hard-surfaced runways, will be reserved for mail and passenger transport planes. A zone will be reserved for air schools and the National Guard will have an air squadron school. A sight-seeing zone and a landing area will bring other revenue. One strip of land adjoining the state highway, 400 feet deep and 4,000 feet long, will be reserved for a use not yet determined. Fifty acres on the eastern edge of the field will be reserved for manufacturers of airplanes.

QUESTIONS

Questions relating to aviation are answered in this section by Maj. R. W. Schroeder, famous world war flyer, who formerly held the world's altitude record. Inquiries should be addressed to the Aviation Department, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Q.—What is the best way to get to Los Angeles by air?—S. L. C., Chicago.

A.—There are five air-rail connections between Chicago and Los Angeles. They are here listed so that you may choose your own route. 1. Western Air Express. Leave Chicago 8:15 p. m., arrive Los Angeles 8 p. m. next evening. 2. Universal Air lines. Leave Chicago 9:45 a. m., arrive Los Angeles 9:15 a. m., second day. 3. Transcontinental Air Transport. Leave Chicago 11 p. m., arrive Los Angeles 4:45 p. m., second day. 4. Safeway. Leave Chicago 11:55 p. m., arrive Los Angeles 4:40 p. m., second day. 5. Universal Air lines and Western Air Express. Leave Chicago 9:45 a. m., arrive Los Angeles 8 p. m. second day. The latter is an all air line with an over night layover at Kansas City. Departure from Chicago in the evening indicates that rail service is provided at this end of the route. The fares range from $109 to $143. Full details and arrangements for transportation may be secured at the air travel bureau and consolidated ticket office in the Palmer house arcade. The telephone number is State 7111.

Q.—What is the radio directional beacon?—F. M., La Porte, Ind.

A.—The radio directional beacon is a series of continuous signals broadcast from ground stations located along the principal air lines and received by pilots in flight. When the pilot is flying to the left of his designated course he hears a series of dots. When he is to the right of this course he hears a series of dashes. Turning in the proper direction the pilot brings his plane into the proper course where he hears a blending of the two signals. The radio "path" thus formed narrows as the pilot approaches an airport.

Q.—Can pontoons be used effectively on the big tri-motored transport planes?—W. S., Chicago.

A.—The Fokker tri-motored ship used by Amelia Earhart in her trans-Atlantic flight was fitted with pontoons. Ford transports have also been used with pontoon gear. The pontoons used in these ships have to be larger and more sturdily built, of course, than ordinary pontoons.

Q.—Where did the famous blind flight, performed by Jimmie Doolittle, take place and how long did he stay in the air?—R. L., Milwaukee, Wis.

A.—Lieut. Doolittle made his blind flight at Mitchel field, L. I. He stayed in the air fifteen minutes and during the time flew about over the field.

Q.—Please tell me where I can get a job where I can learn to be an expert aviation mechanic, all the way from the bottom to the top. I am now an expert automobile mechanic and 26 years of age. Will start work with a small salary. I will also move to some other city or airport if possibilities are better and bigger.—C. B., Chicago.

A.—Your best opportunity would be to make personal calls on service managers of airports nearest to you. If you cannot make connections there, then you would have to write factories or airports out of town.

Q.—1. Can a dirigible tow a glider? 2. Has the R-101 a larger gas capacity than the Graf Zeppelin? What is the capacity of each?
A. G. T., Bloomington, Ill.

A.—1. Yes. 2. The R-101 is of 5,000,000 cubic feet capacity and the Graf is about 3,500,000 cubic feet.

Q.—[1] In a reference book I saw a picture of an airplane, which was said to be used in the world war. It resembled a Spad but it had a radial air-cooled motor with cowling. Was a Spad powered with any other motor than a Hisso? [2] What kind of a motor was used in a Nieuport?—J. D., Chicago, Ill.

A.—The Spad fighting plane was powered only with Hispano Suiza motors. [2] The Nieuport used only rotary motors of 120 horsepower and the last of the war utilized the 160 Gnome.

Q.—Where can I obtain a photograph of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh?—F. C. Sowa, Chicago.

A.—You might try the Trans-Continental Air Transport at Columbus, O.

LOW SPEED MISSING.

If the engine misses at low speeds even after it has been thoroughly warmed up on a cold day, look at the plug points. If they are set too close they will cause missing and it will be more noticeable at low than at higher engine speeds.

NEW DEVICE TO AID PILOTS IN "BLIND" FLYING

Artificial Horizon Is Being Tested.

Another step toward solving the air mail pilots' problem of flying "blind" in fog and thick weather is being undertaken by National Air Transport at the Chicago municipal airport, where tests are being made of an "artificial horizon," a device mounted on the instrument board of an airplane. The new instrument tells the pilot at a glance if his ship is not in a proper flying position and enables him to correct it, even if he is flying in weather so thick that he can see nothing outside the cockpit.

The instrument, which is being tested on a N. A. T. Douglas mail and express transport, is one of four in existence and was perfected by Elmer T. Sperry, noted inventor. It is known as the Sperry "Horizon" and is the same as was used by Lieut. James Doolittle in his recent series of blind flying tests in which he took off and landed an airplane while completely inclosed in a hooded cockpit.

May Revolutionize Flying.

The Sperry device may revolutionize the art of instrument flying and will be a big factor in overcoming bad weather and eliminating delays in air transportation, according to N. A. T. officials. When the weather becomes so thick that the pilot loses sight of the ground and the horizon fades from view the pilot is forced to resort to his instruments to keep his ship level. Although airplane instruments have been greatly improved during the last year and pilots have become adept in using them, the artificial horizon is hailed as an invaluable contribution to air transport because of its accuracy and simplicity.

When Pilot Paul Kaniut of N. A. T. was forced to use his parachute while flying the mail from Kansas City to Chicago last spring he told afterward of how he was caught in a dense fog which closed behind and forced him to fly "blind." Suddenly his air speed indicator showed 170 miles an hour and he knew his plane was falling out of control, but he could not correct it because he could see nothing in the dense fog and his instruments were so disturbed by the exceptionally rough air of the storm area that they were useless. The artificial horizon would not have been affected under such conditions, experts say, and would make it possible for a pilot to keep his ship under control.

Simple in Appearance.

The "Horizon" is simple in appearance, consisting of a dial tinted to represent the horizon. Across the dial extends a line which at all times is parallel to the true horizon, in reference to the position of the airplane. On the face of the dial is painted the likeness of a small airplane. When the pilot is forced to resort to instrument flying he can keep his ship in the proper attitude by correcting it with his controls so that the line across the dial of the instrument is in correct relation to the tiny airplane on the face of the dial. The mechanism of the device is actuated by a gyroscope.

Three T. A. C. Bases Made Forecasting Stations

Three bases of the Thompson Aeronautical corporation, air mail operators in Michigan, have been equipped and established as divisional weather forecasting stations by the United States weather bureau department, Richard T. [Tex] Marshall, vice president of the company, announces. The depots equipped to serve as important branches in the nation's weather forecasting system are at Bay City, Kalamazoo and Pontiac, Mich. These stations will report meteorological conditions throughout Michigan and furnish useful information to air mail pilots and other flyers, Mr. Marshall states.

BUILD NEW AIRPORT.

DETROIT, Mich.—A modern new type hangar to cost $70,000 is being planned by the Thompson Aeronautical corporation, it was announced here by R. C. Marshall, vice president and general manager of the firm.

AVIATION BRINGING DISTANT ALASKAN DISTRICTS TOGETHER

Fairbanks, Alaska.—Gov. Parks, one of the foremost aviation enthusiasts in Alaska, announces that there are 57 airports in the territory now, representing an expenditure of $150,000.

Realizing the commercial advantages of airplane transportation and communication in this "land of distances," the public has encouraged the construction of the landing fields wholeheartedly, he said.

"Districts that formerly were weeks away from here and Nome are now brought within a few hours of flying," Gov. Parks said. "Business has boomed in outlying towns and villages. All phases of activity have benefited, even the courts. Jurists are transported to places to settle suits and try criminal cases that were before neglected."

Connections of the large cities in Alaska with those in Canada and the United States by airways will be the next scheme exploited by airlines, the governor intimated. The growth of aviation in Alaska now that the pioneering work is done, will be gradual, he expects.

Flying conditions in Alaska during the summer are ideal, air officials contend, pointing out that they compare favorably with weather conditions in California and the Pacific coast.

AIRPORT EVERY 600 MILES, HOPE OF GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Hopes that before the end of 1930 an airport will be established in every 600 square miles of territory in the United States are held by officials of the aeronautics division of the department of commerce.

Such a project will be aided by literature distributed in various strategic communities by the government, it was said. Speakers of the aeronautics division will stress the importance of airports, using as their theme that the "future of aviation is on the ground."

Following an extensive survey by the government, it was declared that the saturation point for airports will not be reached until an adequate landing field is provided for every 200 square miles.

During the last 18 months $300,000,000 has been expended in this country for airports by more than 1,000 communities, the report of the government survey shows. It is conservatively predicted that upwards of $500,000,000 will be spent in the next year and a half in airport development.

TO MAP FLOOD AREAS.

In preparation for flood relief measures, the government has let contracts for aerial mapping of the Mississippi and Red River valleys.

" . . . The Viking is the most satisfactory car I have ever owned"

Mrs. Van Doorn and myself are more than pleased with the Viking car we purchased from you last summer.

This is the eighth car we have owned, and it is without question the most satisfactory of all.

We have driven the car, now, several thousand miles and its ease of handling, quick acceleration and efficient brakes have been a constant source of comfort and enjoyment to us both.

Viking appeals quite as much to women as it does to men. Women admire its tailored smartness, its fine upholsteries and its luxurious appointments. They enjoy its finger-tip handling ease, its instant responsiveness, its sure, safe braking.

Men like these things, too. But even more often you hear them enthuse about its wealth of power, its smooth, swift pick-up, or the uncanny way it holds the road at high speeds. And everyone appreciates its splendid day-in-and-day-out dependability.

We know owners like the Viking. They tell us so. And you'll know it, too, once you have examined a Viking—and driven it yourself. Come in today, or any day.

PLAN 18 STORY APARTMENTS AT CLARK-CHESTNUT

Each of 470 Suites Will Have a Radio.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Financing is all arranged and contracts have been let for the erection of an eighteen story apartment building at the southwest corner of North Clark and Chestnut streets. This will be the first modern tall flat building on Clark between the river and Lincoln park. According to Byron H. Jillson of Jillson & Pierce, architects of the structure, the total investment in land and building will be approximately $1,700,000.

The site is owned by Gianetti brothers, who will be the owners of the new apartment building. The five Gianetti brothers have been operating restaurants in Chicago for the last three decades and are the owners of the Knickerbocker, at 3131 West Madison street, a café where Italian cuisine is featured.

The quintet of brothers will have a twenty-four hour café, with all day and night catering service a feature, on the first floor of the new North Clark street apartment building. The catering service feature, it is announced by the Gianetti brothers, will be available for all parts of the near north side.

Radio in Every Room.

In addition to the Gianetti café there'll be seven stores fronting on both Clark and Chestnut streets. The upper seventeen floors will contain 470 units of single rooms and baths. It is stated that the rentals will be popular priced. These units are so laid out by Jillson & Pierce that two, three or four rooms can be connected if a tenant wants an apartment larger than one room.

Radio service will be a feature of the new building. There will be a centralized radio plant with speakers [not merely ear phones] in every room. These will give every tenant the selection of at least four stations. They will be toned down, it is promised, so that even should the entire 470 radio speakers be pouring out programs a the same time, no one of the building's tenants will be bothered by his or her neighbor's selection.

According to Mr. Jillson work will start the middle of this month, with the expectation of having the building ready for occupancy by Dec. 1. The structure has not yet been christened and the owners contemplate having a competition later on for an appropriate name.

The building design is modernistic, with a liberal use of setbacks and with an interestingly irregular roof line.

Noisy Lift Gates Taboo.

As this will be the tallest structure of its kind for several blocks and will be visible for a long distance, it will have all of its exterior walls of face brick. The color will be medium brown. The trim will be in colored terra cotta. Plate glass will be used throughout in all windows.

The building will have four elevators and the architects stress the fact that instead of the clanging doors which even some of our most modern buildings still have, the opening and shutting of elevator gates will be absolutely noiseless.

Mr. Jillson recently made a careful study of some of Detroit's newest skyscrapers, which, by the way, have many little luxuries and innovations which Chicago architects still overlook. He found that some of the newest buildings there are so noiseless, with silent elevator service, deadened floors, walls, and ceilings, that a typical Chicago loop office building corridor or office seems like a foundry by comparison.

The Mutual Construction company will be the builders of the new North Clark street building. The mechanical engineering was laid out by George A. Muir and the structural engineering was done by Sam Klein.

REBORI LEASES TWO FLOORS IN NEW SKYSCRAPER

Three good sized leases are reported by Clark & Trainer for the new La Salle-Wacker building, now climbing skyward at the southeast corner of Chicago's river boulevard and its money lane. Rebori & Wentworth, architects, have taken the entire 40th and 41st floors, in the tower section. The 40th will be used as a drafting room and the 41st as a clients' room and private offices of the partners. The clients' room will have full length windows, and the ceiling, sixteen feet high, will be of glass and open to the sky.

The D. S. Pate Lumber company, one of Chicago's oldest concerns of its kind, has taken space and will move from the Conway building. This concern is the outgrowth of D. F. Chase & Co., one of Chicago's largest wholesale lumber concerns, established in the '70s, which later became D. F. Chase & Bro. It was then known as Chase & Pate, and later, on the retirement of David F. Chase, the firm name was changed to the D. S. Pate Lumber company. D. S. Pate, who started with D. F. Chase as a bookkeeper, died several years ago. The firm is one of the largest of its kind in the country.

The third lease reported for the La Salle-Wacker building was closed with Seefurth Service, Inc., an advertising agency.

Four North Shore Women Organize Realty Compauy

We are announcing herewith the establishment of a company, to be known as the Real Estate Service, which is to do a general real estate business in the north shore suburbs. Behind the somewhat commonplace name of the concern is a bit of romantic interest, for four attractive young women are the firm.

Women engaged in the real estate business is no novelty, because many realty firms have feminine members in their sales forces, but to have four young ladies conduct a business without having to be annoyed by a cigar smoking boss is something again. The only male exception in the enterprise will be a gent who will drop around once a week to wash the office windows.

And now to introduce the young ladies:

First, there is Miss Florence Cook. She was associated with E. Summer Walker for six years, specializing in riparian rights property. She has long been a resident of Wilmette.

Then comes Miss Christine Baumann, who might be said to be well steeped in learning. She is a graduate of the North Shore Country Day school and Smith college and she attended the University of Chicago. At college she specialized in economics and she has some claim to fame in the possession of a grandfather, Edward Baumann, the architect who designed the water works tower at Chicago avenue and the old Chamber of Commerce building which was torn down to make way for the Foreman Bank building.

Then there is Mrs. Louvia S. Pittman, who recently was manager of the Spanish Court properties in No Man's Land. Mrs. Pittman during the war worked for the emergency ship building corporation in Washington, and also worked with Roger Babson, the statistician, in propaganda work.

And finally there is Mrs. Viola Robertson Smith, for several years in the Evanston office of Quinlan & Tyson. Mrs. Smith is the daughter of Harry E. Robertson, formerly with Cluett, Peabody & Co., and now retired to divide his time between his residences in Winnetka and Crystal Beach, Fla.

At the moment of writing the firm has no officers. This situation is to be relieved when lots are drawn to decide who will be president, vice president, secretary, janitor, etc. The offices of the company are located at 553 Lincoln avenue, in the Ayres Boal building, and the telephones are Winnetka 3450 and 3451.

IGOE BUILDING AGENT REPORTS LEASES CLOSED

Joseph W. Hickey, agent for the new Igoe building at Van Buren and Jefferson streets, reports having closed leases in the structure involving a total term rental of $1,080,000. The Franklin company, 720 South Dearborn street, printers and engravers, has taken two floors. John S. Swift & Co., planographers of St. Louis, Chicago and New York, who are moving from La Salle street, have taken an entire floor. The H. O. Berger company, embossers, has taken 17,000 square feet and the Simplex Printing company has taken additional space to give it an entire floor. The following firms have leased 8,000 square feet of space: Lehnen & Bergstrand, printers; the Campaign Press, direct mail advertisers; the Enterprise Typesetting company; J. Carne & Co., rulers; J. C. Clougher, printers, and the Van Buren Engraving company.

News of the Architects

Gilbert T. Hall and Richard McPherson Cabeen have been made junior associates in the architectural firm of Holabird & Root. The firm is composed of Edward A. Renwick, John Holabird and John W. Root. Col. Horatio B. Hackett also is associated with the organization.

NORTHWEST SIDE LUMBER COMPANY PLANS EXPANSION

In acquiring the yards and building formerly occupied by the Harvey Supply company, dealers in plumbing and heating supplies in Harvey, the Northwest Side Lumber company announces that this is an important step in the development of its program of expansion.

"It's our intention to acquire additional lumber yards as fast as possible in order that we may render the most efficient service possible to our customers," said I. A. Lurya, president of the company. "Our yards will be situated so as to take care of construction jobs being done by our company in the vicinity of the various yards.

"Our new yards in Harvey will service the Calumet district, Flossmoor; Chicago Heights, Homewood, Blue Island, and other adjacent residential communities.

"The recent statement of the Northwest Side Lumber company for the year ending Dec. 30, 1929, again shows a substantial increase in business. The company has handled more remodeling jobs and modernized more homes during 1929 than ever before and every indication points to even greater business this year."

NEGOTIATE SUBURBAN LEASE.

The Modern Home Devices company has leased space at 193 Marion street, Oak Park, in the new Marion Street building, through W. P. England of the George R. Hemingway organization.

SPINSTER WINS $250 PRIZE FOR DEFINING HOME

10,090 Submit Entries in Realtors' Contest.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

"Home is a domestic sanctuary—wrought out of desire—built into memory—where kindred bonds unite the family in sharing labors, leisure, joy, and sorrow."

With the above Miss F. Luena Williams, a fifty year old high school teacher of Brookline, Mass., won the $250 prize offered last November by the National Association of Real Estate Boards for the best definition of the word home.

Herbert U. Nelson, executive secretary of the association, states that 10,090 definitions were submitted, the entries coming from all over the world and from every walk of life. Some came on crested stationery and others on bits of yellow wrapping paper.

From Many People.

College professors, members of congress, laborers, poets, servants, ministers, priests, rabbis, lawyers, authors, clerks, and business men were among the classes of people who submitted their thoughts as to home.

"Miss Williams' definition," says Mr. Nelson, "expresses the sentimental way in which millions of people feel about their abiding places, because through the centuries home to all people has meant more than just shelter. But until this time no one has ever expressed the real beauty of the home idea. Read Miss Williams' definition, and you feel the scent of flowers in carefully tended gardens, you see bright, hospitable fires, and you hear the happy voices of contented people."

Discusses Her Definition.

Back in the Boston suburb where she teaches home economics in the Weymouth High school Miss Williams grew tired of living in a boarding house. So she drew plans for a small bungalow and three years ago built it. The home which inspired her effort occupies a lot 80x100 feet. It is of cedar shingles and, standing on a terrace, is surrounded by flower beds, vegetable gardens, vines, and shrubs.

"My house contains the family treasures that speak to me of those who have gone," remarks Miss Williams in discussing her definition. "It was because of this dear little house and what it contains of sacrifice, death, and memory that I wrote my definition."

Judges of the contest were Leonard P. Reaume of Detroit, president of the national association; Harry Kissell of Springfield, O., first vice president, and Mr. Nelson.

Book Rental Firm Leases Shop at 620 Diversey Blvd.

The Rent-a-Book Shop, Inc., has leased a store at 620 Diversey boulevard from the Rienzi company. This is the firm's fifth north side store. H. W. Croxton & Co. were brokers.

PLAN TO ASK U. S. AID IN FINANCING HOME BUILDING

Want Federal Reserve to Help.

BY THOMAS WREN.

American banking institutions will be asked to coöperate with federal agencies in a construction credit program intended to stimulate small home building. Plans with this end in view were discussed at the recent New Orleans convention of the Associated General Contractors of America.

One of the speakers on the subject was Oscar W. Rosenthal, head of the Associated Builders of Chicago, who suggested that the federal reserve banks be requested to procure the credit needs of prospective home owners in their districts. Sufficient funds by member banks would then be set aside for small building purposes.

Such procedure, said Mr. Rosenthal, would give the great mass of "white collar" wage earners a "break" and incidentally an opportunity to own their own homes. Favorable reaction would be experienced by building workers, many of whom are unemployed, while the stimulation of small home building would be in harmony with President Hoover's desire to stimulate employment.

Walbridge Lauds Plan.

George B. Walbridge, the acting general manager of the Associated General Contractors of America, also spoke on the plan.

"The diversion of credit from speculative to industrial and business channels is the most important single contribution the federal government can make at the present stage of the program to revive construction," said Walbridge.

"The funds could be maintained at the main and branch banks of the federal reserve banks and could be loaned on liberal interest terms through the banks. Interest rates would be low enough to attract seekers of home building credit, and the loans would carry provision for amortization over a long term to avoid the possibility of refinancing."

Chicago Wage Scale.

The following wage scale shows rates of pays received by Chicago building trades and date of expiration of wage contract with some unit of the Building Construction Employers' association and Associated Builders' association:

Trade.	Wage Rate Expires.	Wage Rate.
Arch. Iron Wks	May 31, 1930	$1.62½
Struct. Iron Wks	June 1, 1930	1.62½

While Chicago rate of building workers are highest in history the scales paid in some eastern cities to some trades are higher than local pay rates.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

AN INSULATION FOR THE HOUSE ALREADY BUILT

(Next week will appear the third article on insulation: those types known as "blankets," "quiltings," and "felts.")

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

LOUISE BARGELT.

Insulation may be older than written history, since crude attempts to secure it were made long ere man commenced to scribble on stone or parchment his mental and physical reactions, but really warm houses are new to history, being a product of this last glorious decade in which we are living.

Today we shall discuss certain types of insulation which come under the general classification of "fills." These "fills" are not only excellent for homes under construction, but are particularly suited for use in already built homes, since their application involves no disturbance of the home interior.

Home owners who are building new homes find it an easy matter to secure adequate insulation. It is not always so easy to do the work after the house has been built. And because there are so many homes already built whose walls and roofs fairly cry aloud for added protection that their interiors may be warmer, freer from draughts, cooler in summer, and heating costs lower, these types of insulation which can be applied in the walls of a home without disturbance of the interior are attracting wide attention.

Is Easily Insulated.

"If we could only afford oil or gas," many a home owner sighs. Well, he could afford these effortless methods of heating if his house were insulated. And it can be insulated, even though it has stood for twenty years or longer, so efficiently that heating costs will be reduced and gas or oil made easily possible.

For there is a close relationship between the heating apparatus of a house and its insulation; the heating system is designed to distribute heat when it is wanted in the quickest and most efficient way, and insulation is the material which makes that distribution of heat doubly efficient at much lowered cost.

One excellent form of fill insulation which may be blown into the open spaces in the walls and ceilings is a finely spun rock of woollike appearance. It is produced from the fusion of a siliceous limestone in a cupola under tremendous heat. The finished material has the appearance of raw cotton, light in weight and yet fireproof and permanent.

Used for Cold Storage.

This type of thick insulation is not new in the building industry, as it has been used for years by cold storage and refrigerator companies. It is only recently that it has been brought into the domestic field. Now a home owner may secure the services of a manufacturer in sending out machines to his home to blow in this product between the walls, and ceilings, and roof of an already built home. The cost is reasonable for this work; for this particular rock wool insulation, it runs about 16 cents per square foot for four inches—the thickness generally advised.

Heat loss at the present time through attic and side walls is inexcusable extravagance. This type of "fill" insulator prevents infiltration of air through cracks and crevices and permits, incidentally, the better control of humidity in the home.

There are other types of "fill" insulators on the market which are being widely used.

There is a "flake" made from gypsum and because of this gypsum it is naturally a fire barrier and permanent. Another gypsum product is manufactured to be mixed with water, and this, expanding and hardening into a cellular mass, is applied in partitions, floors, and ceiling spaces.

Wood fills from mineral products are manufactured, noncombustible, of course, as sound deadeners and they are used on outside walls between studding, for floors and for filling spaces between rafters from eaves to collar beams.

There are regranulated cork fills and there is a fill of a material which consists of fine glasslike fibers of rock material which entrap tiny air cells that comprise some 92 per cent of its volume. It is also used in thicknesses of 3½ to 4 inches in walls, between the studding over the ceilings and between the roof rafters.

Shortly another article will appear describing those well known types of insulators which come under the classification of "blankets or quiltings and felts."

WALNUT GIVES LITTLE TROUBLE FROM WARPING

Lovers of walnut will be glad to know—if they are not already possessed of this information—that American walnut ranks high as a nonwarping wood.

Some people incline to the opinion that it is the quality of workmanship which determines whether or not a wood will warp; others hold that atmospheric conditions govern this same warping. While both quality and atmospheric conditions do have their effect much of the cause lies within the wood itself.

The structure of the minute fibers as well as the moisture content in the wood differs in different trees. As a result some woods shrink largely in one direction and they are the ones which have a tendency to warp the most. Where radial and lateral shrinkage is more uniform the tendency to warp is less. With walnut, it is claimed as its moisture content evaporates, the fibers by shrinking more or less equally in all directions avoid those undue stresses which tend to produce warping and checking.

BUSTLING YOUNG AMERICA PAUSES TO STUDY NATURE

Noted University Florists Train Our Youth.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Bustling young America, in search of business and the manifold comforts of modern city or town life, occasionally halts long enough to consider some of the inspiration and joy that only nature can furnish in plant life.

That this is true was ably shown in a recent visit to the attractive greenhouses and floricultural buildings on the University of Illinois campus. Here, under the kindly guidance of Prof. H. B. Dorner, students are learning a profession among flower pots and cuttings that is typical of the nationwide interest of the rising generation in the more cultural side of life.

Europeans have gained a merited reputation as gardeners. Yet there are famous florists in this country as well, under whom youngsters are eager to work and learn, Prof. Dorner pointed out. In this state school, similar in most respects to those in other states, the four years of study are regarded as an "exposure" to the theory and method of modern floriculture.

Its graduates, whose progress is watched constantly by their teacher, are sent out to start at the bottom of the ladder, yet with a training that can help them to more rapid advancement than otherwise might be the case. In many instances, he says, they are put to work in the greenhouse and their possession of degrees is never disclosed to other workers.

That there is a fine code of ethics among the better class of florists was pointed out by Prof. Dorner as we chatted among the transplantings, budding roses, carnations and orchids. These men know their overhead costs, keep abreast of the times in presenting the new and seasonable flowers, and make it a business practice to encourage wider appreciation of flowers by reasonable charges and full value in both flowers and service.

During the school year the students study as in any classroom, yet find their laboratory schedules devoted to actual greenhouse work, the preparation of attractive bouquets, wreaths, and many other commercial floral offerings. Once each year the state association of florists takes a few days off to go to the university for "brushing up" on the developments in this calling.

AGRICULTURAL QUESTIONS

Farm and garden questions of general interest will be answered to the limit of space in this department. Individual replies will be made to specific questions if stamped, self-addressed envelope is inclosed. Address letters to Agricultural Editor, Chicago Tribune.

BURDOCK RIDDANCE.

What is a satisfactory method of disposing of burdocks? R. R. M.

REPLY.

During the dormant season, when the plants are dry and brittle, they may be snapped off, piled compactly and burned. Of course, the hotter the fire the more certain the destruction to the burs. When the plants and burrs are wet with snow they may be pulled off by hand, using leather gloves.

Being a biennial weed, burdock may be plowed or cultivated any time before seed production. Mowing when the plant is in the blooming stage will also prevent seed production and it naturally kills the plant, according to J. J. Pieper, University of Illinois. Such chemical weed killers as chlorates may be used when cultivation or picking is impractical. The university will send upon request, without charge, their new booklet on chlorates. The United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., also distributes a folder on chemical weed killers.

U.S. OF TODAY MADE BY ITS BATTLESHIPS

Sea Power Carries It On to Victory.

BY CLIFFORD RAYMOND.

For fifteen years prior to 1880 maritime nations had been building ironclads. The United States in that period had built none. Sheer luck, the luck which fools are supposed sometimes to enjoy, had saved the United States. Its wooden ship period in an ironclad age had not been tranquil. It was full of threat throughout, but the government came to its senses in time to have a navy when one of these threats broke into war. In 1898 the consequences of recovered naval power on the sea were:

1. Dewey on the Asiatic station was able to enter Manila bay, dispose of the Spanish squadron under Admiral Montojo, establish the United States in the far east where other commercial nations with Asiatic bases were competing for trade, and to make his country, willing or unwilling, a recognized power.

2. Sampson (with Schley) was able to defeat the Spanish squadron of Admiral Cervera in Cuban waters, make the capture of Santiago certain and the Spanish military position in Cuba impossible, spare the badly handled American army many sacrifices and the nation great expense, give it control of the Caribbean, and make the Panama canal possible.

THE BATTLE OF MANILA

George Dewey was executive officer of the sidewheeler Mississippi, a steam frigate, when Farragut took the federal squadron into the Mississippi, ran the forts, reduced the defenses of New Orleans and cleared the river up to Port Hudson.

As a young naval officer, Dewey learned how a resolute sea captain could take ships by forts, disregard torpedoes in mined waters, get over bars, cope with armored rams and fire boats, reduce land fortifications, and give an enemy city over to a small invading and occupying army. That is, he thus saw under a perfect teacher how to do what he did later with ships of his own.

"Farragut has always been my ideal of the navy officer," Dewey wrote, "urbane, decisive, indomitable. Whenever I have been in a difficult situation, or in the midst of such a confusion of details that the simple and right thing to do seemed hazy, I have often asked myself, 'What would Farragut do?' In the course of the preparations for Manila bay I often asked myself this question, and I confess that I was thinking of him the night we entered the bay, and with the conviction that I was doing precisely what he would have done."

Moving Advertisements.

After the civil war the United States, politically uninterested in the navy, again abandoned the sea. The old wooden ships were kept as much as possible out of home ports, on foreign stations, where they advertised the naval negligibility of this country, but kept American citizens from seeing too much of the deplorable conditions. It's a wonder that the officers and men of the old frigates could keep their spirits. A psychological depression might have made the navy worthless in men as it was in ships. It is to the honor of the service that this did not happen.

The dangerous and pathetic condition of the navy forced attention in 1881, and three years later the new ships were coming to the sea. Another period of naval neglect had been ended and consequently the sea tragedy of 1898 was not to be American, but Spanish.

Gallantry and Neglect.

In late April, 1898, the ships of Admiral Montojo lay in Manila bay, awaiting an expected declaration of war by the United States and whatever might come of it. The American Asiatic squadron, prepared for war, Admiral Dewey commanding, was known to be at Hongkong, 600 miles away.

Montojo had the old ships, but he was not in a desperate situation if his defenses were used as they were designed, but not equipped, to be used.

Manila bay is entered by two channels. One is Boca Grande [the great mouth]. The other is Boca Chica [little mouth]. The headlands are high and the channel entrance is divided by the islands of Corregido and Caballo. Boca Chica is about two miles wide; Boca Grande four miles, except for the small island, El Fraile, which reduces the width to three miles. These islands are rocky and defensible. But before coming to the entrance to Manila bay the invading squadron must navigate Subig bay, which was regarded as even better for defense.

The American squadron which Montojo must expect, once war is declared, is 600 miles away, and once neutrality proclamations have been issued, it hasn't a base. It has no place of refuge or supply, or refueling, revictualing, or repair. It has no place to lick its wounds or renew its strength. Once it commits itself to an attack on Montojo's fleet it must win, against mines, shore fortifications, and Spanish ships. It must win a refuge or, injured and driven off, be an outcast on the sea with permission to refuel only on a homeward voyage. The American predicament can be used as a classical instance of the desperate condition of a battle fleet without a

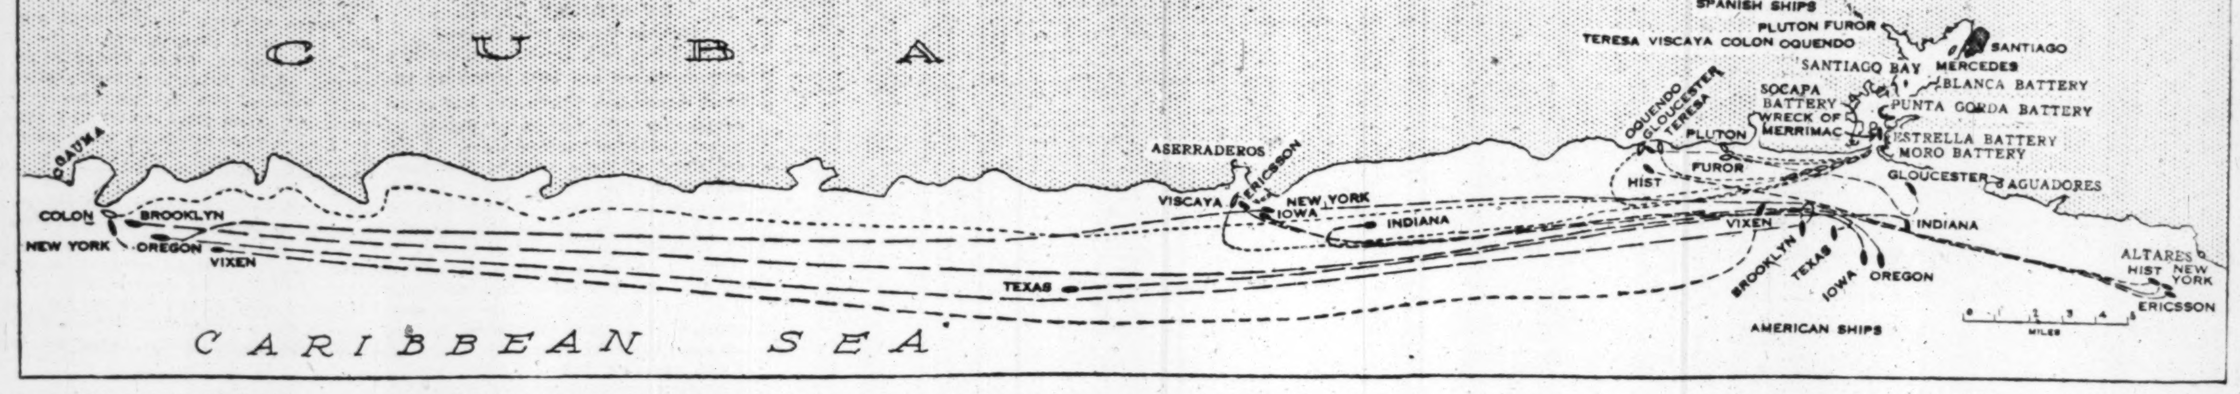
WHERE CERVERA MET DEFEAT IN '98



In one of the decisive engagements of the Spanish-American war, the Spanish squadron under the command of Admiral Cervera was shattered in Santiago bay. The result was that the enemy was driven out of Cuba, the United States took control of the Caribbean, and the Panama canal was made possible. The map shows how the men o' war lined up for battle.

EFFICIENCY OF FIVE DAY WEEK IS DISPUTED

Progress to Be Slow, Scrutator Says.

BY SCRUTATOR.

The five day week has become something of a fetish among certain labor groups. A relatively small proportion of the wage earners of the United States, including nearly a third in the men's clothing industry, 6 per cent of union labor in the building trades and 5 per cent of the newspaper printing trades, had substantially a work week of forty hours or less some time back.

Since 1926 there has been an emphasis on the benefits to be obtained, both by the industrialist and the worker, through shortened labor time, according to a survey of facts and opinions released by the industrial relations sections of Princeton university. There has been, as is usual in such cases, an emphasis on the contrary side designed to show that the time is not yet ripe for the five day experiment on a broad scale.

The pro and con arguments center on two rather definite propositions. One is of the general type: that productive capacity has so increased that the whole body of consumers cannot consume all they can produce with the present working hours. The second is expected to appeal to the employer: a statement that he can actually produce as much or more without advancing costs if he cuts working hours from forty-four or forty-eight to forty.

Capacity for Production.

Undoubtedly potential capacity to produce is greater in many lines than the effective demand today. This has been true since war days. Quite frequently we have actual overproduction and consequent distress, including unemployment, when stocks grow too large. There are a number of ways in which the surplus may be cared for.

The government may take it over, by increasing taxes, and use the goods as it sees fit. Industry might employ fewer men, as Arthur Young points out, and let the others be supported directly or indirectly by the ones who are working. There are suggestions involving a lowering of efficiency to keep jobs intact; the ca' canny of old England. The cutting of hours is thus but one of a number of solutions.

All, with the exception of the one involving less efficiency, have received serious attention. Government is striving to take its part in furnishing employment. It is almost incontestable that there is, despite the large number of working women, a smaller proportion of the population at gainful labor than in pioneer days. Wives and children have been given greater leisure by the machine age. Millions of our youth are in high schools and colleges who, under the older setup of the late 19th century, would be at work.

Carries Implication.

Some of these might be forced into work again if there were a demand for labor due to a severe shortening of hours. Moreover, the whole argument for general shortening of hours carries the implication that wants have been satisfied and will grow no greater. One new invention so far reaching as the automobile or the steam engine would, in fact, furnish demands for all the work that would be available for years.

The plea to the employer of greater efficiency is not well founded. It was fairly demonstrable that a twelve or a fourteen hour day would not produce any more than a nine or an eight hour day. But in industry today the machine speed is more the governing factor than the worker, and eight hours is not excessive for healthy men, except in rare instances.

So far the five day movement has been largely directed to keep more men in certain lines of work than are actually needed. Progress in the future probably will have to be along a different route and must come slowly.

ARRANGE FOR LOAN OF $32,500,000 TO GERMAN COMPANY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 1.—Dillon, Read & Co. announced today that they have concluded negotiations for a loan of $32,500,000 to Siemens & Halske A. G., Germany. The loan will take the form of an issue of long term participating debentures which will probably be offered to the public early next week.

This financing will mark the first German industrial loan offered here since November, 1928, when a $15,000,000 bond issue for Rudolph Karstadt, the German department store chain, which also operates a number of factories, was marketed by Dillon, Read & Co. and associates. In October, 1929, the Guaranty company of New York offered an issue of $5,000,000 Hansa Steamship Line 6s.

Siemens & Halske A. G. is the parent company of the Siemens electrical equipment manufacturing group which is rated as the largest of its kind in Europe and one of the largest in the world. The last financing done here for Siemens & Halske was in September, 1926, when Dillon, Read & Co. and associates marketed an issue of $17,500,000 debenture 6½s, due 1951, at a price of 99.

The companies of the Siemens group report annual sales in excess of $225,000,000 and has branch offices and agencies in 200 cities throughout the world. The parent company was founded in 1847 and incorporated in 1897.

Devoe & Raynolds Sets New Record for Sales

Sales of the Devoe & Raynolds company set a new high record last year with a total of $16,178,861, according to the annual report. The total marked a gain of $1,077,561 over 1928. Net profits for 1929 were $1,085,615, which is equivalent to $4.52 a share on 200,000 shares of common stock outstanding at the end of the year and $5.16 a share on the average number of shares outstanding during the year. The company issued 50,000 shares last June. Net profits for 1928 were $1,079,573.

PRUDENTIAL INSURANCE CO. HAS GOOD YEAR

Newark, N. J., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Declaring the year of 1929 to be one of "achievements," the Prudential Insurance Company of America has issued a statement showing that its paid-for business during that year—including policies issued and revived, and increases—totalled $3,233,961,000. This represents a gain over the year 1928 of $233,316,000.

The total life insurance in force on the Prudential's records at the close of the year was $14,313,138,000, of which $7,255,933,000 was in ordinary policies and $7,057,205,000 was in industrial. This was an increase during 1929 of $1,331,555,000.

The statement recalls the fact that dividends of $71,000,000 had been allotted for policy holders out of the year's savings.

Ill. Bankers' Assoc. Forms Economic Committee

The Illinois Bankers' association has announced the appointment of a committee on economic policies made up of prominent Illinois bankers and headed as chairman by Walter W. Head, president of the Foreman-State National bank. The committee's purpose is to give consideration to questions involving economic and financial policies, including taxation, both federal and state. This will include the vital subject of group, chain and unit banking, which is occupying a prominent place in all bankers' discussions at this time.

Protective Committee Buys Railway Property

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 1.—The property of the Chicago South Bend and Northern Indiana railway was sold today for $430,000 to the bond holders protective committee, represented by Sanford Hefreund and Clifford M. Bowden, both of New York, in a meeting at the company's offices here. The sale was in compliance with a foreclosure order entered in federal court by Judge Thomas W. Slick.

CHICAGO STOCK TRADING BRISK, PRICES BULLISH

Liveliest Market Since Dec. 14.

Yesterday's short session on the Chicago Stock exchange was brisk and bullish in tone, with the Insull and automotive groups featuring the activity. The trading volume of 210,400 shares constituted, as a matter of fact, the liveliest Saturday session since Dec. 14. While many of the featured stocks gained only fractionally, the general movement was firmer and higher.

Middle West Utilities climbed 1⅛ points on a turnover of 48,500 shares, stopping at 29½, with Central and Southwest Utilities keeping pace for the same net rise to 25½. Cities Service was up a half point to 30.

Bendix Up 1¾ Points.

Auburn lost a point among the automotives, but Bendix Aviation, which was accorded a substantial trading popularity, went up 1¾ points to finish at 41¼, its activity being affected by rumors of large new brake orders.

Borg-Warner was in good demand, moving fractionally higher to 41½. The net for 1929 of Borg-Warner was reported as being about $7,650,000 after all charges and taxes, which equals, after preferred dividend requirements, about $6 a share on 1,231,020 shares of common stock outstanding on Dec. 31. This compares with $4,610,832 for 1928, when $10.64 was earned per share on 410,000 common shares outstanding.

The moderate success of Insull Utility Investments in its fractional appreciation reflected the upward movement of other Insull issues, while Cord corporation stood pat again at 13¼. Chicago corporation common registered a slight gain and Burnham Trading corporation spurted up 1½ points to 31.

On publication of earnings for the six months period Morgan Lithograph moved ahead nearly a point to sell at 16¼ at the close. Radio shares were fairly active, but the changes were small, with Grigsby-Grunow suffering a fractional drop.

January Volume.

Shares traded on the exchange during January totaled 4,541,200, or more than two-thirds the total of January a year ago, which figure was 6,829,000. Trading for the month was three times the volume of January, 1928, exchange officials announced.

For the week ended yesterday the fifty most active stocks had a market value of $2,841,741,676 at the close of business. This compares with $2,681,673,077 at the close of the previous week, according to the compilation of Swift, Langill & Hanke.

Reports Net Income of $904,333 for 1929

Gross income of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. for the year ending Dec. 31 amounted to $3,824,918. Net income was $904,333. The company's balance sheet as of Dec. 31 lists total assets of $13,056,277, compared with $13,223,669 for 1928.

News and Gossip of Stock Marts

Outlook for Erie.

Interests closely affiliated with the Van Sweringens are mentioned as being prominent on the buying side of Erie in the last ten days. The stock, however, has been lagging behind the rest of the railroad group, due probably to a technical condition created by the outstanding rights to participate in the recent offering of Pittston company stock. The most constructive factor in the Erie situation is the outlook for inauguration of dividends early this year.

Gets Contracts.

Budd Wheel continues one of the outstanding features of the lower priced shares. Budd Wheel pays $1 annually in dividends. Net earnings for 1929 are estimated at close to $2 a share. According to recent reports, the corporation has received a large number of new contracts for 1930 requirements of automobile manufacturers.

On Basis of Yield.

On basis of yield Baltimore and Ohio is said to be one of the most attractive rails. Paying $7 annually, the stock returns close to 6 per cent at approximately current levels. The company's merger position is held to be strong and earning power stable even under adverse conditions.

Report Proposed Drive.

Considerable publicity is being given to rumors that another drive will be made against the Foreign Power short interest. Bullish sentiment in connection with this stock is centered around the fact that it is the only utility directly controlled by Electric Bond and Shares through stock ownership.

STOCK TRADING IN JANUARY SMALLEST SINCE JULY, 1928

New York, Feb. 1.—Trading on the New York Stock exchange last month was the smallest since July, 1928, when the turnover was only 39,001,098 shares.

Sales for January totaled 62,308,290 shares, compared with 110,803,940 in the same month a year ago, the second largest on record. The largest day last month was 3,739,420 shares, on the 31st, and the smallest volume was 1,452,580 shares, on the 13th, the lightest trading since July 23, 1928. The slowest trading for a Saturday since Aug. 11, 1928, occurred on the 11th, when 795,700 shares were traded.

The trend of prices in the first half of the month was narrow and irregular. In the latter part a better demand for stocks appeared and prices and averages advanced to the highest marks of the year, and broke through the levels of last December.

Last month's total of $107,699,700 in bond dealings was a decrease of $69,387,150 from the previous month, and of $40,023,500 from the same month last year. The largest total for a full day's trading was $11,047,000, on Jan. 9, and the smallest $7,164,000 on Jan. 20. For the Saturday half holiday the maximum was $5,258,000, on Jan. 25, and the minimum $3,809,000, on Jan. 18.

BOND OFFERINGS PASS 100 MILLION FOR THIRD WEEK

Telephone, Rail Issues Quickly Taken.

New York, Feb. 1.—For the third consecutive week new offerings of bonds exceeded the $100,000,000 mark. The total for this week was $127,449,000, compared with $177,431,324 last week, and with $293,398,000 the previous week. Unlike the previous weeks of the year the bulk of the new financing was done toward the latter part of the week.

This week's offerings were headed by the issue of $50,000,000 International Telephone and Telegraph 25 year debenture 5s, priced at 96½, to yield 5.25 per cent, by a group headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. The books were immediately closed shortly after they were opened, the issue having been oversubscribed.

Although the bulk of the new financing this week occurred in the public utility field, with a total of $92,700,000, the second largest piece of new bond financing was that of the issue of $18,000,000 Canadian National Railway company 5s brought out at 99½ by a syndicate headed by Dillon, Read & Co. This issue, which is guaranteed unconditionally by the Canadian government, was quickly sold.

Only five municipal issues were marketed, headed by the issue of $9,000,000 city of St. Louis, Mo., 4½s priced to yield 4.30 to 4.35 per cent. The issue was well received despite the downward tendency of municipal bond prices this week.

Despite the fact that several pieces of American railroad financing have been discussed the only issue to reach the market was that of $5,280,000 New York Central railroad company 4½ per cent equipment trust certificates priced to yield 4.50 to 4.60 per cent.

Says Building Contracts for Week Are $57,289,400

New York, Feb. 1.—(AP)—During the week from Jan. 18 to 24, there was $57,289,400 worth of new building and engineering work contracted for in the thirty-seven states east of the Rocky mountains, according to F. W. Dodge corporation. Last week's total brought the volume of contracts awarded since the first of the year up to $266,980,200, a daily rate of 10 per cent above the daily rate for December, 1929. Although the contract volume of the week was somewhat lower than that of the preceding week, the amount of new work reported as contemplated showed an enormous increase, totaling $749,882,000. Of this amount $495,000,000 is to be expended for new subways and vehicular tunnels in New York.

Nat. Securities Investment Reports $32,356,115 Assets

Total assets of the National Securities Investment company as of Dec. 31 were $32,356,115, it was announced yesterday. Investments in stocks and bonds less reserve to reduce same to approximate or market cost, which ever was lowest on that date, were reported at $23,943,138.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 1.—The stock market has been more active this week than at any time since the November break. Outside interest has been greater, the volume from day to day has shown a steady increase, and prices have, in spite of an occasional setback, gone persistently forward.

The beginning of the new month indeed finds the market in new high average ground for the recovery from the low levels of the break experienced several months ago. At the moment prices are not sufficiently above the high of early December to be looked upon as definitely establishing the outlook for a further substantial advance. But the fact remains that prices, as measured by the averages, broke through the previous top for the first time this week.

The previous high for 90 stocks used in the weighted index compiled by Standard Statistics, Inc., was reached on Dec. 7, at 180.5. It was at this point that the initial phase of the rally from the November lows was checked, with a subsequent drop of more than 20 average points to a low of 160.1 by Dec. 20. The creeping forward movement now in progress for nearly a fortnight had, by today lifted the average to 181.0.

Keeps Moving Forward.

The market creaked on its hinges somewhat today, but managed to keep on an upward trend in spite of its drawbacks—chiefly the form of week end profit taking.

Gains in some sections were quite pronounced. Communication shares in particular were strong throughout the session. American Telephone crossed 231 and finished the day with a net gain of more than 6 points on an unusually heavy turnover. Western Union rose some 8 points and International Telephone went ahead for more than 3.

The strength in this group—which influenced buying throughout the list—was attributed to the testimony of Sosthene Behn, chairman of International, before a senate committee in Washington advocating merger of cable, radio, and telegraph facilities of the country on the ground that it would result in large savings to consumers.

Bullish enthusiasm spread from the communications group to other sections of the list and numerous issues moved into new high ground for the year, among them Bendix Aviation, Consolidated Gas, Continental Can, Rossia Insurance, Commonwealth and Southern, and Eastman Kodak.

Soars Forty Points.

Among the rails New York and Harlem, an inactive issue with a limited floating supply, soared 40 points at one time to above 300 on top of its 47 point advance yesterday. New York Central, New Haven, Pennsylvania, Erie, and most of the other seasoned issues of the group gained ground, the leaders from 1 to some 2 points.

Motors continued a creeping rise, General Motors rousing itself from its recent sluggishness to resume its leadership of the group with a 2 point gain on the day. The street expects that the General Motors report in preliminary for 1929 will be available in a week or so and that it will surprise those who have been lending such a ready ear to all this talk of a bad season for the automobile manufacturers. Unofficial forecasts place the company's probable net for the year at the equivalent of between $5.25 and $5.50 a share on the 43,500,000 common shares of $10 par value now outstanding.

Easier tendencies developed in a number of recent market leaders, including United States Steel, General Electric and Radio, due to profit taking.

The coppers were inclined to sag in the early trading on news of further curtailment of production pending absorption of large unsold supplies of the metal, but demand for Anaconda and Kennecott improved in the last half hour of trading and both these group leaders emerged with fractional gains.

Credit Situation.

The widespread expectations among experienced observers that the drastic stock market break of last autumn would be the prelude to a period of exceedingly cheap money appear now, three months after the crash, to be in error.

Although the price of credit has dropped in this market to levels far below those obtaining throughout most of last year, it remains somewhat higher than rates in some other world markets, notably those of France and England, and there appears little disposition on the part of bankers here to look for material reductions from the present rates.

The chief evidence of a relaxation in credit has been provided by the call rate on stock exchange collateral loans, which is always more sensitive to changes in money market conditions than other departments of the credit structure. This very rate, however, has displayed some puzzling characteristics. Following the break in the stock market the stock exchange authorities for some time maintained an artificially high renewal rate in order to prevent the sudden withdrawal of funds being lent by foreign interests and nonbanking lenders.

For some time a renewal rate of 6 per cent was posted, although outside funds were available almost every day at 4½ per cent. This pegged rate was gradually lowered until a 4½ per cent renewal rate was reached on Jan. 7 last. The latter was maintained until last Friday, when call money renewed at 4 per cent for the first time since Jan. 27, 1928. From Jan. 15 to 30, inclusive, standing loans were renewed at 4½ per cent each morning and shortly after noon each day the rate was dropped to 4 per cent.

Reverses Process.

On Friday the exchange reversed the process, posting a renewal rate of 4 per cent and then lifting the rate to 4½ per cent. Among bankers and money brokers, it is generally admitted that the rate which the stock exchange has been posting is an artificial one. The reasons for such a procedure are not, however, clear.

It is possible that the stock exchange authorities feel that a rate for standing loans lower than 4½ per cent would have driven out more of the funds being lent by "others," thus resulting in a tighter money market later.

According to the latest brokers' loans statement, nonbanking lenders are lending $1,648,000,000 to brokers, or approximately twice as much as New York City member banks are lending. In addition, there are still large amounts of foreign money being lent in the call market here, it is understood, which might be withdrawn should a lower rate be posted.

Another reason which has been suggested is that the exchange does not want to fix a renewal rate lower than the present rediscount rate which is 4½ per cent. Whatever the reason, the effects of a lower renewal rate last Friday appear to have been an immediate curtailment of the funds available for call loans, with a resultant advance in the rate later in the day.

Other Types Scarce.

Bankers say that the money market is uneven. While rates for short term credit have fallen markedly, certain other types of credit remain scarce. There is still an exceedingly high volume of security loans outstanding, it is remarked, and more progress in the liquidation of these loans must be made before widespread ease in money can be expected.

Security loans by reporting member banks, as of Jan. 22, totaled $7,714,000,000, a total of $355,000,000 above the level for the corresponding week of last year. As of the same date loans for the account of "others" totaled $1,653,000,000, or $926,000,000 below the total for one year ago.

BRITISH PUBLIC SHIES AT OFFERS IN STOCK MARKET

Restriction of Tin Output Sends Prices Up.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Many unsettling circumstances are still worrying the stock exchange. There are few signs evidencing any return of public interest, the chief factors being the uncertainty of home policies and fears regarding the forthcoming budget which are producing an undercurrent of unrest as to the possible taxation of incomes.

The lack of confidence is adding to the general reluctance to enter fresh commitments, either for speculation or investment. Home trustee stocks, hitherto regarded as water tight, are now being shunned by the investing public, and there is a noticeable disposition in many quarters of nervous investors placing funds in foreign countries, which certainly indicates a lack of confidence in the future.

A renewed forced liquidation followed the announcement of the date of settlement of the Clarence Hatry group shares for a fortnight hence, especially on behalf of provincial interests, and with public support negligible the dealers were quick to mark down their prices against would-be sellers. With the Hatry affair out of the way it is possible that market sentiment may take a favorable turn, but with budget fears increasing it is apparent that there appears little hope of the revival of a purely speculative interest.

Boost Copper and Tin.

Professional operators are finding what consolation they can in boosting new activity in various Rhodesian copper and tin mining shares. Some spectacular upward movings of these two sections occurred this week but it was entirely confined to the professional element.

Tin as a commodity experienced a recovery of $20 a ton one day this week on the official news that a great majority of the world's producers in Malaya, Nigeria, and Bolivia are definitely carrying into effect the scheme for the voluntary restriction of output as recommended by the tin producers' association. The big Patino interests of Bolivia, representing more than 80 per cent of the output of that country, have now come into line, making approximately two-thirds of the world's tin producers curtailing their output.

Experts here estimate the effect of this restriction will reduce the world's annual rate of output by 9,000 or 10,000 tons. Whether this scheme means a forcing up of the price against the consumer remains to be seen, but in such an event it is not likely to be in the near future, especially in view of the risk of reduced consumption arising from uncertain trade conditions in the United States.

A Tea Tempest.

Restrictive measures are also being adopted, with tea as a commodity in which considerable overproduction is reported. World stocks of tea, experts declare, is enormous, with the crop steadily growing and new tea lands coming into bearing. The result is that a large portion of the output is now being sold for less than the cost of production.

Russia, which used to absorb 200,000,000 pounds of tea yearly, now is immensely below this figure, with the rising generation growing up without any tea knowledge or any desire. Leading tea interests are talking of world-wide propaganda, with North America cited as the best possibility for larger consumption. The disappointing tea company dividend announcements brought a considerable fall in the prices of leading tea shares—the current lists being the lowest for several years, while the highest prices of 1929 are considerably under the peak levels of 1928.

DIVIDENDS DECLARED IN JANUARY REACH A TOTAL OF $308,338,685

New York, Feb. 1.—Dividend declarations in January aggregated $308,338,685, compared with $558,949,177 in December and $246,781,436 in January, 1929.

Although the amount was greater than a year ago there was a big increase in the number of dividends omitted, fewer initial dividends and more reductions in rates. Stock dividends exceeded the number a year ago, as did extra dividends.

Groups showing improvement over last year were chain stores, food and packing, copper, motor, motor equipment, public utility, railroad, steel, and tobacco. Bank, insurance, department store, mail order, and railroad equipment dividends were lower.

FRENCH RATE SLASH

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 1.—Action of the Bank of France in reducing its discount rate to three per cent from three and one-half per cent is said to be due to the bank's aim to further reduce note circulation and stimulate the exportation of idle French capital.

A reduction of the rate had been recently anticipated following the increasingly easy money conditions prevailing since the return of French capital after the Wall street crash in November.

The announcement was regarded as an extremely important event in French financial circles towards the general reorganization of the French market and making Paris one of the most important international centers. The Bank of France has accumulated a large amount of gold in past months, the exchange trend being very favorable. It is also ascribed largely to the return of funds attracted by the high call rates in New York before the Wall street slump, the summer tourist invasion of France and the lowering of money rates abroad.

At the annual meeting of the Bank of France Thursday, Governor Emile Moreau declared that the amount available for distribution was 94,400,000 francs, and a dividend of 235 francs on Bank of France shares will be paid. He also stated that the bank's gold reserve now amounts to 9,783,000,000 francs, which is equivalent to a coverage of 47.37 per cent of the issue of paper money.

The official annual report of the Bank of France shows that the bank has not interfered with the free play of the money market under the gold standard regimé, and will not depart from this policy whatever be the orientation of the movements of capital. He further declares that "on the day when, under the influence of a rise in foreign exchanges, gold is demanded on our counters the bank will let it leave its vaults."

base. Luckily for Dewey he could remain at Manila.

A Fleet of Seven Ships.

At the Cavite station Montojo (Rear Admiral Don Patricio Montojo y Pasaron) has seven ships which are to sustain the American attack. His flagship is the Reina Cristina of 3,520 displacement, with a main battery of six 6.2 guns and a secondary battery of thirteen rapid fire guns. Next in size is the Castilla of 3,260 tons, with a main battery of four 5 and two 4.7 and fourteen rapid fire in the secondary. There are then the Isla de Cuba, Isla de Luzon, Don Antonio de Ulloa, Don Juan de Austria, and Marques del Duero, all under 1,200 tons. The ships are old. Accurate fire is unknown in them. They have been allowed nothing for target practice. Montojo anchors and accepts fate.

Dewey brought six ships into action. The dispatch boat, McCulloch, although under fire, is listed "not engaged." The ships were the flagship Olympia, 5,870 displacement; Baltimore, 4,413; Petrel, 892; Boston, 3,000; Raleigh, 3,213, and Concord, 1,710. Their main batteries were 8 inch, 6 inch, and 5 inch guns. The Olympia had twenty-one rapid fire guns. The Spanish squadron in free sea maneuvers would have been hopelessly outclassed, but with the advantages which it might have had in defended waters it could have had more than an even break.

On April 27, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, the Dewey squadron was on its way from Chinese waters. "We proceeded in two columns, the fighting ships forming one column, and the auxiliary vessels another 1,200 yards in the rear; and with a smooth sea and favoring sky we set our course for the entrance to Manila bay, 600 miles away."

On April 30 the fleet was in sight of the coast of Luzon, and Dewey that morning sent the Boston and the Concord into Subig to reconnoiter, really fearing that he would find Montojo waiting him there in a better position than he could take in Manila bay and with the support of land batteries. At 3:30 in the afternoon the scout ships were sighted at the entrance to Manila bay, where they had been instructed to await the squadron. They signaled that no enemy had been found in Subig. Dewey was to have his preference, although it required the running of fortifications and possibly mine fields. His conviction was that if he found his opponent off the shore of Manila city he had him.

He intended to run through Boca Grande at night, as he had seen Farragut run the forts of the lower Mississippi at night.

The American commodore had decided that the mines in the channel could be disregarded. There had been much talk of them in Chinese ports. Dewey's opinion was that the Spanish would not use enough technical skill in laying them, that they would deteriorate rapidly in tropical waters, and that the depth of water in Boca Grande would work against them. These conclusions were correct. (Also the Filipino insurgents had been fishing out mines to get their powder.)

Allowed to Pass.

At dark the American squadron headed into the entrance of Manila bay, lights masked, gun crews at their guns, a new moon, a shower of rain, a drift of clouds across the moon.

The men on the ships saw signal lights flash ahead of them. The ships in the dark went by the fortified islands of the channel. The flagship passed El Fraile at half a mile. (A Spanish officer later said that the ships were clearly outlined to the garrisons of the islands. They were allowed to pass.)

Only as the rear of the line passed El Fraile did its batteries fire three times from its 4.7 inch guns. Then they were silent. The fire was briefly returned. The six inch guns on the Caballo did not open. The Americans steamed ahead in the night, reducing speed to four knots in order to have daylight when they searched for Montojo's squadron in the bay.

Manila bay offers the city to the northeast and the naval station of Cavite five miles to the southwest. Montojo had taken his station at Cavite, at the naval station—to save the city, he said. The city batteries were powerful, having heavier guns than any on the American ships, but Montojo was found at the naval station, where his supports were the batteries at the end of the point of land, Sangley Point and Canacao. Cavite itself is a finger reaching out to inclose Bacoor bay.

Served with Gallantry.

Dewey, going into action, ran his ships, with soundings, three times eastward and two westward at from 5,000 to 2,000 yards along the anchored Spanish line, "the ships being turned each time on the port helm. At the nearest point to the enemy our range was only 2,000 yards."

The trapped Spanish ships were served with the utmost gallantry. Their own gunnery, with good cause, was worthless. The American shooting, indifferent at the start, improved.

The Spanish commanders and crews had courage and nothing else to offer. The Don Juan de Austria and the Reina Cristina, overwhelmed by fire, cut their cables and forlornly tried to charge the Olympia. By this time the American guns, accurately served, were wrecking the enemy ships and the Spanish fire in return was doing nothing. Neither the ship guns nor the shore guns were hitting. The shore guns were so mounted that they couldn't get the range.

The End of the Battle.

After two hours of firing Dewey was given the alarming report that his ammunition was being exhausted. He did not know then the real condition of the enemy and he thought his own situation was bad. He withdrew his ships "for breakfast." That explanation was for the crews. The retirement was for investigation. He found that he had been misinformed. Nevertheless, the men had their breakfast. Then the squadron turned back to complete the battle. Only the little Ulloa remained in the battle station; "the gallant little Ulloa"—Dewey calls it—was there to meet the whole American attack and, "under our concentrated fire, went down valiantly with her colors flying." The American squadron had no one killed.

By evening Manila bay was Dewey's new base in the far east and the young face of the United States was looking into the old face of Asia.

THE BATTLE OF SANTIAGO

In April Admiral Cervera [Pascual Cervera y Topete, known to Americans of over thirty years ago as a brave, kindly, and cultured man] was at St. Vincent, in the Cape Verde islands, off the west coast of Africa, 682 miles from Cadiz. With good cause he was a much more worried admiral than Montojo had any right to be in Manila.

He had with him four armored cruisers, the Maria Teresa, the Viscaya, the Almirante Oquendo, and the Cristobal Colon; three destroyers, the Furor, Pluton, and Terror; three torpedo boats, the Ariete, Azor, and Rayo; an armed liner, and a hospital ship.

He was 2,400 miles east of Porto Rico and nearly 3,000 east of New York. His best ship, the Colon, did not have its armor piercing guns in their turrets. The boilers of the Ariete were such that she "is the nightmare of the fleet." The bow plates of the Furor and Terror "give as soon as they are in a seaway." Neglect had made good ships bad ships.

Cervera's Fatal Voyage.

Political, not military, considerations prevailed in Madrid. The people, ignorant of their hopeless condition on the sea, demanded action. Cervera had orders from home to sail for the West Indies. His departure, midnight of April 28, was reported and thereupon all became far from quiet on the American coast.

Americans were not certain by a long shot that their navy was as good as the Spanish. European authorities had been telling them it wasn't. The thought of Spanish armor clads to seaboard civilians was as bad a nightmare as the boilers of the Ariete were to the Spanish fleet. This naval terror was left behind with its two sister torpedo boats when Cervera started on his perilous and, as it proved, fatal voyage. He made the run to Curacao by May 14, having stopped at Martinique, compelled by the necessities of fuel and repair, and being received coolly by the French. At the port of Willemsted, in Curacao, he was allowed a little coal. At both places he was reported to Washington, and at Martinique he missed a cable from his government instructing him that he might come home if that should happen to be his best judgment, as it was.

Heading for Santiago.

At Curacao he was nearer to Porto Rico than to Cuba. Foul hulls, coal shortage, and engineering troubles harassed him and the harbor of San Juan invited him, but he knew that Sampson had been off that port. He headed for Santiago, by Jamaica, missed the St. Paul, which was cable cutting, by an hour, and slipped into the harbor at 6 o'clock of the morning of May 19. His presence there was reported by the Cubans the same day, and the American fleet, which had been worsted in trying to intercept the uncertain Don, had its problem clear at last.

The almost instant effect was to focus and concentrate the war, land and sea, upon the town and harbor in which this squadron of the Spanish fleet had taken refuge. If Cervera's ships had been kept in home waters and had been joined by the Carlos V., when ready, by the Pelayo and other ships of various classes later than they were, the Spanish naval threat, even without action, would have been greater, and the civilian unrest along the coast of the United States would have made more political disturbance here.

The military commander at Santiago was hardly thankful to Cervera for bringing down on him the full burden of the war, transferring it from Havana, diverting it from Porto Rico and throwing all American attack, land and sea, upon him, cutting his communications, his cables, and telegraph, starving out his forces, bombarding his fortifications and assaulting his lines. He might well have said to the Spanish admiral: "Why me?" His most urgent need soon was to expel Cervera from the harbor. Indeed, having gotten in, Cervera's most urgent need was to get out.

It was apparent to the American commanders that this war needed only one more success, after that of Dewey in Manila bay, to bring it to an end. Spain was fighting only to yield to defeat with honor. The American plan was to keep the Spanish fleet in the harbor and take it by assaults on the land fortifications by Gen. Shafter's army. In the hope of locking Cervera up, Lieut. Hobson took in the Merrimac to sink it in the channel, but did not effectively close the channel.

One Final Fling.

The Americans had overestimated the Spanish navy and they had underestimated the Spansh army, at least on defense. There the seemingly incapable Spanish infantryman had a stubbornness which disconcerted the attacking force. Poor Shafter, unwell, overweight, and oppressed by a sense of impending failure, wished that the navy had not required him to capture a fleet.

The sacrificed admiral, having been chased in and now chased out, made his preparations for an attempt at escape. He came out the morning of July 3 to relieve Santiago of the burden of his presence and to escape if possible. It was Sunday. The American crews were in holiday white. Admiral Sampson had gone to Siboney to confer with Gen. Shafter. Admiral Schley was with the blockading squadron.

Between 9 and 10 in the morning smoke was seen in the channel, for a while its import being doubtful. Then the Iowa saw the event plainly and hoisted the signal: "Enemy ships escaping." The Iowa closed in on the harbor mouth, followed by the Gloucester, Indiana, Oregon, Texas, and Brooklyn.

The Maria Teresa came out first, followed by the Viscaya, Cristobol Colon, and Almirante Oquendo. It was the Spanish plan to try to knock out the Brooklyn, Schley's ship, and, with the faster American eliminated, run away from the battleships, but they had to come through an exit which turned them toward the American to let them out. As the event happened, each Spanish ship took concentrated broadsides from three or four American ships. The Teresa was seriously damaged before she could turn west. This ship got six and a half miles from the harbor, gave up the fight, and headed for the beach and Nima-Nima cove. The Gloucester sent her boats to the rescue of the crew.

Wretched and Suffering.

The Oquendo ran the line of fire and, a wreck, was beached two miles beyond the Teresa. The Viscaya engaged the Brooklyn, the Texas, the Iowa, and Oregon; was set on fire, and, turning in shore about fifteen miles from Santiago, struck her flag. The Cristobol Colon was the best and the least injured of the Spanish ships and the only one not desperately fought.

The war was virtually over. It dragged along for a while. The army continued to suffer from disease, mismanagement, terrible commissary, and such plagues which inexpert administrations inflict upon men in dangerous service for the nations, but the navy had won the war at almost no cost whatever.

The United States of today has been made by ships, better ships than have been opposed to it, but always by ships.

BUSINESS DURING JANUARY MOVES AT STEADY PACE

Snow and Floods Present Some Obstacles.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—January's record for business generally was one of expansion. It was not, to be sure, a robust upswing to entirely normal conditions in all lines, for such a development after last autumn's upheaval would be well nigh impossible, but it did represent a fairly satisfactory rebound from the low points of production, consumption, and employment during December.

Considered generally, business continues to exhibit considerable spottiness and it is not up to a year ago, although well ahead of the December pace. Weather conditions were against trade last week, deep snows in many sections of the country and high water in others, representing factors calculated to retard trade.

The most dependable barometers of the country, however, continue to reflect improvement, despite the spotty conditions quite evident when the commercial fabric of the country is examined, industry by industry.

Factors Causing Gain.

The most favorable factors in the general situation are the rather sharp expansion in iron and steel operations, now not far from 75 per cent of capacity; the resumption, although at a moderate pace, of large scale production of automobiles; railroad equipment orders, especially for locomotives; the reduction of loans on securities by the members of the federal reserve system; a cheerful stock market in which advancing prices have predominated, and finally an ample supply of money, as reflected in the current low rates for funds of all classes.

That there has been an increase in employment, too, is evident, although scattered reports of many men out of work filter in from the larger cities, to which the drift of the unemployed is not an unusual spectacle.

The picture has another side, and it is unfavorable. Chief of these factors is the continued decline in the prices of agricultural commodities, both wheat and cotton having established new low records last week. The fresh declines were attributed mainly to the lack of sustained foreign buying and to the oversupply of farm products here.

Weather Hinders Building.

The farm board's activities at the moment are directed towards the restriction of productive acreage this year. New building construction, interefered with by the weather, is mainly confined to the metropolitan areas and structural steel is in known demand. There are still many complaints from various parts of the country about the difficulties of securing new mortgage money. Steel awards last week, according to the Iron Age, aggregated 33,000 tons, as compared with 25,000 tons in the previous week. New projects seek 44,000 tons of steel, as compared with 10,500 in the previous week.

One of the brighter spots last week was the sharp reduction in commercial failures. These aggregated 545, according to R. C. Dun & Co., as compared with 644 in the previous week and 541 a year ago. All geographical sections of the country reflected improvement. In considering the present general business situation and its statistics as compared with a year ago, the fact is to be taken into consideration that the country was especially active, from a commercial standpoint, at this time last year.

Car Loadings Drop.

Therefore, most of the comparable statistics reflect declines. The measurement, from previous weeks or from the low points established in December, however, tell an entirely different story and present a graphic picture of the strides which have been made during the last month toward improvement.

Bank clearings reflected a decline last week of 23.6 per cent with the corresponding week last year. Car loadings, too, were lower. These statistics should normally show improvement, both because of the approach of seasonal demand for goods and services and because of the general improvement now definitely under way. It is evident that merchants' shelves are not overloaded, and while buying at the moment, in most lines, is of the hand to mouth variety, the normal expansion of spring demand should soon prove a factor of considerable stimulation.

GETS STONE CONTRACT.

A contract for 450 cars of stone for the 85 story Empire State building, New York, has been awarded the Indiana Limestone company, President A. E. Dickinson announced. The building, on the site of the old Waldorf-Astoria, to be erected by the Empire Building corporation with which Al Smith is associated, was designed by Shreve, Lamb & Harmon, architects. Starrett Brothers are the general contractors. The all stone building will have many unique features, including a roof mooring for Zeppelins.

Receipts at Chicago Monday: 17,000 cattle; 72,000 hogs, and 23,000 sheep.

Medium and weighty butcher hogs met good demand at stronger prices yesterday, with spots slightly higher, while light and underweights ruled weak. The extreme top was off 5c at $10.35, while the general average remained unchanged, the "spread" of 30c being within 5c of the narrowest in more than a month's time.

Week-end receipts were large at 15,000, but with 14,000 of them billed direct to packers from other points, only occasional loads of "fresh" hogs were available. The 4,000 carried over from Friday consisted largely of underweights and pigs which have been accumulating during the week, owing to the smaller eastern demand for anything averaging less than 150 lbs. Pigs and underweights on recent session have been selling to local packers and city butchers at prices 75c to $1.25 below a week ago, while other hogs are closing the week steady to 15c higher.

Market Averages Higher.

Although increased supplies blocked salesmen's attempts to establish a new high top in the hog market last week, the market, as a whole, was highest in four months. Hogs are selling readily, nearly $1.50 per head higher than a year ago and $4.25 per head higher than in 1928. More buyers representing eastern interests are appearing on the market lately, but the proportion going to shippers is still smaller than in 1929 and 1928.

Outsiders last week bought 26 per cent of arrivals, against 23 per cent a week ago and 44 per cent a year ago. The slight reduction in pork prices on the local wholesale market restricted the operations of some smaller local packers following last Tuesday's bulge in the market for live hogs.

Considering all angles of the cattle trade, bulk of sales and top prices held up well. The general average at $12.50 was 15c above the preceding week and compared with $12.10 a year ago, but was $1.50 below two years ago.

Beef on the wholesale market declined slightly during the week, but is selling 1@1½c per pound higher than in 1929. With the exception of one day, when a load of choice mixed yearling steers and heifers reached $16.00, top notchers were not offered on the market. Only a very small proportion of receipts passed $15.00. Cattle receipts at Chicago for January totaled 193,000, the second smallest for that month since 1899. Prices averaged $12.75, the second highest January since 1920.

Lamb Market Disappointing.

Lamb feeders during the last week experienced some of the lowest markets since 1920 to 1922. Prices tumbled 65@85c more and show fully $2.00 loss in three weeks. The general average at $12.30 compares with $16.55 a year ago, when both lamb and wool were selling considerably higher. The extreme top at the close stopped at $12.75 and 106 lb averages were bought as low as $10.50.

The last time heavy lambs sold that low was in 1923 when exporters were in the market for $10.50 heavy stock. That was also the last time live lambs were shipped from Chicago to foreign points. Receipts for the week at 79,700 compare with 80,902 a week ago, but show an increase over 1929 and 1928. The decline in dressed lamb on wholesale markets limited local buying power.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 17,000 cattle, 72,000 hogs, and 23,000 sheep, against 16,153 cattle, 82,591 hogs, and 17,448 sheep a week ago, and 18,266 cattle, 58,835 hogs, and 16,736 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 45,000 cattle, 235,000 hogs, and 85,000 sheep, against 45,737 cattle, 240,581 hogs, and 55,233 sheep a year ago.

South American Bonds.

Recent weakness shown in South American government bonds has caused some apprehension among American holders of these securities. The stock market crash in October and November released large amounts of credit, some of which has undoubtedly gone to help the bond market return to more normal conditions. The general trend toward improvement in the bond market in general, however, has been noticeably lacking in South American issues, and some of the latter are being quoted at prices which would yield returns of 6, 8, and even 10 per cent.

Various explanations have been offered for this weakness. Apparently the answer lies in a combination of circumstances. Chief among these are, perhaps, the coffee situation in Brazil and Colombia and the closing of the Caja de Conversion office in Argentina, which means practically the abandonment of the gold standard by that country.

Brazil is largely dependent upon its chief commodity—coffee. The coffee situation there is extremely complex. Brazil attempts to control the price of coffee artificially through its coffee defense institute. In 1927-'28 there was a bumper crop, and although the following year's crop was smaller the carryover on July 1, 1929, was estimated at more than 10,000,000 bags, equal to approximately one year's entire crop, and this amount has been augmented since then.

Argentina felt it advisable to close its gold conversion office because of the large amount of gold that was leaving the country. Agriculture and the raising of livestock are the nation's chief industries and its foreign trade position depends largely upon its crops and the prices for its produce. Foreign trade fell off somewhat in 1928 and this trend continued into 1929 and was reflected in a decreased balance of exports. Lower prices for Argentine agricultural products were reported in 1929.

Colombia, like Brazil, has a coffee problem. Conditions there are somewhat unsettled due to political complications. Uruguay is principally an agricultural nation. Chile has shown improvement since the slump in nitrate a few years ago.

The history of the South American countries has been one of periodical economic and political crises, diminishing in intensity and frequency during the last generation. The present situation, in general, is not regarded as particularly alarming.

The investor contemplating the purchase of South American government bonds should study the issues he is interested in. Some South American bonds are considered sound and others highly speculative. Not all the bonds of any one country are of the same grade and the credit of some nations is better than others.

Which Stocks Will Bring the Greatest PROFITS..in 1930

Certain securities are distinct bargains at present prices—Act now while such opportunities are available

This is the one time when investors should be exercising the greatest interest in their investment affairs—for the foundation should be laid now for future profits.

It is in a period like the present that opportunities are the greatest. With the prices of good stocks at levels unwarranted by their earnings and prospects, the rewards of prompt action are substantial. Only four times in this century—1907, 1914, 1921 and today—have such opportunities occurred to obtain investments so advantageously.

History demonstrates that the farsighted and courageous investor who accumulates, at prices now prevailing, sound dividend-paying stocks will realize unusually favorable benefits, in the form of profits and liberal income over the next twelve months.

Our purpose is to point out to investors those stocks representing companies which are ably and aggressively managed, have a long, successful record of earnings and are firmly established in their respective industries. By concentrating your funds in the stocks of these industries, which, by the nature of their business are relatively depression-proof, you are directly in line for near-future profits.

Our STATISTICAL DEPARTMENT has selected several listed stocks, now yielding 6% to 8%, which fit the foregoing requirements. Full information will be sent to you, without obligation. Fill out and return the coupon below.

SHORT COVERING BRINGS UPTURN IN WHEAT MART

Final Quotations Show 1 1-2@1 5-8c Gains.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Heavy short covering yesterday in all of the leading wheat markets of the world brought about a sharp upturn in prices, and while there was little change in the general character of the news, there was less disposition to press the selling side.

Highest prices of the day were made at the opening with a reaction of around 1c on realizing sales, but there was renewed buying toward the last and the close was well toward the top with net gains of 1½@1⅝c in the Chicago market, March being $1.17⅝@1.17½ and May $1.22⅛@1.22¼.

Winnipeg wheat increased its premium over Chicago and closed 1⅞c higher with May 7c over the local market, compared with around 4c at one time Friday. Liverpool was up 2¾d for the day, with shorts covering freely. Buenos Aires, however, lost ⅛@¼c for the day, with Rosario ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower.

All deliveries of grain sold at a new low for the season during the last week, with liquidation under way in volume. The close yesterday found wheat 3⅞@4⅞c lower; oats, 1@1½c lower, and rye, off 3¼@7¼c as compared with a week ago, while corn was ⅛c lower to ¼c higher. Lard declined 12½c for the week, and ribs were 7½c higher.

Await Farm Board Action.

Many wheat traders were not entirely sure of their position on either side of the market, and there was a disposition in some quarters to go rather slow pending an expression by the farm board regarding its ideas as to the prevailing level of prices. So far the purchases of country run cash wheat by coöperatives has had only a sentimental effect.

Minneapolis messages indicated that country shippers had been selling high protein No. 1 northern to mills, and had given the coöperatives the low protein grain at $1.25, the basic figure. Estimates of as high as 4,000,000 bu cash wheat headed toward Minneapolis were received during the day, as country elevators were said to be shipping out their No. 1 and No. 2 northern. The latter have in some instances been able to buy in their hedges in futures below what they would receive for the cash grain. The coöperatives have not hedged their purchases by sales of futures.

Some improvement was reported in the foreign demand with the seaboard claiming upwards of 500,000 bu domestic and Canadian wheat sold abroad. Russia sold a cargo to the United Kingdom and was said to be offering more. Argentine grain was held at higher prices in offers to the United Kingdom. Nat C. Murray of Clement, Curtis & Co., called attention to the fact that 6 countries had issued estimates on winter wheat acreage so far, showing 84,972,000 acres seeded, against 85,925,000 acres last year.

Better Cash Corn Demand.

Corn market held within a range of less than 1c, and finished ⅜@⅝c higher, with March 87½c and May 91⅛@91¼c. Realizing sales and buying of rye against sales of corn checked the bulge. There was some improvement shown in the shipping demand with sales of 152,000 bu, while country offerings were small, purchases to arrive being placed at 12,000 bu. The trade looks for a fair increase to be shown in the visible supply on Monday.

Removal of hedges against shipping sales of 225,000 bu cash oats advanced futures readily early, and while the best prices were not maintained, due to realizing, the close was at net gains of ½@¾c, with March 44½c and May 45¾c. Cash interests and locals sold on the bulges.

Rye advanced sharply with wheat early, and on short covering, but the bulge brought in selling that looked like reinstating of short lines covered on the break Thursday and Friday and the close was at intermediate figures, with net gains of 2⅛@2½c, with March 86½c, and May 87c.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Demand for spot butter was less active and prices lost ½@1c, while fresh eggs were ½c lower. Live hens declined 1c. No receipts by freight. Potatoes were weak with Wisconsins quoted at $2.50@2.65 and westerns at $2.90@3.20 per 100 lbs. Receipts 112 cars, with 273 cars on team track.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

There has been heavy covering by shorts in all grains and on this basis the technical situation was considered as weakened. At the same time the farm board is expected to take some action that will surprise the trade. Comparatively few operators express themselves as bullish, although it was said that should the farm board's actions develop some new phase in the grain situation it might cause a sharp advance. There was heavy buying of "bids" on wheat last night. Several large orders were in the market.

Northwestern elevator interests are said to be preparing to unload their holdings on the farm board's coöperative at Minneapolis, and possibly Duluth. A message from Minneapolis yesterday said that hedges on 400,000 bushels of spring wheat had been removed and that about 4,000,000 bushels of the grain would be sent in from country elevators and sold to the farm board at $1.25, which pays large profits, there being more money in selling at present than in carrying the grain.

Corn traders are looking for a moderate increase in the country movement owing to improved weather conditions. Industries are picking up the offerings on weak spots and the tone of the trade is said to be more friendly to the buying side on breaks.

Minneapolis messages said that, while there was a better tone in the wheat trade there, operators do not look for much of an advance as long as wheat comes out on all bulges.

LARD STOCKS INCREASE

Lard stocks in Chicago are 31,101,000 lbs, compared with 29,142,000 lbs a month ago and 73,142,000 lbs a year ago. The increase for the month is smaller than expected. Stocks of bellies decreased. Supplies of all meats are 130,378,000 lbs, against 119,881,000 lbs a month ago and 148,878,000 lbs last year.

Trading in lard yesterday was moderate, with the price range narrow and the close unchanged to 2½c higher, the latter on July. Liverpool lard was 3d lower to 3d higher. Exports from the seaboard were 1,415,450 lbs and of bacon, 1,205,000 lbs. Bellies were bid up by local packers and closed 15c higher for May. Larger supplies of hogs are expected for the week. BUTTER FUTURES FIRMER

Sharp advances in butter futures featured the Chicago Mercantile exchange session. Gains at the close ranged from $96 a car, or ½c; to $120 a car, or ⅝c. The advance was marked up in the face of an easing spot situation and increased fresh receipts. Withdrawals in the four markets that ran nearly 200,000 pounds over last year's figure was the chief bullish factor. Sales were 88 cars with receipts of 11,581 tubs. Eggs were little changed with no definite trend in the market. February was up $15 a car, or ⅛c, for the only change of the day. Sales were 55 cars with receipts of 7,145 cases. Prices follow:

GOOD ADVANCE IN COTTON

Buying of cotton yesterday was by shorts and mill interests, the latter being active in picking up offerings around the low price of the day. There has been a big break of late and prices are more in line with the views of mill interests. The short interest was cut down and the trade is uneasy owing to uncertainty as to when the Coöperative Association of America will begin buying and also as to its effect on the market.

Liverpool was stronger but closed unchanged to 2 points higher with spot sales 3,000 bales. In Chicago futures gained 12 to 17 points, and other markets were up 12 to 16 points. Spots advanced 15 points with New York 16.50c; sales of middlings 1,1[..] bales; New Orleans was 16.05c; Houston 16.35c, with sales of 1,398 bales and Galveston 16.60c, sales 600 bales. EUROPEAN STEEL CARTEL HEARS U.S.CO.'S MAY JOIN

Believe Bethlehem Is for Participation in It.

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Feb. 1.—Reports that American steel interests are seriously considering participation in the European steel cartel have caused greatest interest here and in other continental capitals. At the headquarters of the Comite des Forges, the French steel trust which, with the German trust constitutes the backbone of the powerful continental combine, it was explained that so far there are no American companies concerned in the cartel, but that certain American steel concerns, notably Bethlehem, are understood to have been favorable to the idea.

Cartel Officials Are Noncommittal.

At the offices of the steel bureau, which is the connecting link between the Comite des Forges and the cartel, an official informed this correspondent that nothing was known of the rumored American membership. He added that in view of the thorough reorganziation now going on within the cartel, a broadening of the scope of the agreement was not beyond the realm of possibility.

It is known, for example, that members of the cartel hope to induce both Britain and Poland to join this year, thus materially increasing the power of the international trust. Indeed, the present year will probably be the most important in the history of the cartel for it is expected to bring into active operation sales comptoirs through which the cartel will sell products throughout the world, and a comprehensive understanding as to quotas, prices and internal markets.

Organzing Temporary Office.

Pending the organization of the sales comptoirs, the cartel was to proceed today with a temporary exportation office which will function until a permanent arrangement is affected. For this and other reasons, it would not be surprising if American steel interests desired to arrange some kind of participation in a cartel which has become a formidable competition. If the cartel succeeds in putting its own house in order during the present year then the road will be clear for an intensive campaign for a larger share of foreign trade, especially in those parts of the world where American companies have maintained ascendency.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To Feb. 2, 1910: 20 Years Ago Today

Contracts were let during the week for the addition of six stories to the two annexes to the big merchandise building of Sears, Roebuck & Co. in Harvard street, between Kedzie and Central Park avenues. This will make the merchandise building a uniform height of nine stories, and the 300,000 additional square feet of floor space to be provided by the additions will give the completed structure a total floor area of over 2,000,000 square feet, making it the largest building of its kind in the world. It will be 1,200 feet in length and over 300 feet deep. The contracts for the addition were let by Architects Nimmons & Fellows.

The sale of the property at 68 Lake street, belonging to Mrs. Louise H. De Koven Bowen, for $60,000 to a purchaser whose name is withheld was announced yesterday.

To Feb. 2, 1900: 30 Years Ago Today

The new woodworking machinery shops and power plant of the McCormick Harvester company, the largest of the kind in the world, are nearing completion at the company's works at Blue Island and Western avenues. Completed, the improvements will cost $250,000. The woodworking building is five stories and basement high and covers a ground area 615x75 feet. The power plant, adjoining, covers a space 132x153 feet.

The Northwestern university has let a contract for a cold storage warehouse to be erected at 148-164 Kinzie street, eighty feet east of Clark. The plans were prepared by D. H. Burnham & Co. and the estimated cost is $200,000. When completed the structure will be leased to a cold storage company.

Chicago—the home of the largest department store in the world—is going to have the most novel and lowest price merchandise mart of any big city, if the predictions of its backers come true. It will be known as the Leiter store and will open in about eight weeks. When Siegel, Cooper & Co. closed their doors May 1, 1917, Joseph Leiter began a search for tenants, but without avail. Finally Albert L. and George W. Doerr presented plans for a store patterned somewhat after the Bon Marche of Paris which were acceptable to him.

Plans have been announced for the construction of a de luxe apartment hotel at the foot of Foster avenue on the shore of the lake and overlooking the Saddle and Cycle club. The structure will be known as the Admiral and will cost $3,800,000. John F. Nyden is architect.

SELECT PERMANENT HOME FOR NEW INTER. BANK OF SETTLEMENTS

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Feb. 1.—Members of the subcommittee charged with making the preliminary arrangements for putting the Bank for International Settlements into operation have returned to Paris from Basle, where they have concluded tentative arrangements for the bank's headquarters.

The building selected by the subcommittee is that originally offered, known in Basle as Kirchgarten house. It is one of the most handsome buildings in the city and was originally built as the residence of a wealthy citizen.

Owing to numerous factors which will delay the orders for the remodeling of the building, which will be necessary to convert it into the bank premises, it will not be possible, it is learned, to have the building ready for occupancy on April 1, when it was hoped to open the doors of the world bank.

The subcommittee has therefore arranged to prepare temporary premises in another building which will serve until the permanent home of the bank has been completely remodeled and equipped. There will be some additions made to the building, but they will be in keeping with its fine architecture, and the committee is satisfied the edifice will make imposing quarters for the institution.

BANK STOCK MARKET SHOWS IMPROVEMENT DURING LAST WEEK

The week's bank stock market, was in many respects, the best since the beginning of the new year.

Northern Trust company was conspicuously strong, moving up 40 points to 870 bid without attracting sellers below 885. Central Trust Company of Illinois was also prominent on an upward swing of 10 points to 400 bid, offered at 404. First National continued in good demand at 693 to 698. National Bank of the Republic was higher, rising 3 points to sales at 150@152. Sales in Continental Illinois National were recorded between 689 and 694. Union Bank of Chicago was reactionary, losing 15 points at 330 bid, offered at 335, while Foreman-State National receded to 775@785, off 5, as did Peoples Trust and Savings when it changed hands at 485.

Automatic Musical Instrument, class "A," was the outstanding feature in the miscellaneous group, advancing 5 points to high sales at 15¾. It closed in good demand at 15 bid, offered at 15¼. Van Ess Laboratories was 2 points better at 12½ to 12¾.

Chicago Title and Trust was unchanged at 515@520. Chicago Daily News issues were inclined to be heavy; the common was quoted 31¼ to 31¾, and the preferred 95 to 96. Bendix Service, after early sales at 13¾, was wanted at 14¼ with limited offerings at 14¾. Northwestern Yeast was 2 points lower at 115 to 117.

BOND TRADING QUIET; FRENCH ISSUES CLIMB

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 1.—Bond trading on the New York stock exchange today fell into a peaceful rut with activity outside of the convertibles even more limited than on normal half holidays. Prices showed no important change, except in the French government bonds, both of which reached new highs.

American Telephone 5s of 1965 were fractionally higher and the International Telephone 5s offered yesterday were traded flat. Soo Line 6s were a feature of the rails, dropping two points. Erie 5s and Canadian National 5s were easy. Baltimore and Ohio 6s and 5s, Missouri Pacific 5s of 1977, and New Haven 4½s were firm. Pathe 7s lost more than 2 points. General American Investors 5s gained a point.

The general list was a little lower today than at the end of the previous week in spite of backing and filling in the various groups. Utilities turned in a rather surprising performance, reaching a new high for the month on Thursday, in the face of the heavy offerings of new utility bonds that have served to depress many issues subject to switching of portfolio holdings.

High grade rails were the principal sufferers, falling off three-quarters of a point, on the average, in a series of four declining sessions and regaining only a small part of the loss yesterday.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE

Money in Chicago firm at 5½@6½ per cent on collateral, 5½@6 per cent over the counter; commercial paper, 4¾@6¼ per cent; bankers' acceptances, 4@4½ per cent. Chicago clearings yesterday were $133,400,000, compared with $88,600,000 a week ago and $143,200,000 a year ago. New York clearings were $1,657,000,000.

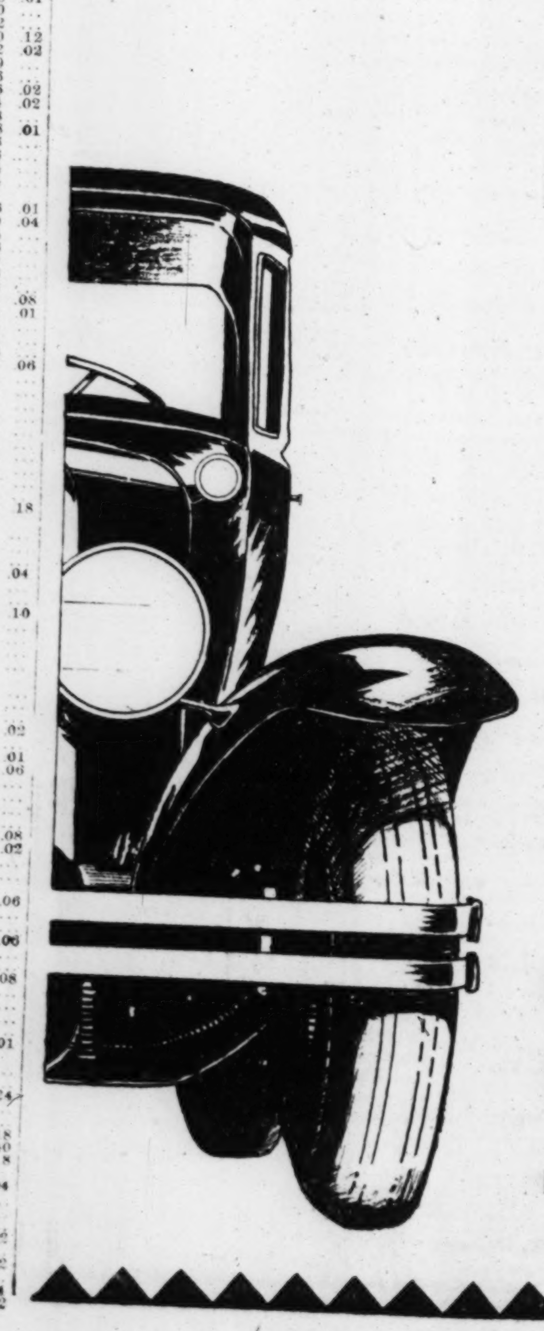
SAVE THE FINISH ON YOUR NEW CAR!



You bought your present family car with considerable pride. You felt that you had graduated into the fine car class, and wanted to congratulate yourself. But you are forced to use it in all weathers, on all occasions, as you did with the old car. You drive it to work, scratch fenders, soil rugs and upholstery. It's not the motor car it was a few months ago.

Don't use the family car for business. Another car, low-priced and sturdy, can solve the problem of new car maintenance. You can have the satisfaction of owning a fine car—and the usefulness of a more modest machine, ready on any occasion. You can spare yourself worry about the appearance of the big car, at the same time saving gas, oil and operating expenses on it. A utility car is a good investment.

Finding a good one is easy. Tribune Want Ads offer hundreds of used cars for sale every day. Here you have your pick of every well-known make. You can choose the snug coupe or sedan that fits your daily needs—saving your big machine for more important occasions and long trips. "CHOATE'S BRIDGE" was shown by Joseph Birren in an exhibition of his paintings at the Chicago Galleries. This is probably the first stone arch bridge constructed in America. The builder doubted his own ability to such an extent that when it was finished he hid in the bushes, prepared to run for his life if it fell, while an ox-cart was driven slowly over it to test its strength. The bridge stood; the constructor was showered with praise; and Ipswich, Mass., still boasts of its stability.

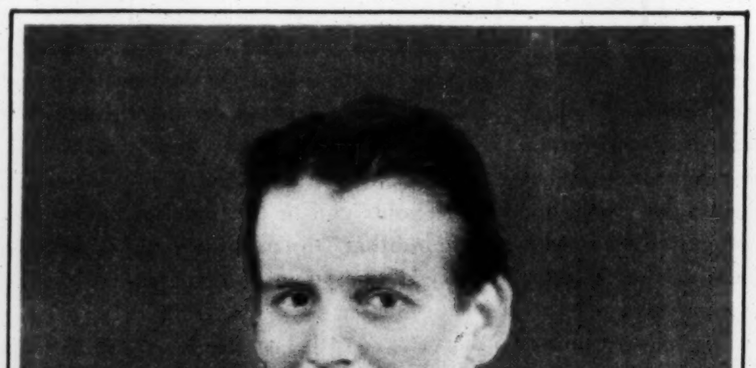
MISS LILLIAN BOND is a handsome English girl who took part in the Chicago run of "Follow-Thru."



WALLACE FORD has been in Chicago through the run of three plays—"Pigs," 1925-1926; "Broadway," 1927-1928, and "The Nut-Farm," 1929.

MISS MARCELLA SWANSON is best remembered here in Chicago from "Boom-Boom," which had a brief run in the spring of 1929. She had previously appeared here with Mitzi in "The Madcap."

ALFONSO OF THE EAGLE EYE, he who is king of Spain, takes what is ostensibly a shot at game, but what we suspect is actually a pose for photographic purposes. The scene is his majesty's country estate.

LINDY GOES IN FOR GLIDING—Flying out half a mile over the ocean and attaining an altitude of 500 feet in his maiden cruise in a motorless plane, Col. Lindbergh qualified at San Diego, Cal., for a first class glider pilot's license. He will become the ninth holder of that class of license in the United States.
(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

HE TEACHES FOOTBALL, but studies art. Robert Zuppke, known to the world as gridiron coach at the University of Illinois, excels in another line as well. An art enthusiast, he has painted a number of creditable canvases.

In the gay nineties the center of fashion whirled around the old Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on the corner of Fifth Avenue and 34th Street in New York. And thereby hangs one of the most romantic tales in all American business history. For opposite this hotel was a little apothecary shop. And over that shop hung the name Daggett and Ramsdell. And within that shop, fashionable customers were to be seen daily, making their purchases of this and that. And behind the counter in that shop was a very clever man who had both knowledge and imagination. And as he watched the continuous parade of beauty . . . slender figures wrapped in velvet, dainty fingers concealed in mink muffs, sweet delicate faces blooming like roses under gorgeous ostrich plumes . . . he thought, "Something must be done to preserve all this fair beauty against the inroads of late hours, rich foods and wines, excitement and pleasures."

And so he set to work and evolved a face cream . . . a new kind of face cream . . . that could actually be put in jars and marketed far and wide so that the fashionables of other cities, and indeed, other lands, could enjoy its benefits. And so Daggett and Ramsdell's Perfect

Cold Cream was born. Mr. V. Chapin Daggett himself invented the formula . . . with his own hands he made the first quantity . . . with his own hands he wrapped up the jars and sold them to his customers.

"Here," they said, "is just what we have longed for." And so it was not long before the whole fashionable world was using and praising the new cream. Queens of fashion and Princesses Royal of the theatre flocked to buy. And that is how Perfect Cold Cream is today a tradition in smart households and in the theatre, passed on from grandmother to daughter to granddaughter. Once the best and still the best!

Bottled Sunshine! "Every baby should have it regularly," physicians say

A pleasant mint flavor for grown-ups

"Bottled Sunshine for grown-ups too, especially expectant and nursing mothers," physicians advise. It helps to protect their teeth from decay. Try Squibb's appealing new mint flavor—it's easy to take! You can get it at all drug stores.

They are such taken-for-granted things—a baby's bones and teeth! . . . Just like skin and blood and eyebrows.

Of course every baby has them, but do you realize how much the kind of bones and teeth your baby has means to his health and appearance all through life?

A finely shaped head, well developed jaws and chin, a full chest, straight legs; sound, even, uncrowded teeth—the foundation for these things is laid during the first months of life.

If you could only watch your baby's bones and teeth form! You could detect at the start the danger which specialists say threatens nearly every baby. The danger of improper bone formation!

Science has discovered that the lack of one protective factor causes this condition—lack of Vitamin D.

There are two common ways to supply Vitamin D. Through sunshine and good cod-liver oil.

If it were possible for your baby to get enough sunshine on his bare body, he could be kept safe. But weather and clothing prevent. Clouds, fog, smoke, even ordinary window glass, filter out the rays that protect—the ultra-violet rays.

So physicians have come to depend almost entirely on "Bottled Sunshine"—good cod-liver oil.

Many leading physicians specify Squibb's Cod-Liver Oil because they know its vitamin content is guaranteed to be unvaryingly high. Squibb's Cod-Liver Oil is very rich in Vitamin D, the sunshine vitamin, which is needed to build good bones and teeth. It is also very rich in Vitamin A, which promotes growth and increases resistance to many infections.

Give your baby Squibb's Cod-Liver Oil as regularly as milk and orange juice. Your own physician will tell you this is good advice!

IN QUEST OF "FAITH, HOPE, AND PARITY"—Immediately following the arrival of the American delegation in London from Plymouth, Secretary of State Stimson (at the left) went into a three-hour conference with Premier MacDonald at 10 Downing street. It was a "pleasant talk," said Secretary Stimson, not interrupted "except by a nice cup of the prime minister's tea."

All Through Childhood

If you have a child, you've heard of Fletcher's Castoria. But do you realize its many marvelous uses? In infancy its soothing help is indispensable; its sweetening influence when Baby's little stomach seems sour; its gentle persuasion of the bowels when there is any irregularity. Helpful all through babyhood it's always mother's standby in cases of colic, and the equally dangerous diarrhea. Keep on with good old Castoria until your child is grown; until your youngsters are in their teens! Whenever coated tongues tell of constipation; whenever there's any sign of sluggishness that needs no stronger medicines to relieve. Castoria is pleasant-tasting; children love to take it. Bigger appetite; better assimilation and elimination will almost surely reward this sensible care. Raise boys and girls whose systems are sound and strong, and to whom constipation is practically unknown!

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an every-day aid. One need but read over the ingredients, printed plainly on the wrapper, to know that Castoria may be given freely without the least harmful effect.

Fletcher's Castoria is on sale in every drugstore in the land, and with every bottle comes a book that is a revelation to most mothers. Why Face Powders Wilt

You will never solve your beauty problem with face powders that can't resist heat. Normal body temperature soon dissolves any face powder whose base is starch . . . and perspiration fairly melts a starchy powder.

Boyer has compounded a face powder unaffected by the chemistry of your skin. The very feel of this powder is different . . . and it is different! It puts an immediate end to shiny skin and the powdered effect lasts for hours. It contains no rice to heat and produce a blotchy appearance . . . no greasy cream to clog the pores.

Don't envy a well-groomed appearance

Perhaps you, too, have envied the well-groomed appearance of those who use Boyer's Flowers of Beauty Face Powder . . . have envied their smooth, cool, freshly powdered appearance . . . so sure . . . so sophisticated. You, too, may always look your best with a face powder that does not wilt, a face powder unaffected by bodily heat. No other powder duplicates Boyer's cool, clinging, beautifying effect.

Boyer's Flowers of Beauty Face Powder is perfumed with a rare and subtle odor that awakens desire and accentuates charm and allure. The shades are ready-blended and matchless in their simple perfection. Your druggist can give you exactly the right shade.

Surely you will want to use Boyer's. A large box with puff, only $1.00 . . . a glass tube for the purse, only 25 cents.

The Glass that Cheers Like the Beer of Old

All the joys remain . . . Same sparkle, foam and flavor

The evening bottle of beer is something that many miss. Some are seeking like effects in home brews, in near-beers or in other drinks. But they fail to find them, for they are not there.

Atlas Special Brew is made to bring those old days back. It is brewed exactly like the old-time Atlas, always the leader in Chicago. The same masters brew it with the same old care. It has the same quality, same age, same purity. It has the same sparkle, foam and flavor. It brings you all the old delights, all the aids to good digestion.

After the process is finished, we evaporate most of the alcohol. That is the only difference, and you cannot discover it. Alcohol always was a minor factor, and the mealtime bottle is far better without it.

The Benefits of Beer

No need to miss beer. No need of makeshifts, flat, green or impure. You have the best you ever had in Atlas Special Brew.

If you liked the zest and flavor, they are here. If you liked the mellowness, it's here. We treat the water in this Brew to bring you that rare European flavor.

If you liked purity, here you have it at its utmost. Atlas Special Brew is sterilized, gradually cooled, filtered through white wool pulp, then pasteurized in the bottle. A famous laboratory certifies the purity on each bottle.

If you liked the aids to digestion, they were esters and aldehydes. Both are here in full. If you liked the tonic-effects, they were those aids to digestion, plus hops.

What Not to Do

Don't expect from green "near-beers" any of the old helps or delights. Don't expect them from home brews, wretched and impure.

Atlas Special Brew offers you the best that all the ages have produced in a malt-and-hop brew. Get it.

Atlas Special Brew is supplied by over 15,000 grocers, delicatessen stores and drug stores in Chicago and surrounding states. It is also served in most restaurants, hotels and clubs. It costs only 15c a bottle, much less by the case of 24 bottles, whether delivered direct to your door or from your neighborhood store. Be careful of the brand—Atlas Special Brew. If you should have any trouble getting it, write or telephone us for the name of your nearest dealer. Atlas Brewing Company, 2107 Blue Island Avenue, Chicago, Ill. CLUB ACTIVITIES

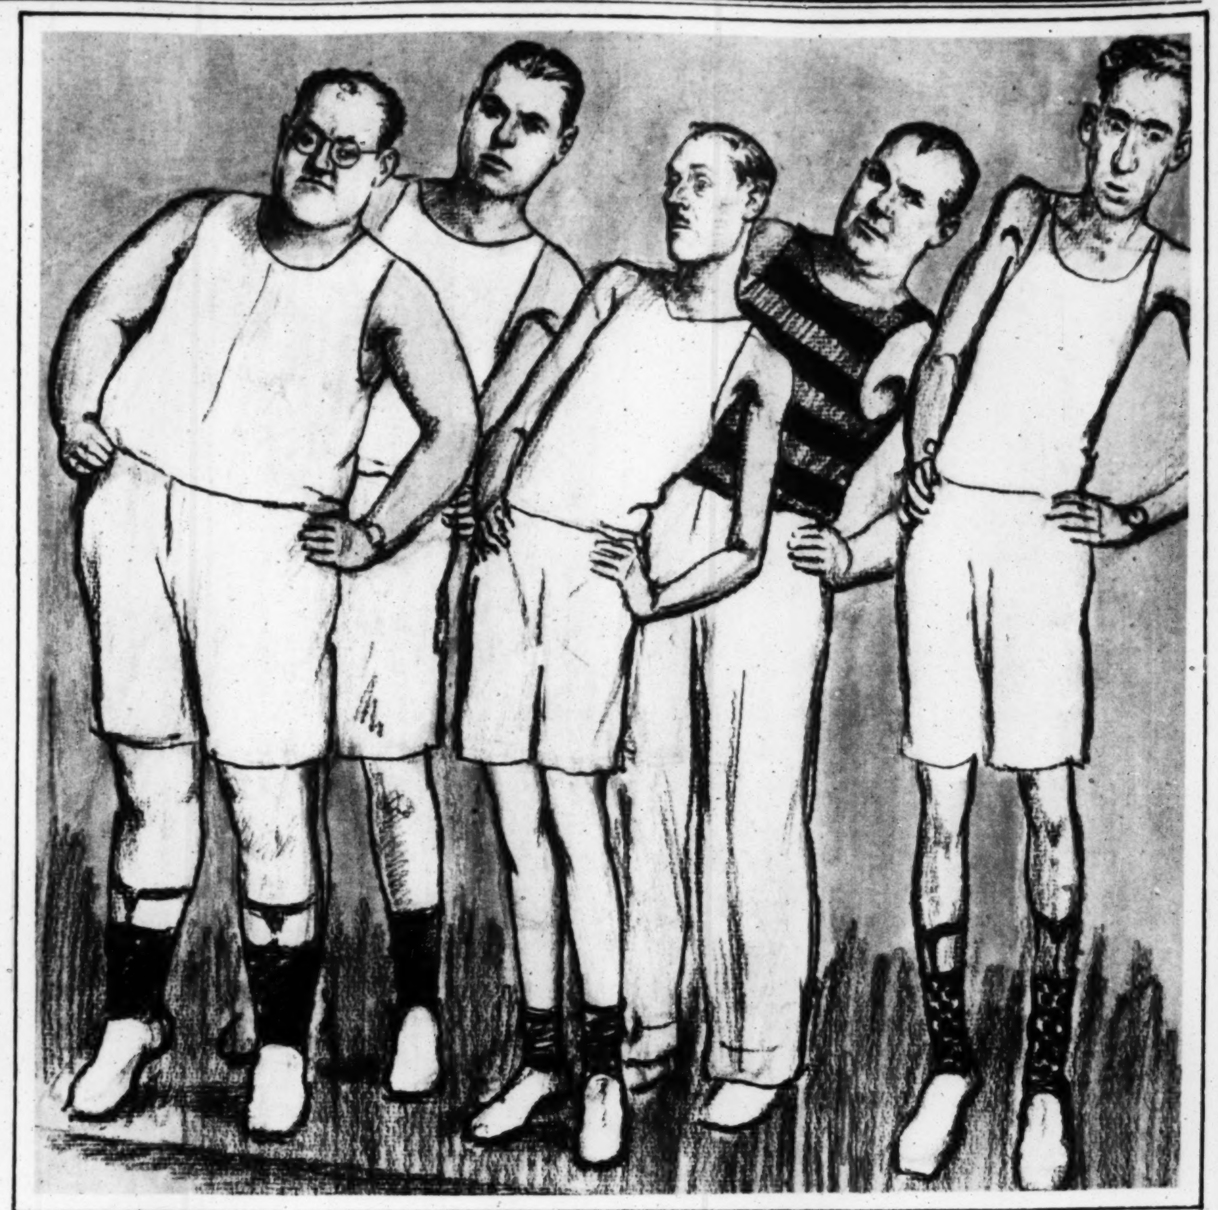
By W. E. Hill

(Copyright, 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.)

Service club. Meet W. O. Tinslee, all set for a good, rousing lunch with the Rotarians, or the Lions, or maybe it's the Kiwanis boys.

The ladies' literary club. Mrs. Harvey Strophe and Mrs. Mabelle Mull, recording secretary and chairman of the refreshment committee, respectively, are representative of the Corylopsis Drama club. Mrs. Mull is, if anything, a little more so because she has big drawing rooms that can accommodate all the club members on occasion. You'd be surprised what the Drama club gets through during a winter season. So far it has done Brieux, Shaw, Strindberg, Schnitzler, and Ibsen, and has compared one with another both singly and in the huddle system. And next week all the members are going to do "Strange Interlude," so that they can compare it with the plays of Tchekhov, which they are going to study shortly.



The athletic club. This is the tired business men's class going through a neat routine of calisthenics after a hard day in the office. Business men who are all worn out at 4:30 p m. from trying not to see insurance agents, or from nervous indigestion brought on by the stock market, or from one thing and another, are taken in hand by the physical instructor and made to bend, sway, and rise on their toes till, by 5:30, they are completely made over into something the little wife will be glad to welcome home.

The tough social club. The Baloney Social club, sponsored by One-Ear Maginnis and his gang, is really a political club, because around election time One-Ear and his cohorts are hired to shoot up rival voting factions. However, the big blowouts the Baloney club stages from time to time are purely social in their nature. A Baloney club party becomes very intimate in the early morning hours, and black eyes, dislodged teeth, cuts, bruises, and knockouts ensue.

The country club. New additions to the club membership are very apt to run wild for a week or so in the sport clothes departments of our leading emporiums. Naturally this just about spoils the looks of the eighteen hole course and is a great annoyance to nervous golfers. Here are Bob and Edna, going around for the first time, clad in the latest hint from Paris and London via the local department store. Edna's hat is labeled "Hollywood Charm" and Bob is wearing the new "Peek-a-boo" golf hose.

The art club. The Pen, Pencil and Eraser club has for its motto, "Nihil Sine Labore," which is Latin for "The Door to Success Is Labeled Push," or something as good. No person except maybe a nonresident sustaining member can join the Pen, Pencil and Eraser unless he or she does something artistic, like taking photographs of cute children in color, or painting telephone stands, or managing a gift shop. So that almost everybody in the Pen, Pencil and Eraser is a celebrity. At every get together evening gathering some one interesting delivers a little address on some worldwide topic. At the last meeting a delightful man high up in the diplomatic corps gave a half hour's talk on "Diseases of the Scalp."

The conservative club. Mr. Dillworthy's club had its heyday in the middle '80s, and nothing within the clubhouse has changed since then. The members hold a very poor idea of modern days and ignore them as much as possible. They still mention the blizzard of '88 and speak reverently of Lilly Langtry's beauty, "The Bohemian Girl," and Rice's "Evangeline."

Night club. Any one who can convince the boy at the gate that he's not a revenue officer can join this club. Even the police.

Use this HIGH-SPEED, SHORT-CUT ROUTE TO VOLUME SALES

U. & U.

SNAIL'S pace selling is the bottle-neck to mass production. High-speed methods in manufacturing demand a counterpart in sales. Style watches neither shelf nor warehouse. Turnover is the turbine that generates profits.

Chicago Tribune rotogravure matches the need of advertisers for accelerated volume sales. Developed and perfected for the age of speed it serves, rotogravure supplies the demand for a medium that will step up the selling pace in line with manufacturing tempo.

Rotogravure penetrates the armor plate of consumer indifference with torpedo insistence. Roto-pictured selling messages, beckoning with more allure than words alone, start selling quicker. Color, line and form stir the imagination, heighten anticipation, urge early satisfaction of the swift-born desire.

Put the tremendous power of this high-speed, high-profit medium into your 1930 selling drive! Smash over your sales messages with this force that everybody understands, responds to. Reach with high-velocity returns the more than a million Sunday Tribune families who turn first to the roto section for news, entertainment, and merchandise. Ask a Tribune man for the details!

Picturing your product in beautiful Chicago Tribune rotogravure places an actual, two-dimensional sample of your merchandise in the homes and minds of more than a million able-to-buy Tribune families.

What's Your Reason for Wanting to Learn Another Language?
Many are the reasons for mastering another language. Social preferment . . . travel . . . culture . . . commercial advancement . . . or scientific endeavor. The benefits that accrue to one versed in more than one language are too apparent to require commendation. Whatever YOUR reason may be . . . the Berlitz Conversational Method—as taught at the Berlitz School—is the quickest, easiest, most enjoyable and positive way to acquire mastery known. Conversational instruction . . . native teachers, rotated so you do not acquire the accent of any one instructor . . . small classes, limited to 5 members . . . and the psychological soundness of this method present a combination that produces linguists with a rapidity and certainty heretofore unknown in educational circles. When you enroll at the Berlitz School, the experience of a half century is squarely behind you to make your progress speedy, simple and certain. A trial lesson will cost you nothing . . . in any language—French, Spanish, German, Italian, etc. Won't you write, call, or telephone Harrison 0392 for an appointment and free descriptive bulletin?

AAA
MEN WORKING FOR US WROTE THIS "AD."
IT'S A STORY OF PERSONAL EXPERIENCES.

WE WANT TEN MORE MEN WHO CAN DO AS WELL.

Men have come to us from all lines of previous endeavor. They have reached their limits of earnings and their earnings fail to provide the comfort, the happiness, the education to which their families are entitled.

In our business, these men have found an outlet for their ambitions. Their earnings are dependent on their efforts. They found they were in business for themselves, reaping the rewards of independent business without the heavy investments of capital.

These are all actual experiences of men in the business or profession named. We have their signed statements. Most of them had had no previous sales experience.

MINISTER—M. H. H.: "I was over $1,000 in debt—had a family to support. Within a few months I had earned several thousand dollars, won $500 in cash prizes and an automobile."

MACHINIST—A. P.: "I worked as a machinist, earning $40 per week. Since joining you I have purchased my own home, a new six cylinder car, refurnished my home, and I earn over $6,000 per year."

VACUUM CLEANER SALESMAN—W. S. H. says: "I tripled my income my first year. This year I expect to earn between $6,000 and $7,000—I had 159 sales phoned in or mailed to me my first year."

CARPENTER—W. B. D. says: "I was a carpenter—the best I could do was $15 a week when I could work. I was out of work quite a bit. Now my average income is around $500 per month."

INSURANCE—E. L. W. writes: "I have been in this one line thirteen years, the responsibility great, the remuneration poor, at the beginning with you, I set my mark for $7,500 per year, but it will be five figures instead of four."

LAWYER—E. D. S.: "I practiced law fourteen years—I started with you April 6th—my earnings the first month were $600 and they have averaged that figure."

SPECIALTY SALESMAN—W. B. says: "I've sold specialties for fifteen years. I've always made money, but with you I've made more than double the amount of money I ever earned elsewhere."

SCHOOL TEACHER—F. R. writes: "I am now earning $60 daily. Think of it! This is far more than I ever earned as a professor of languages, and as a minister. My family is enjoying comforts such as they never had."

REAL ESTATE—Frank P. writes: "I owned a half interest in a real estate organization. My earnings averaged $5,000 per year. In this new work I made $1,000 in my first full month. I believe you offer the greatest opportunity of any in the country."

BRUSH SALESMAN—E. G. B. says: "My first week I earned $125 and a short time later I received $300 for a single week's work. For the past several months my earnings have passed $700 per month."

JEWELER—E. R.: "I owned a jewelry store and cashed the weekly checks of one of your men. Some weeks his checks were bigger than my profits. I had a big investment, he had none. So I sold my business and went with you. If I had known about it before I would have joined your ranks long before I did."

ACCOUNTANT—R. C. A.: "I was drawing $160 per month with——Motor Company. I have realized more than this in one week with you. You have given my wife and three children happiness they could not have received in my other position."

FARMER—Max D.: "I was a farmer in Germany, made $13 per week. You can imagine how little English I spoke with only two months in America. My brother was with you. I joined him in April, 1926. During the past six months I have earned a salary of $6,000 and am the possessor of a fine Whippet car, which I won in a contest."

TRAVELING SALESMAN—W. S.: "Growing tired of the life of a traveling salesman, away from home and family, I quit my $60 a week traveling job and joined your organization. In three years I have attained an income of $10,000 per year."

DIGNIFIED POSITION—E. P. S.: "I occupied a dignified position in a local manufacturing plant. I could see no chance to improve my earnings. I was advised to try your company. I did. I wish I could adequately describe what it means to me. I am now able to maintain a home in the finest residential section and provide for a family of six."

The above are a few selected from many—we have musicians, painters, clerks, meat cutters, book salesmen, portrait salesmen, toolmakers, grocers, doctors, engineers, iron workers, merchants and many others who, without previous experience, fit this business like a glove.

It's a dignified, profitable business for young men of ability, integrity and character. It requires hard work, but pays well for it. We don't ask you to punch a clock, but expect an honest day every day. No matter what you are doing, or why it is not satisfactory, this offer of ours is worth your consideration. Just as the above stories are signed evidence of what other men are now doing, so are they a guarantee that other men can do as well.

We are part of a 16 million dollar international concern, manufacturing an exclusive specialty that has a universal market. We have no competition. Full page advertisements in Saturday Evening Post, Ladies' Home Journal, Good Housekeeping, Literary Digest and other leading magazines.

Mr. Gallagher will interview men interested in this offer on Monday between 9 and 12 and between 2 and 5—has purchased from us an 8 room de luxe home in the Powhatan Co-operative Apartment Building, at 50th and the lake. He now finds that his business demands his remaining in New York for the next three years and has asked us to secure a desirable tenant for that period of time. The lease will carry all the usual advantages and privileges of the building, such as the use of the swimming pool and the ballroom. The rent asked is approximately one-half of what similar apartments are renting for in other fine buildings in Chicago. For appointment call Plaza 5220. Garard Trust Co., owner's representative.

OVERLOOKING EAST END PARK

JUST SOUTH OF 51ST-ST. on HYDE PARK-BLVD.; 8 large rooms besides 2 sun parlors. There are eight windows on the east in dining room, living room and sun parlor overlooking parks and lake. Four master chambers, three tile baths; all master rooms are beautifully carpeted, and these with drapes will be sold very reasonably. The apartment is in fine condition and can be leased at $250 per month.

COLUMBIAN COLORTYPE BUILDING

Two blocks from the southern tip of Grant Park and the Lake at Twenty-first-st., now has space available, affording to tenants full daylight floor space; advantageous location, superior transportation facilities, abundant fresh air, relief from loop congestion, abundant parking space, and very moderate rent. 18,000 square feet are on each floor; the floor load is 250 lbs. to a square foot.

Ten minutes from the loop by train, elevated, street car or motor bus. The Columbian Building affords close proximity to downtown with the added advantage of parking space for automobiles and a lack of traffic congestion. The widening of Twenty-second street and of Indiana avenue opens two wide traffic arteries into this district.

The 1933 World's Fair, which is to be built on islands in the lake East of the Lief Erickson drive, will have its main entrance at the Twenty-third street viaduct, only three blocks from the Columbian Colortype Building.

RADIO CABINETS SOLID WALNUT HAND CARVED

ALMOST GIVEN AWAY
BECAUSE

We have been forced to discontinue manufacturing these cabinets, perfect in design, made of solid walnut throughout, in antique copper or walnut finishes and the kind of carving that is appreciated by the critical buyer.

Were it possible to describe in detail these extremely beautiful cabinets we would do so but only a visit to our factory will convince you that these cabinets are being disposed of at less than the actual cost of carving.

We urge you to make this visit without delay as the number of cabinets is limited.

For an illustration: Gothic hand carved solid walnut cabinet, made to sell for $250, disposal price, $60.

Beautifully designed French cabinet, solid walnut, hand carved, made to sell for $295, disposal price, $69.

A few odd low boy cabinets, solid walnut, disposal price, $29.

Other models proportionately priced.

Any standard radio chassis will fit all of our cabinets.

FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE WE HAVE ARRANGED FOR YOUR ADMITTANCE TO OUR FACTORY ON SUNDAY FROM 10 A. M. TO 5 P. M., AND EVERY DAY FROM 9 A. M. TO 8 P. M.

Paris Gives Out Inside Fashion Facts for 1930

Lingerie, Which Plays a Solo Role Under the Gown, is as Delicate and Lovely as a Cobweb and, Like the Rest of Milady's Costume, It is Distinctly Feminine

PARIS SNAPSHOTS

A new lingerie material is called "tigressa." It is fine georgette in pastel colors flecked with white.

Some of the newest nightgowns have gone back to the Empire silhouette and have little empire sleeves.

Paris has taken to the boneless corset, made of silk jersey, tulle and lace, all rubberized, but weighing no more than a handkerchief.

Tailored lounging coats of bright velveteen, cut like redingotes, are being worn over pajamas.

Worth's lace trimmed pajamas are right in line with the new femininity.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—The inside facts about 1930 styles are just coming out. Only, the vaguest rumor of news can be had about what we are going to wear on the outside of our inside chic, but those delicate inner garments Paris is preparing for spring give you a pretty straight tip as to the lines of the clothes that are to be worn over them. Lingerie necessarily apes exterior fashions because both must hew to one and the same line if the silhouette is not to be bungled.

Lingerie styles had begun to change before the great costume style revolution set the world a wagging its tongue in the fall, and lingerie styles are on the move again. Tailored "shorts" and brief step-ins are being elbowed into a less conspicuous place in the lingerie fashion parade. Silhouettes to be worn on the inside are getting longer and more ladylike in the same pace that dresses get that way.

The one deadly-sin of lingerie in this epoch is bulkiness. The new 1930 period avoids this with exactitude, but otherwise there is a bit more to the lingerie being prepared by Paris for smart women. You may only wear one garment under your frock, as our best young ladies have been doing, but it will be a different kind of composite than the one undie you wore last year.

First off, all lingerie, while simple, is more feminine than formerly. Chemises fit above the hipline, and while they are ample and long below they are decidedly slinky so that no flare is apparent to disturb the streamline of the dress skirt. Night gowns follow the trail of the fashionable evening frock and quite often its princess silhouette as well. They are trimmed with frivolous lace or ruffles and are altogether ladylike.

Combinations to wear under the evening gown are often made of the finest Alencon lace, lined with layers of delicate chiffon. The whole garment could be put in a reasonably large envelope, and yet it is apt to be almost ankle length, and to have brief culottes attached underneath, so that you need wear it and no other with your smart frock for evening. The bodices of such combinations are equipped with brassiere tops.

A sketch of this type of evening lingerie is shown in figure 1. It's from Cadolle and is made of black lace and lined with black silk crepe. There are little black crepe culottes attached to the fitted bodice underneath.

New daytime lingerie ensembles that are extremely smart are made with step-in chemises of satin and skirts of the same material that button by means of a fitted yoke around the hips. One of these is also shown in figure 2. It is made of pink crepe satin and both the step-in and the skirt are given yokes at the top, these yokes being embroidered exquisitely in shaded tones of darker pink.

Embroidered lingerie, which has languished unsought after in Paris, for a time, is getting vigorous in a new revival. Hundreds of clever French fingers are busily working on embroidered lingerie. However, the old haphazard way of putting embroidered bouquets and floral pieces here and there on any under garment is finished. When embroidery is used it has a definite meaning, as in the ensemble of our sketch.

Something extremely new in lingerie ensembles is the combination nightgown and pajamas that Irande makes for her smart clientele. One is sketched directly above. There is a very, very brief nightgown of white crepe romain that is about the weight of gorgette. This gown has a double ruffle collar and a jabot of self material. As soon as you bound from your bed you are supposed to pull on the black satin trousers, with their wide legs and fitted top, attached by crossed, buttoned bands. You are thus ready for appearance in your household. Parisiennes like this combination better than the usual nightgown and banal kimona or dressing gown. It's chic, all right, if you don't mind sleeping in a really short nightgown.

At the opposite corner of the page is the opposite extreme in nightgowns and one that is entirely charming. Madame Alexandre makes this gown of white georgette with a deep V-shaped yoke in front and a square yoke in back made of black chantilly lace. You see, black and white are just as chic for the inside as for the outest outside. This gown is very long and falls in a square train at the back. The front is gently rounded and trimmed by a curved motif of black chantilly lace. It reaches just to the ankles.

Sketched to the right of this nightgown is the smartest kind of daytime combination, which is a creation of Chantal. She makes this combination in crepe de chine in the tone of the frock under which you wear it, or you may have it in pink, if you prefer. It is quite long, reaching about five inches below the knees, and most women prefer it to match their dresses in color. The fitted bodice has a yoke of self-material at the top and the skirt is flared by pie-piece godets, two at the center front and two at each side. They are narrow and do not give a real flared line. Under the skirt is a short buttoned pair of culottes that are attached to the waistline of the bodice.

For ladies who like to read or breakfast in bed, Annek has designed the little bed jacket shown in figure 6. It's pink in color and is made of a new ostrich-cloth that looks like chenille. Around the neck is a pink scarf lined with black satin, which, tied in a bow, holds the jacket fastened. The flaring sleeves are given ties of pink and black that pass through double slits at the wrist so they may be gathered close or left floating as illustrated.

Most of the time Paris makes lingerie that is to be worn in daytime in one piece, so that there will be no danger of a separation at some critical moment. An exception is the brassiere and skirt from Cadolle which is sketched in figure 7. This ensemble is made of beige lace with a fitted crepe band at the bottom of the brassiere and another at the top of the skirt. Shorts of beige crepe de chine are worn under the skirt and are sewed onto its yoke. The skirt itself is lined with beige georgette.

Wherever you are, the large, bright colored handkerchief is your constant companion this season, and one of the cleverest of these is shown in our sketch. It is from Annek and is made of crepe de chine with a square center from which hang alternating flaring petals of crepe de chine and tulle.

Lounging pajamas have threatened to become standardized, so that the novel pajamas from Irande, shown in figure 9, are cause for enthusiasm. They are made of burgundy red crepe maroçain, and the extremely wide trousers are piped at the sides and caught into a fitted band around the ankles. The sleeves follow the same silhouette and make the short straight jacket decorative.

A tuck-in blouse of pink crepe romain is worn with this pajama suit, which guarantees chic to the lady about the home either in the morning or evening.

High-heeled mules made of the material of pajamas or dressing gown are worn on the feet.

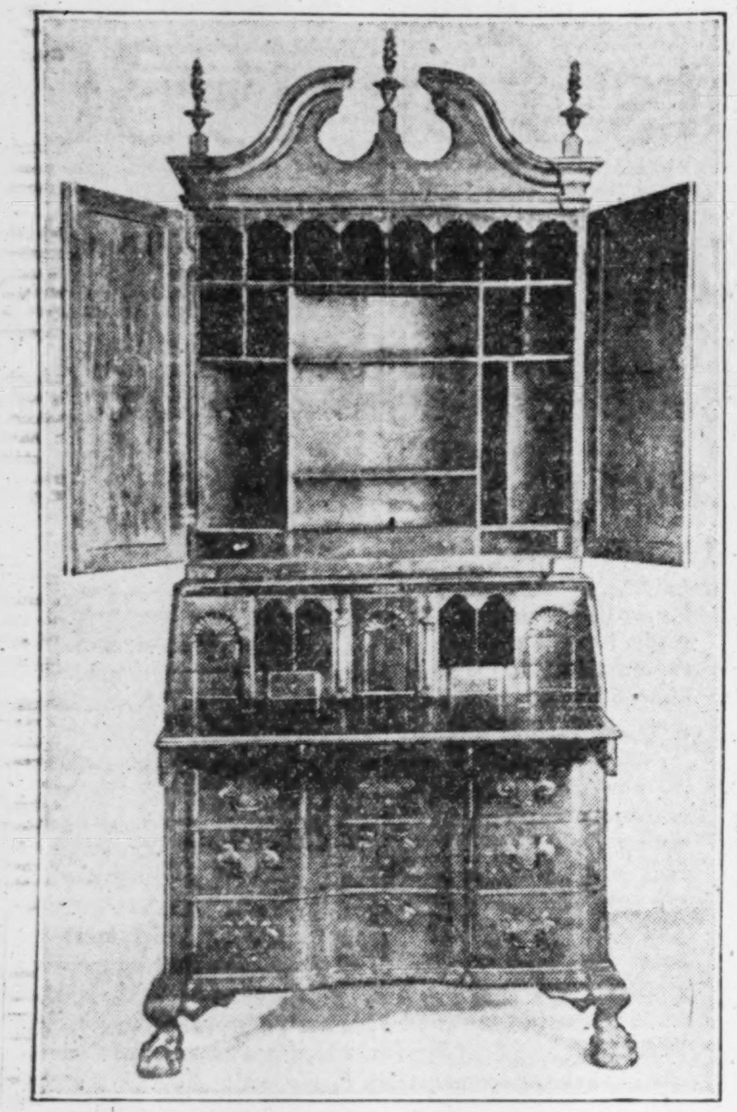
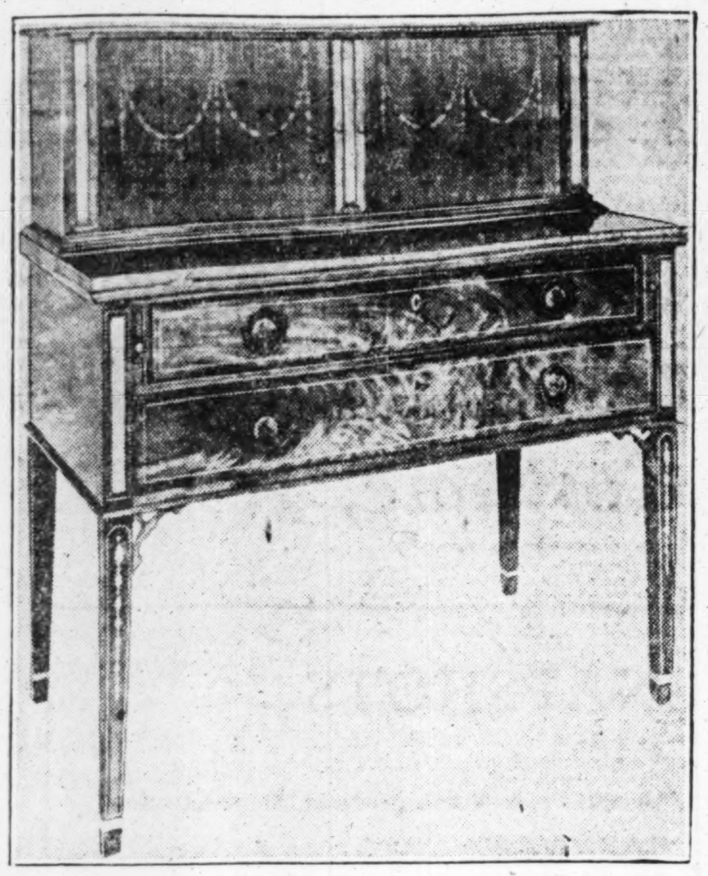
HOME FURNISHING AND DECORATING

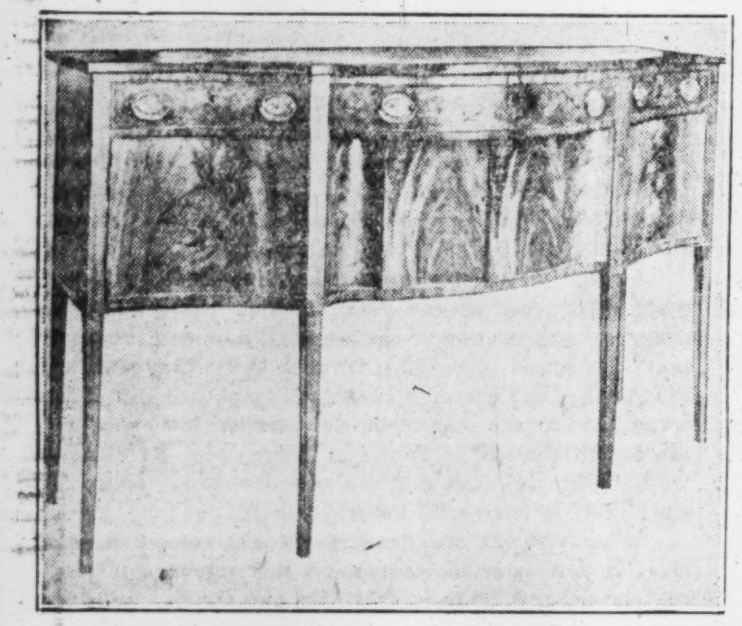
The Philip Flayderman Collection - - By Edith Weigle



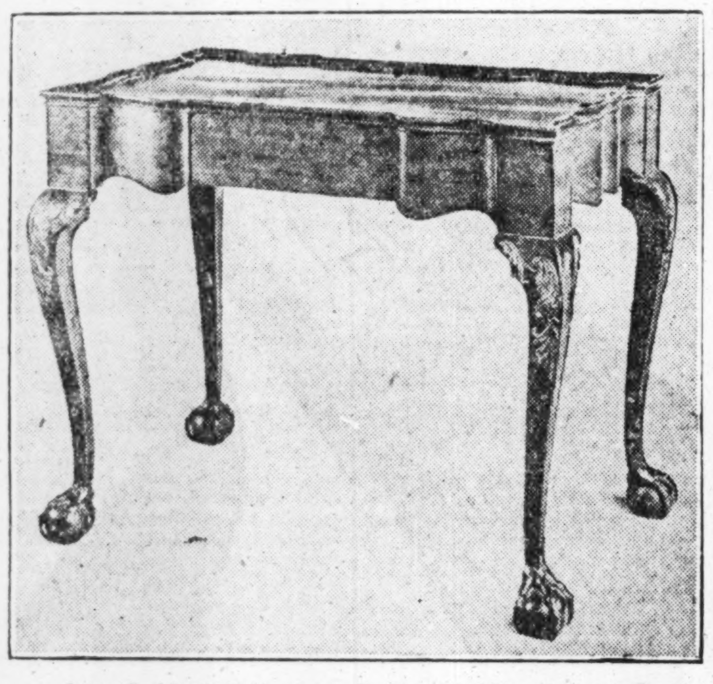
The recent sale of the Philip Flayderman collection of American antiques, in New York, brought such astounding prices that even connoisseurs were amazed. This beautiful carved mahogany block front secretary-cabinet with claw and ball feet, for instance, sold for $13,000. It was attributed to a Newburyport cabinet maker of pre-revolutionary times and is, of course, one of the finest examples in existence.



The label of John Seymour and Son, makers of this Hepplewhite inlaid mahogany tambour secretary, enhanced its value, as did the date, 1790. It brought the top price at the Flayderman sale—$30,000. Each article in the collection sold for an average price of $840, breaking the record set by the Reifsnyder collection of last year, where the average was $720 per item. Are antiques valuable in 1930 is rather definitely answered in the affirmative, and even reproductions are bringing excellent prices and achieving increasing popularity. Because there is nothing faddish about early American furniture, it is safe to predict that it will be just as good five or ten years hence as it is now.



This Hepplewhite mahogany serpentine-front sideboard was once owned by Governor Josiah Bartlett of New Hampshire, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. It is trimmed with fine original oval brasses stamped with the American eagle and having reeded handles. It was a part of the long and illustrious Flayderman collection.



John Goddard of Newport, R. I., probably rolled over in his grave when this tea table, made by him in 1763, brought $29,000 under the auctioneer's hammer in 1930. Little did he know that his fame would go down the years, increasing in weight like a snowball, till it finally commands the most extravagant sum imaginable. He is, perhaps, the most perfect furniture craftsman America has produced.

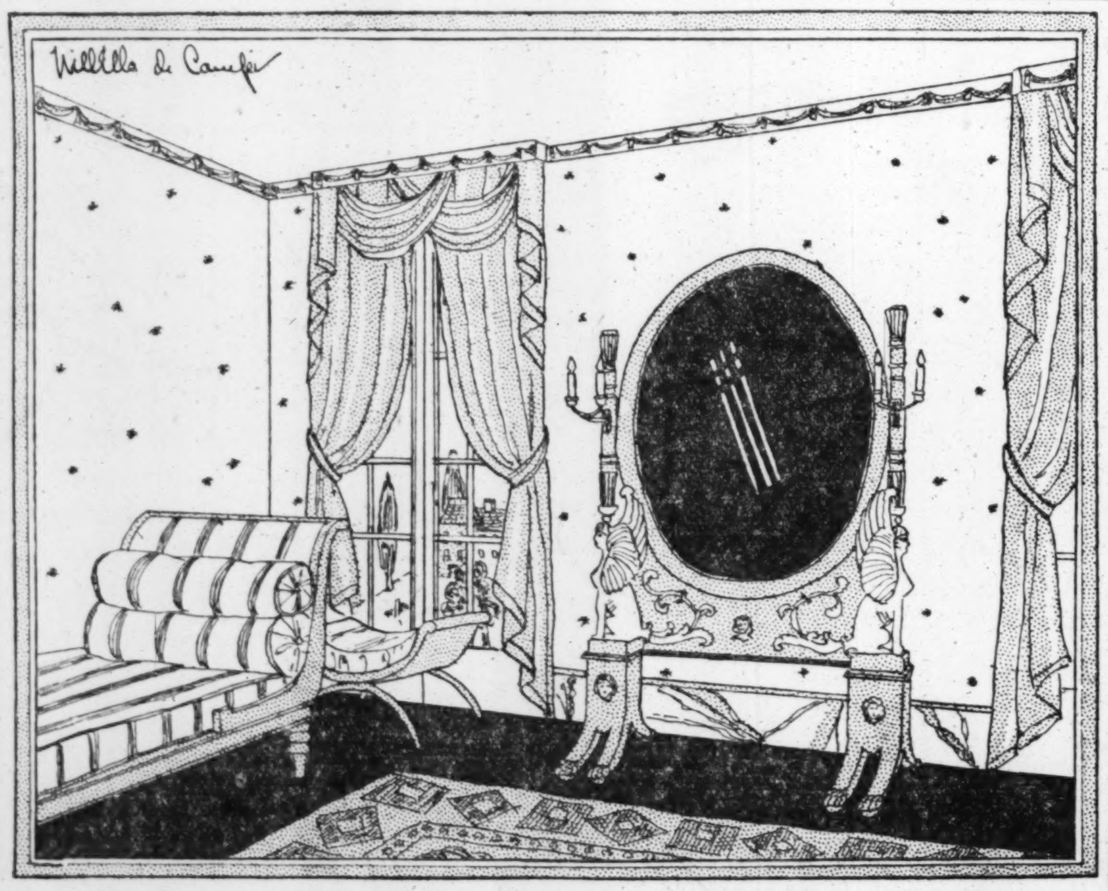
Empire Period of French Decoration

By WillElla De Campi.

WHEN Napoleon Bonaparte became the emperor of the French, decorations and furniture as well as the general mode of living were designed to express his strong personality. Because Napoleon favored the imperial Roman style with its cold formality, interiors were carried out to suit his tastes and to please his egotism. Decorative details reflected the glory of his conquests in a pompous military spirit.

Much of the decoration in color was startling and painfully crude, which is not surprising when consideration is given to the fact that many of the men who were appointed to high positions were totally uncultured in the arts. They and their wives and mistresses, having suddenly been lifted above the lower classes, indulged in a reactionary orgy of self expression in the matter of decoration contrasting forcefully with the delicacy and subtle tastes of the old régime. However, the period does not lack a certain dignity and grandeur, and an Empire room, when carefully planned, expresses a pleasing sense of beauty and distinction.

Excellent cabinet work, finely executed metal mounts which showed to advantage against the dark mahogany largely used for furniture, and rich upholstery materials were characteristic of the period. There was only a moderate amount of carved wood, relief from the plainness of the furniture depending on embellishments of exquisitely modeled brass, bronze, gilt and ormolu mounts.



The sphinxes on the mirror and the stars on the wall are characteristic of the Empire style.

Chief among the decorative motifs typical of the time were bay wreaths torches, the cap of liberty, laurel branches, the winged victory, Roman eagles, the Athenian bee, war trophies and weapons, including helmeted heads of warriors, cornucopias, honeysuckle, pineapple pillars, and, after the Egyptian campaign, the sphinx. Napoleon's letter N, surrounded by a victory wreath, was often used for a motif in decoration, as was the Empire star. Lions' or bears' claw feet were in evidence on many pieces of furniture.

Chairs and sofas had many characteristics in common. The chairs, which ranged from the elaborate "throne" ones to fairly simple side chairs, generally had frames of mahogany or of painted, enameled, bronzed or gilded woods. Large chairs were lavishly decorated with metal mounts and structural carving. Arms on these chairs sometimes ended in heads of rams, lions or other animals, and sometimes were fashioned in the shape of swans' necks, supported by cupids. Strange gryphons and flaming torches appeared as front supports. The backs of these chairs often were completely rounded, and were extremely comfortable.

Side chairs of simple lines were pleasingly dignified. Their square frames were set upon straight, round legs, with back legs often curving slightly outward. Top rails were usually broad, with flat, solid splats in the shape of a vase or lyre, or else with carved and molded cross rails.

Rich upholstery stuffs of this period included loud brocades and silks or velvets. These were sometimes in plain, strong colors, sometimes figured or sprinkled with formal classic motifs. For curtains, velvets, silks, sateens, and embroidered muslins were used. Tapestries, which had been so much in demand during the preceding periods, were seldom used on Empire pieces.

The Empire style was the last of the distinctly French modes. From that time until the recent developments in modern art, France has been indulging only in reproductions and adaptations of her past styles.

In the accompanying illustration is shown a delightful dressing room done in the style Empire. Walls are white, spattered with gold stars. The baseboard is white, marbleized in black and gold. A cornice, which is continued across the tops of the windows, is also done in gold and white. Draperies in typical Empire style are of emerald green taffeta, finished with a flat gold braid. Furniture is of mahogany and the impressive cheval glass is embellished with gold mounts. Green and gold striped silk upholsters the graceful daybed, and the little stool has a cushion of gold colored velvet.

You'll Get Rid of Blackheads Sure

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them.

To do this get two ounces of Calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The Calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

HERE is an up-to-the-minute design that you'll be sure to like, and the pattern, No. 2973, isn't at all difficult to handle. A picture chart that comes with the pattern simplifies the putting together. This is a design that is just the thing for crêpe satin, using the reverse side for the contrast, and you make no mistake by choosing black.

The bodice is beautifully molded and is suggestive of a princess dress with its snugly fitted hips and full, flaring skirt. The pointed treatment of the bodice, both in the back and the front, is interesting, and the Vionnet neck, instead of being bound, is finished with applied bands.

The normal waistline is marked by the belt which is slipped under the panel extension in the front. The sleeves are close fitting and are finished with shaped trimming pieces. Be sure to follow the chart in laying the pattern pieces on the material and mark clearly on your material every perforation, notch, and any other marks that may be used.

Navy blue silk crêpe is a good choice for office, classroom or general daytime wear. Sheer woolen in beige and brown tiny check will be stunning for sports and spectator sports wear. Canton crêpe in a rich dark purple shade will be a good choice for something a little more dressy, and so will claret red crêpe de chine.

Pattern No. 2697 makes a darling little dress for girls. It consists of a skirt that is laid in wide box plaits all around and finished at the bottom with a wide hem. This skirt is attached to a sleeveless waist and has suspender straps on the front. Then the little bolero jacket finishes this altogether adorable outfit.

A red plaided woolen skirt, with a plain red woolen blouse will be pretty with the bolero made of a midnight blue velveteen. Feather weight tweed in beige and brown for the skirt and bolero, with plain beige jersey blouse is another interesting combination. Among other suitable materials are covert cloth, velveteen, rayon printed crêpe, sports weight linen, piqué and tweed like cottons.

Pattern No. 2900 is for a frock suggesting the princess style. The diagonal line of the bodice adds considerable length to the figure, and the double circular tiers of the skirt swing gracefully when the wearer moves. The shoulder and hipline bows show the feminine influence in the mode and make the dress most becoming. A plain skirt is made and to this the gathered tiers are sewed. The upper tier is sewed to the upper edge of the skirt, while the lower tier is sewed along perforated lines. Be careful to do the gathering evenly by dividing the tiers into quarters and pin to the skirt before basting. Of course, the skirt is divided also into quarters. Arrange the fullness as evenly as possible, and baste carefully so that in stitching the fullness won't be pushed out of place.

This is a dress that should meet every day requirements for the business woman and college girl, as well as the socially busy woman.

Black crêpe satin with matching velvet bows, navy blue Canton crêpe, Goya red crêpe de chine, and myrtle green crêpe Roma are interesting suggestions. It also makes up beautifully in black transparent velvet, printed velvet, silk crêpe and crêpe Elizabeth.

2973—Woman's and miss' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inch bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 39 inch material with ⅞ yard of 39 inch contrasting.

2900—Woman's and miss' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inch bust measure. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 40 inch material with ⅝ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

The Angular Figure Lacks Appeal

A Few Extra Pounds Will Remove Years from One's Appearance

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Not for some time to come, one may safely predict, will there be any change in taste for the lovely, pliant, graceful slenderness of body which so markedly establishes youth. In that youth implication lies the secret of its hold. Chic requires graceful slenderness. This year's models in frocks demand it as did last year's and the years before. Besides, svelte figures belong in our era of concentrated living quarters, limited closet space and general female activities.

But graceful slenderness of figure is in no wise relative to thinness with hard set lines, awkward angles, and hollowed spots. The latter type of figure is without appeal. And all too frequently the hollowed cheeks and drawn lines of face make the painfully thin girl or woman look years older than she is.

A woman can put herself on a liquid diet for three or four days and be three, four, or five pounds lighter at the end of her fast. But putting on weight at that rate is something the excessively thin may dream about but never accomplish, for gaining weight is a comparatively slow process. Nevertheless, it can be done. Angles can be turned into curves and hollows can be filled out. If the condition is due to improper digestion, bad elimination, lack of proper assimiliation of food, or disease, the treatment begins with correction of the physical cause at fault.

Worry Produces Thinness.

If one suddenly begins to show a great loss of weight, home treatment is the height of folly. There must be some serious cause which only your physician is in a position to determine, unless it is due to worry over something that only the patient's better self can adjust by mental cure. For one can worry oneself into a shadow of the lovely old silhouette.

The mental state has a great deal to do with the curves of the body. Living in a high pitched state of nerves and excitement, whether on pleasure bent or in the practical pursuit of bread winning, is debauching to young lines of cheek and form. The stored fat in the body, which makes the curves, is the shock absorber for nerves. Totally deplete that store and you are beating your emotions out against a network of raw nerves.

Women require more fat on their bodies than men because of their higher strung mechanism. By this is not meant that they should store superfluous fat—only enough to provide a reservoir of energy.

If it is an exaggerated nervous excitement that contributes to your stay among the "leans," better mental discipline first is needed and then after it a more systematic course of living. Rest periods, enforced if necessary, and long hours of sleep with a day in bed once in two weeks, if it can possibly be managed, will help calm the nerves and create a better mental poise.

If you are thin, however, because of the things you eat, your case is simplified appreciably. And in this class of food sinners, the great majority of the excessive leans deserve placement.

Remove Tension at Table.

Maybe you belong to the follies group whose excessive reducing has brought you to the point of emaciation. Among young girls this cause is particularly current, with a regretable increase in present and potential tuberculosis victims. Excessive smoking, dancing in smoke filled rooms, and the high pressure nerve tension that goes with these excitements are all things that can be modified with a little good sense.

The impression generally is that thin persons do not eat enough. The truth is they partake of quantity but not quality. It is careful eating — not heavy eating—that fills out cavities and adds to the esthetic appeal of a flesh denuded silhouette. Eating heavy combinations of proteins, fats, and starches is not the course to pursue. This only succeeds in upsetting the digestion and adding to one's troubles.

An eating fault common to thins, due to their high strung tension, is the bolting of food and washing it down with copious drafts of water, tea, or coffee at table. A practice that must be indulged is to get oneself in a relaxed frame of mind for eating. This is of far more importance in a weight gaining program than is usually conceded. Sit at the table for five minutes before ordering your food, just simply relaxed from head to foot.

Have Well Balanced Meals.

Increasing the number of meals is not the idea. The regular three a day program should stand. But those three meals must be eaten without hurry and be well balanced as to food items. Excessive consumption of sweets, fats, and starches is just as bad for the lean as for the fat.

Menus for the thin must contain a full quota of fruits and vegetables to help digestion and elimination. Remember, you who are trying to gain weight, that it is a question of digestion and assimilation of food and not a question of food cramming.

There are fat-making foods of value, to be sure. The starved fat cells have to be repadded with tissue. Butter, cream, fat meats, cereals, bacon, legumes like beans, peas, lentils, fresh corn, and so on are flesh makers, but in a good weight gaining diet these are not to be eaten exclusively. They are incorporated in a day's menu so that a good food balance is acquired.

Butter you may partake of rather generously, since it has the highest food value of anything you can get, and is easily assimilable. Add it to your cereal, your bread, your vegetables, your meat.

Get your fresh vegetables for dinner and have fresh vegetable or fruit salads twice a day, using olive oil dressing. For olive oil is one of the best things for the thin and the nervous. It is highly assimilable and nourishing. It is lubricating, too—therefore of inestimable value to the entire digestive tract. Its reaction on the tissues, especially of the face, is most gratifying. If you can take olive oil straight, take it. It is a wonderful stomach conditioner along with its other virtues.

Drink milk. Milk is a food. But remember if you drink large quantities of milk you must have vegetables in the diet to offset any tendency toward constipation. Milk in itself is not constipating, but gained its reputation because of the neglect to take vegetables and fruits with it.

Orange juice is especially recommended to increase the advantages of milk taking. Take your milk at the end of the meal and in between meals. Drink no liquid, in fact, until the end of the meal so that food under no circumstances will be swallowed in an unmasticated condition.

A Dollar for Your Dreams

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay $1 for every dream published. Address "Dreams," Chicago Tribune.

"Double Header."

My dream was a doubleheader, since I dreamed two things the same night, which both came true the next morning.

The first was that my English instructor and one of my classmates quarreled over the structure of a sentence. Imagine how queer I felt the next morning when they got into a heated argument over the structure of a single little sentence.

The other dream was that an acquaintance of mine, who had long hair, had had it cut in an extreme fashion. I had another queer sensation that morning when I saw that her locks had been shorn wind blown style.

Premonition of Illness.

One night several weeks ago I dreamed there was a cave extending from the surface to the interior of the earth, narrowing as it went. At the end of this cave I was sitting on the cold rocky floor.

My first thought was: Am I passing over into the next life? The next was: No, I am not, and I must get back to the earth's surface. Then began my long and arduous journey.

The next day I was ill. In the afternoon the doctor pronounced my illness pneumonia. And believe me, just as in my dream, it was a long, hard road back to health and the outside world.

Found Library Book.

When it was time to return some library books, a very small one was missing. It was renewed, giving me more time to search, which I did but with no success.

One night I went to bed resolved to go to the library the next day and pay for the book. While asleep I dreamed I picked up some magazines of my daughter's and there it was.

The next morning, with no hope of success, I looked among the magazines and there lay the book as I had dreamed.

What Did You Dream About This?

Recently I sent a letter about my best bargain to THE TRIBUNE. The next evening after mailing the letter I dreamed that my article had been published and that a check was on the way for me.

I related my dream to my mother the next morning and she teased me constantly, but we were both surprised the following Sunday when my article actually did appear.

A Profitable Dream.

Some time ago I bought an old leather seated rocking chair at an auction sale. Recently I dreamed of the great value of the newly acquired chair, for which I had paid only a meager sum.

My curiosity was aroused, so when I cleaned the porch a few days later I examined the old chair. The lining under the seat had several holes in it, where, upon close investigation, I found four $5 bills tucked away ready to drop out at any moment. Indeed, the chair was far more valuable than I was aware.

Keeping Dreams Intact

Personal Neatness Wears the Halo of a Real Virtue in the Days After Marriage

by Doris Blake

SOME speaker, recently discussing the ills of marriage, hit on a theme not incorporated into "warnings" or "commandments" as often as it might be.

The value of it was brought to my mind by a correspondent's confession of open disgust at the mate taken on but six months ago, and expressed in the more forceful than elegant phrase: "He's so dirty about himself he's disgusting."

That men grow sick unto death of women who betray the dreams of which lovely girls are made is more commonly hinted at in advice to newlyweds. But the subject of keeping up a high standard of personal neatness, whether one be husband or wife, is one that bears heavily on the continued respect asked and expected in marriage.

Years back I remember a case of separation that shocked the community in which it occurred. The two involved seemed such a respectable, God fearing pair. When the truth came out, as it did on an occasion of attempted family intervention to bring the two together again, dirty underthings, with a strong male obsession particularly directed at a pair of corsets that hung black and ugly over the back of a chair, nights, were the crux of the developed dislike for the woman. A dislike, incidentally, that family intervention nor the woman's pleadings could overcome.

Reflected in Daily Life.

Personal uncleanliness in itself is frightfully repulsive. And what makes it still more obnoxious in marriage unions is the fact that one who is careless about self is naturally of a shiftless, careless character, whose shortcomings are seen in duties outside of those attending his person.

In the instance of a wife, say, the reflection is immediately seen in the disorderliness of her house, of her meals, of the table at which meals are served, and in her children, if there are any. With the husband, his affairs are most likely to be conducted in a haphazard manner. Usually his offense is putting off till tomorrow what should be done today—just as he puts off his bath or his teeth cleaning or his change of underwear.

Women are in a better position to regulate the cleanly habits of a mate than men are. Men usually are not so resentful if implications are directed at them. Wives can turn on the bath and see that it is taken, and for reward have fresh linen laid out ready. And, of course, their mother complex under which they can operate a number of changes gives them an advantage.

Early Morning Tidiness.

Men cannot reverse the order. But no matter how slovenly one of the other sex may be inclined himself, there is something about a woman consistently neat and sweet of person that is respect earning.

A modern young bride was called on at an early morning hour by one of her new in-laws. In response to the suggestion that she was all dressed up and looking particularly charming for so early an hour, the bride volunteered that one of her resolutions was to pay more attention to her early morning self than to her later-day.

"I'm not going to have Bud comparing me unfavorably with those snappy looking girls down where he works." Needless to say, the bride's afternoon and welcoming hubby home appearance is consistently attractive with her early morning look. That's the way the habit of orderly neatness works. It is consistent, not only throughout the day but throughout the day's duties, as well.

While the subject of unfavorable comparison, with outside women is one commonly indulged in by advisers to the sex, it still is one to be reckoned with seriously, for it must be disheartening to a man to reflect upon the extraordinary neatness and snap of a girl in his place of employment remembering what he has to go home to at night, where the homegoing means untidiness and confusion.

Right at this moment in our history much is expected of women in their personal upkeep. There is small patience for those who overeat and get gross and heavy of carriage. There is less than that for untidiness or the frankly soiled look that may greet the eyes of an early morning caller. Wives are expected to be blessings to the eyes, as well as to the heart. No woman ever lost a man's devotion through her pursuit of the graces known as purely feminine and involving the rites that please the esthetic senses. In fact, women are forgiven much if they are appealing in this regard.

It is consistent that men suffer, too, from the evils of personal neglect. It is easy to fall out of love with a man who is slovenly in matters of personal hygiene. Respect being the ingredient it is in woman's devotion to her man, he can no more be shiftless about himself than can the woman be.

Men Must Be Careful, Too.

It was suggested that women have the power to remodel mates along lines of more consistent presentability. But not all women. Some men cannot be driven to see the value of a fresh, crisp appearance. And they won't be woman ridden. Their reward is contempt of their fellow workers and none too progressive opportunities awaiting them in their business world.

The standard of appearance in the business world is high. Men are just as sternly appraised for the personal hall marks of their efficiency as girls are. And it is right, too. But, if business requires tidiness, orderliness, and smartness of person before respect can be granted, how much greater the need for it where two persons are living within the intimate realms of marriage.

Modesty Is Rewarded.

And just a word upon another subject—modesty in conduct. Marriage does not let down the bars altogether. Women should so conduct themselves that illusion does not flee away. It's a valuable thing to preserve. In conduct, speech, dress, preserve a dignity of your own. Don't prostitute your position as wife and alluring sweetheart.

The second clause goes for husbands. Women have lost faith in and affection for men who thought because the marriage bans had been pronounced they might indulge in freedom of speech and conduct grossly unbecoming to the ideals that must be brought into a union to make it survive.

Pet Economies

Tell us about your pet economy or an odd economy of some one you know, and we'll pay you $1 if we print your letter. Address Economy, Sunday Tribune.

Keeping Down the Upkeep.

I know a woman, who, although she is of ample means, believes in saving every dime she gets.

She has a canary, which she evidently thinks a lot of, but instead of buying birdseed she saves all of her cantaloupe seeds and spends hours cracking these and feeding the heart of them to her canary along with the various weed seeds she collects for it.

Now this is economy, if you prefer to call it that. J. M.

Two in One.

I know a woman who claims much food is wasted by taking food out of the pans in which it is cooked and putting it into serving dishes.

So she cooks almost exclusively in round white enamelware or glass dishes which she takes right from the stove on to hot-pads on the dining table. She maintains that a good serving of food is saved every time she thus combines the cooking and serving dish in one. D. J.

Smock of Sugar Sacks.

My pet economy is saving every sugar, flour and cement sack, which I use for various purposes.

My dish cloths are made from flour bags, which I have hemmed with a feather stitch, and I have a garment bag, which I made from a cement sack, dyeing the material pink, to match the bedroom color scheme.

I also have a smock which I have made from sugar sacks, with appliqued cretonne patterns embroidered on the sleeves and back. L. H.

Saves Common Pins.

I have a friend of means who derives great satisfaction and a sense of economy by her saving of common pins.

She even goes so far as to have a dress pinned for alterations by a fitter or saleslady [although she alters her own clothes] thereby gaining free pins.

She also picks up pins wherever she chances to see them. F. C. F.

Won't Let Gas Evaporate.

A friend of mine, not usually economical, when starting on an auto trip will not fill up the gasoline tank the night before because of the evaporation during the night. T. C. M.

Corks, All Sizes.

My pet economy is in saving corks. I have a jar in which I save all sizes, when I break one up in getting it out of medicine or extract bottles, I always have an extra one.

They are also good to use for scouring with. C. S.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Hot Soup—Whether Clear Bouillon or Thick Vegetable—Offers Assurance and Consolation

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

IT was most entertaining to read a long description of soup making in an article on food written by a highly cultivated man a few years ago. His description of soups, or the making even of one soup, was as animated as the description of a horse race. It was a good deal out of the ordinary, particularly as the section in most cook books devoted to soups is indescribably dreary. It is a difficult thing to excavate soups from under the weight imposed upon them by the monstrous turtle, the stiff cow's heels, and the jointed ox's tail.

Apropos of the subject of turtle soup, perhaps the statement of an American epicure of the years between 1870 and 1880 is not without interest. He said: "The turtle soup of our first class establishments in America is made from green turtle, but the celebrated 'Hoboken Turtle Club' is made of calf's head and feet, with a little turtle to relieve the conscience of the caterer."

At the time Thomas Murrey made this statement recipes for calf's head soup were almost universally to be found in our cook books, and for a good many years afterwards, under the title "Mock Turtle Soup." Probably the reason we have dropped these recipes some time during the last twenty years is that to make them involves a good deal of work, and certainly the old time ones were not very fascinating or palatable.

The Fascinations of Soup.

Soup, instead of being such a dull subject as we often think it is, is really a fascinating one. It has an enormous history and specific types of it have been exceedingly eminent. Willa Cather, in her book, "Death Comes to the Archbishop," says: "Soup like this is not the work of one man. It is the result of a constantly refined tradition. There are nearly a thousand years of history in this soup." And if we should go back to the man who described soups as some people can describe horse races we might present a picture of soup making that would be a perfect compendium of the seasonings and flavors of all time.

There is a new recognition of the fact that soup is a matter of the first importance. More than one of the most literary and entertaining writers of today have recently given the subject attention. An editor and brilliant literary man (sometime on the editorial staff of the Century magazine, sometime managing editor of Judge and a Sheffield Scientific school man) wrote a most entertaining article on this subject which appeared in the Forum, February, 1925. Its title was "In Praise of Soup," and the author Mr. Lawton Macall. This begins: "Whether it be limpid or turgid, nothing so warms the cockles of the tumtum as soup. Cuisines' kindest course! It breathes reassurance. It steams consolation. In time of sorrow give me soup."

With such a beginning we can easily imagine the number of psychological influences soup would have on the writer. He finds composure in a plate of soup "serene from the tureen." He describes how to eat it and also the charm of guessing what is in it. He speaks of a purée as enigmatic, "creamy complected, yet imbrued with subtlety." Of beef broth with parsley he says: "This doughty fluid is dim with tradition. Its stanch stock is not newly rich; this is not its first appearance at a dinner of gentlefolk. With aristocratic reserve it keeps its barley pearls out of sight. It has them, of course, but it does not flaunt them in people's faces unless they deliberately go after them." Anybody who knows anything about making soup could easily expand this statement into a recipe.

Soup Ingenuity.

While we have the barley soup in mind we might mention how much ingenuity in using materials at hand may be exerted in making soup. The barley broth of England and Scotland is nearly always made either of the water in which the mutton is boiled—with a carrot and onion to take off the woolly taste—or of the bones of the roast. Of one cook expert in the utilizing of the leftover roast, a writer has fondly remarked: "The beauty of Don's cuisine is that the beef soup with barley always tastes as good as, or better, than the original roast."

A highly popular novel of last year contained this paragraph: "Her maman must have her chicken on Sundays. . . . And afterwards that chicken came in nicely for Petite Marmite, which was made from his carcase and a few leaves of cabbage—maman loved Petite Marmite, the warmth of it eased her old gums."

The Essences.

The other extreme from the soups of the family pot, made of the bones of roast beef or chicken or what have you, are the essences which are so highly popular today. We might also say that they are a proof of our advance in sophisticated cuisines. These essences do not necessarily contain much meat, or only that small portion which, in the words of a hundred year old article on the subject, is enough to "aromatize" them. To make an essence that gets most of its quality from meat is no small attainment.

The meat must be cooked so there will not be the slightest suggestion of the poor soup that might be made from it—that is, it will not be like the fat flavored and sickish tasting cow heel (regular soup bone) that a good many of us have known. It was not the fault of the marrow that it gave such a horrid flavor any more than tea was at fault for being hard boiled. As to essences, even the thick "gombo" is reduced to an essence, jellied, and served cold.

Soup Bases.

Expensive bouillon or meat essences are made from pieces of meat. The French can make them from some of the poorest cuts. The jellied meat stocks must contain a bone with some meat, and then we have soup stocks that are made almost entirely of bones. The making of them is one of the most interesting bits of economy that can be practiced in the home.

Soup Stocks with the Bone.

A shank of beef (cow heel), a knuckle of veal, and a piece of lean meat were formerly considered the basic and proper requisites for a good soup stock. In other words, this was our usual domestic recipe, not the chef's. The knuckle of veal gives the jellying qualities, the meat gives certain strength of flavor or body, and the shank of beef gives flavor also. But it is a mistake to think that we must have just this collection to make a good foundation for any vegetable soups or for soups with a meat foundation. All the bones that come with beefsteak or with stew meat may be used to advantage in making soups. Buyers of meat often allow the butcher to throw into the bone box trimmings that would make valuable soups and gravies.

Preparing the Meat and Bone.

In most cases it is best to skin a shank or shin bone of beef, or scrape it as clean as possible, because it is a part that suffers various indignities in the handling, but even if not dirty this skin does not contribute a desirable flavor any more than the fell of lamb does. Usually a shank of beef is sawed into three or four "soup bones," and these are split. To clean up one of these pieces is not so much of a task, and anybody who has cooked much knows that the marrow should be treasured, as it is used in exceedingly elegant cookery. In common everyday cooking it is generally allowed to dissolve utterly and become part of a cake of fat, which is removed from the top of the cold meat stock. It then does not seem worth much, nor does it have an agreeable flavor.

To clean the cut ends of a bone, wipe them with a clean cloth wrung out of rather warm water. We believe that we can not place too much emphasis on this point of cleaning the several ingredients of a soup stock if we wish our product to be highly attractive and delicate.

Cooking the Bone.

It takes about twelve hours of cooking—slow and below the boiling point—to get all the goodness out of a bone. If we want a quick soup stock we must get it some other way. We add cold water to start, as much as a quart to a pound of meat and bone in some cases, or less when we wish for a strong stock to use for sauces and gravies. The cooking must be so gentle that there will be practically no evaporation. The slow cooking gives us the full flavor, which is more subtle and pleasant.

When a soup stock has cooked long enough it is extremely vital that it be cooled as rapidly as possible, and in using it later on it should never be kept at a tepid temperature, which favors fermentation and can make a soup absolutely poisonous.

Best Parties

Tell us about the nicest party you ever attended and we'll pay $1 for each letter printed. Address Parties, Chicago Tribune.

Earthquake Bridge

The best party I ever attended was an "earthquake bridge."

At the beginning of the game we bid our hands and as we were about to play our hostess told us to pass our cards to the one on our left. Imagine the turmoil! My partner and I endeavoring to make 4 hearts with our opponents' hands. The next three hands were played as usual.

The second game we played regular bridge, but at the end of four hands we had to give our score to the one on the right. Winners received suckers which they had to keep in their mouths all during the next game.

And so on until at the end of the party the low score received the high prize and vice versa! W. H. K.

In Juvenile Attire.

The invitation read "juvenile attire," and of course the guests came dressed accordingly. Staid business men came in rompers and the girls and matrons were dressed in short, fluffy dresses.

Lollypops, popcorn, nuts, and apples were the refreshments, and the punchbowl was filled with milk.

We played "drop the handkerchief," "London bridge," and "hide and go seek." Then we were asked to "speak a piece." Imagine your family doctor garbed in pale blue rompers, holding a lollypop in one hand and a balloon in the other, reciting, "Old Mother Hubbard," and you will get an idea of the hilarious evening we had. R. G.

"Indoor Steak Fry."

One of the jolliest parties I ever attended was an "indoor steak fry."

Each guest was requested to arrive at the designated place at 6:30 with an apron and a small frying pan if available. The dining room table was covered with newspapers and the only illumination was a lantern in the middle of the table.

We assembled in the kitchen and fried steaks. When the steak was ready we brought our frying pans to the table, dipped our rolls in the butter gravy and made a delicious sandwich. This was served with coffee, pickles, olives, toast, which we ate with butter and jam, and fruit.

After this delicious "fry" bridge was played and later each had a turn at popping corn, which was served with apples and candy. E. E. H.

Football Atmosphere.

Decidedly in keeping with the season was the football party I attended recently. The invitations were typewritten letters announcing the final games of the season and enclosing complimentary tickets for the series.

The guests came dressed in knickers, sweaters, and sports clothes. Cardboard footballs labeled with the name of a college were handed to each guest in accordance with his own college connections or for some humorous reason. Each guest was given a program indicating at what field he should play each game, as the card tables were named for famous football fields.

A big blackboard was ruled off in sections for each school and a boy was appointed official scorekeeper. After each four hands of bridge a whistle blew, scores were posted, and every one shifted. One of the guests, dressed in white coat and cap, "sold" trays of peanuts, popcorn, chocolate footballs, hot dogs, etc., between each game.

During the evening there was much rivalry, cheering, and singing of college songs and a true football atmosphere prevailed throughout. C. W. L.

A Bit Off.

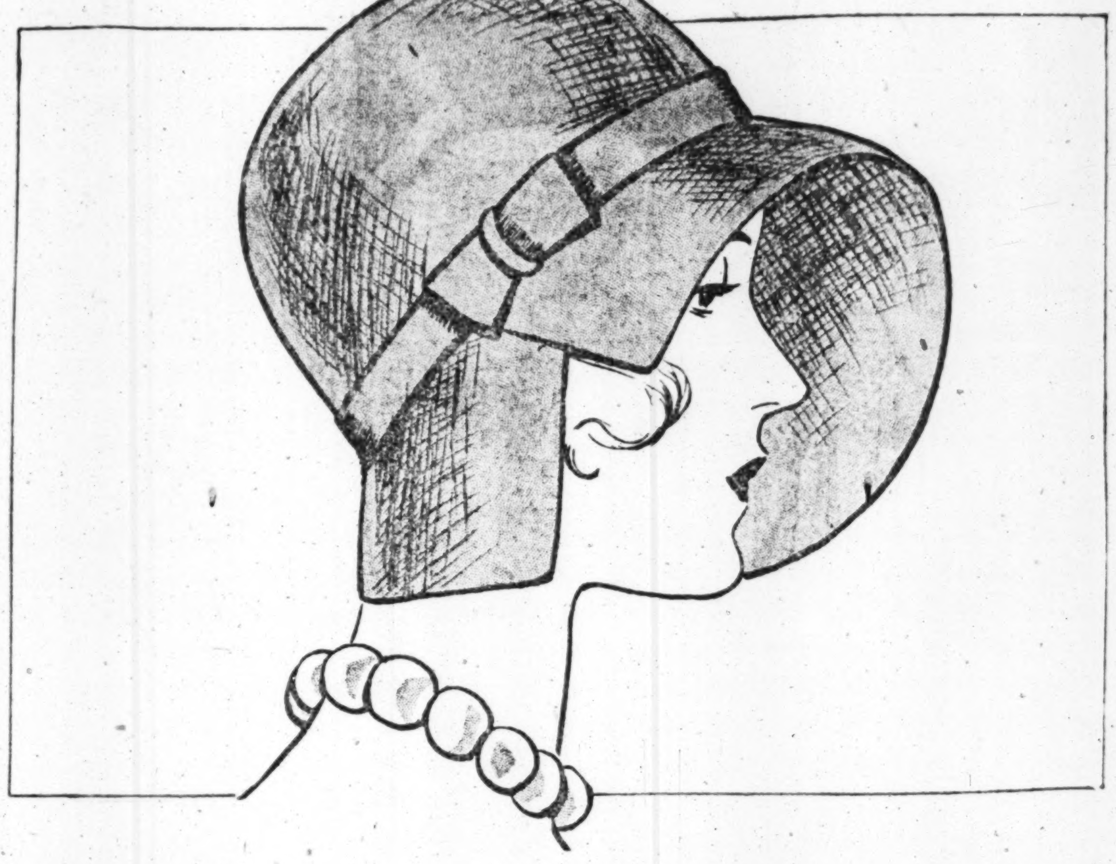
The most enjoyable party I ever attended was in the form of a nut party. The invitations were written in crayon on ragged edged brown wrapping paper. When I arrived at the house, a sign on the front door sent me to the back. All the guests were asked questions, then were assigned to "wards" in a supposed "asylum."

The refreshments were served on tablecloths of cut newspapers; the napkins were the colored comic sections from the Sunday papers. There were no two cups alike; they ranged from a doll's set to a shaving mug. Our only eating implement was a knife, which was fastened with a string to the leg of the table. We were forced to eat peas and jello with the knife, and the hilarity was something to listen to.

When it was time to go home, we found that our wraps had mysteriously disappeared, and hunted all over the house before we found them turned inside out, with our hats placed inside one another. It was a nut party to the fullest extent. J. B.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



Gayly Colored Straws, Pliable as Coarse Linen, Fashion Smart Hats.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

AFTER the gay holiday season is over it is time to begin to plan for the southern resorts. A variety of straw bodies used in the resort line will be worn as soon as the season permits. The straw bodies are worked up exactly like the felt hoods or bodies, with plaits and one side tucking, groups of tucks, large and small.

Baqua (pronounced baw-koo) is a fine straw that looks like coarse linen. Sisol and pearly sisol are two straws that are closely related to the baqua. The sisols are more easily manipulated than the baqua, as the latter is a straw and the sisol is a hemp. Another fine straw, popular with the well dressed woman, is balibuntl. You may have noticed a design, either square or diamond shaped, in the top of those bodies or finished hats. It takes an entire family two or three weeks to weave one of these bodies and the retail price is surprisingly low when we consider the time and labor expended in their production.

The trimming of the hats is a light issue. A band of velvet ribbon with a smart bow on the right side, or a suede belt with a horn or an ivory buckle, is most effective.

The range of colors is quite wide this season, with the greens and blues leading them all. Linen blue is a strong favorite. It resembles the well liked French blue. Fleet blue is more daring and startling. Then, in the greens, there are Brioni and Adriatic, with some demand for billiard green as well.

You will find Goya and firebrand red, beach sand, hula hula brown (reddish brown), pie crust tan, butter yellow, eggplant, blackberry, wisteria, and dahlia are all selling, but the greens and blues are the safe bets for this season's wear.

The hat shown is made of baqua straw in linen blue, with a suede belt of matching color.

Women the World Over

The only training ship for girl sailors in the world is the Alcyon, Yvonne Herbert, captain. French society sends its daughters to her to become "ablebodied seamen."

Lady Mary Heath, noted British woman flyer, who has been recovering from a fractured skull and other serious injuries suffered in an airplane crash in Cleveland, O., hopes to fly again.

Because of love of outdoor games, the Japanese girl of 15 today is physically a much better person than her mother. She is taller and much better set up.

One hundred and fifty new feminine police officials are to be employed by the Prussian police force in Germany. They range all the way from expert criminologists to police counsellors.

Mrs. Carter De Haven, actress and divorced wife of the comedian, has asked for a reduction of her alimony to "help out" her children who are now on the stage with their father.

Answers to Beauty Queries

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. If you want a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

L. B.: BORAX MAY BE ADDED to the bath water occasionally, but it is not recommended for general use. It is an alkali and abstracts fat from the skin, softens the horny layer and leaves it dry.

M. R.: NO, REMOVAL OF ADENOIDS is not a very painful operation. Adenoids interfere with proper breathing, causing mouth breathing, which detracts from one's appearance.

J. M.: THERE IS NO WAY TO decrease the size of the joints of the fingers, but by building up the rest of the hand the joints will be made to appear smaller. Massage the hands with olive oil or a good cold cream.

STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS

This is Wanda Perry, a young Broadway star. She is learning that proper care makes hair more attractive, even for a girl of twelve!

Now You Can Protect Her Lovely Hair!

NATURE is gradually lowering our ability to grow hair. Baldness is becoming the rule among men; authorities predict the day of feminine baldness is coming.

Now, more than ever before, it is necessary for the whole family to practice proper care of the hair.

Millions of men and women know how Danderine helps stop falling hair; dissolves the worst crust of dandruff. It changes dull, lustreless, brittle hair into hair that is soft, sparkling, vigorous. Its consistent use encourages the growth of long, silky, abundant hair. With Danderine it is so easy to "train" a child's hair; to keep it orderly, sparkling, clean. Danderine accentuates the natural curl of a child's hair. A girl's waves look more natural when "set" with it. They stay in longer.

Use Danderine with children to overcome the evils of frequent washing. It puts back into hair and scalp the natural oils removed by soap and water. Danderine isn't sticky or oily; doesn't show. It is no trouble to use. Just put a little on the brush each time the hair is arranged. That will keep the scalp healthy and the hair always vigorous, soft, lustrous, easily managed.

FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

House Furnishings and Clothing You Are About to Discard as Worthless Spell Comfort for Many Needy Families.

FEBRUARY is one of the months in which we can do the greatest amount of good with gifts and warm clothing we no longer need, particularly for the children of school age.

Most of us have discarded garments around the house. Perhaps the children have outgrown them, or have new outfits, and the old ones have been set aside. Caps, overcoats, sweaters, stockings, shoes—I am sure you have some of these things. Remember they mean warmth and comfort to poor children who need them desperately.

And there are many opportunities to help the grownups, the infants, and the aged. You would be surprised if you knew the number of families we have on record without fuel, blankets, or bedding enough to keep them warm at night.

Clothing outgrown and not much worn is often discarded while there is still service left. It should cost us a pang to throw it away when doing so is not only wasteful but positively tragic, when we consider what a tremendous help it would be to those in need.

We can do a lot, too, to make homes more comfortable with stoves no longer in use, rugs to cover the floors, bedding, and hangings to keep the winds from blowing in through drafty walls. Anything, in fact, will help. So please give these things when the need for them is so acute.

Far Away from the World.

"We are two young fellows who for over a year have been suffering with tuberculosis. We are living in a little cabin high up in the mountains of New Mexico, thirty-four miles from a town or any sign of civilization, and the only news we get from the outside world is through THE TRIBUNE. We are starved for music and entertainment and we wonder if there isn't some reader who would send us a phonograph or a radio. It gets pretty lonesome up here, but we have made up our minds to stay until we regain our health. G. A."

If this battle for health is to be a winning one, these young men will need all the encouragement and perseverence they can muster and it will mean a long, long time in our great but desolate southwest. Won't you help to make their stay a happier one by donating the radio set which will keep them in touch with humanity?

Cookery Information.

"I have some cookery information, instructions and hints in printed form I would like to send to a bride or some one else wishing to learn to cook. I will send it by mail. MRS. C. P."

The first steps in cooking are usually such intricate and sometimes tearful ones that this gift is sure to be a welcome one. If you are encountering the usual difficulties, write me for this helpful information; please do not telephone.

Six Children Need Clothes.

"My husband has been out of work for a long time and cannot find anything. We have six children, and during this cold weather they have not enough clothing to wear to school. Since they have to walk a mile and a half I hate to send them out in the things they have. The boys are 10, 9, 4 and 8 months; the girls are 13 and 6 years of age. Do you think you can get them the clothing they need? MRS. B."

Even those of us who have plenty of warm clothing are apt to complain of the cold these days. Think how hard it must be on these children, in their thin garments, trudging a mile and a half through the snow to school. Won't you resurrect all the underwear, mittens, boots, coats, and other heavy things your children have outgrown and send them to this distressed mother?

Two in a House

By Eleanor Jewett

We have a good old pussy cat
And a little guinea pig;
They both live together
In a box not very big.

The guinea pig is frolicsome,
And scutters in and out;
Our pussy cat just licks herself
And pats the pig about.

I wonder if our pussy cat
Looks on the pig as food?
And wonders should she eat him,
Would, or could, or should?

Perhaps she thinks the guinea pig
A different sort of mouse,
And feels obliged to shelter him
While both live in one house.

Perhaps she thinks the guinea pig
A kitten of some kind,
And that is why she mothers him
And tries to make him mind.

When my twins were tiny babies we lived on the second floor of an apartment building. As I had no help at all during the day it was quite a problem getting the babies ready for their daily airing.

One afternoon I had managed the cart and one of the twins and was hesitating leaving the one baby alone on the sidewalk while I returned for the other, when I noticed a small boy sauntering home from school. I asked him if he would like to make a nickel watching the baby for a few minutes while I went back upstairs. He assented. I went inside the building and soon emerged with the second baby.

When the little boy saw me his eyes grew big, and he said, "Say, where are you getting all those babies?" R. E. S.

Rita, aged 6, loves to have her two little neighbors, Joseph and Junior, 3 and 4 years old, play with her.

One day while playing in our back yard, Joseph got his head caught under the fence and could not get out. Rita ran to the house and called to me in great excitement: "Come quick, mother, Joseph has his head caught under the fence and Junior is helping him cry." MRS. E. S. V.

The teacher of the third grade was asking her pupils questions concerning history. She finally asked whose birthday was on the 12th of February.

One little girl was eager to answer the question, and the teacher called upon her to recite.

"It is MY birthday," she said. A. P.

A Narrow Escape.

We were driving down a narrow road which had no signs to warn the motorists. On the right side and somewhat ahead was a ridge running at right angles to the road and reaching almost to it. We were nearly to the ridge when I happened to look up, and there, emerging from behind the ridge, was a huge black locomotive. It had been coasting so quietly down grade that, due to the noise of our own motor, we had not heard it.

I cried out, but my fiancé who was driving, had seen it a mere fraction of a second before I did and was jamming on the brakes. We stopped short hardly a foot from the track just as the engine passed in front of us.

If you want a thrill, just miss being run over by a locomotive some time! C. L. R.

Activities of Women

Mrs. Lucinda Cline, aged 95, of Omaha, Neb., has smoked a pipe daily since she was 15 years old. Her "mammy," who smoked a pipe nearly all her life, lived to be 104. Mrs. Cline had 11 sisters, all of whom smoked, and they reached ripe old ages.

It is reported in Montevideo that the government of Uruguay is giving serious attention to the proposal to grant suffrage to women.

Miss Mary Crawford of Memphis, Tenn., is the only woman with a license to class "cotton linters" under the federal cotton act.

Miss Helen I. Buck of New York, accompanied by two men, has the distinction of being the first to scale the peak of Mount Alexander, 14,000 feet above sea level, in the Canadian Rockies. It took twelve hours to reach the summit.

Dr. Cora S. Allen, a graduate of the University of Iowa, has been appointed provisionally, associate director of the division of maternity, infancy and child hygiene, state health department of New York.

Look at these extra things the no-wringer EASY Washer does

Its famous Damp-Dryer saves you time and labor beyond any wringer type washer — all with absolute safety to you and your clothes

1 In this compartment you put the clothes to wash. It holds 6 full-size sheets or 8 pounds — 2 pounds more than the average washer. Clothes thoroughly but gently washed to a snowy whiteness before damp-drying.

2 Absolutely safe with washer running. A child could not hurt herself, because moving parts are all enclosed. Clothes damp-dried automatically without effort on your part. No hand-feeding into a wringer.

3 Two operations at one time! Washing compartment and Damp-Dryer operate independent of each other. You can be washing second load while first is damp-dried. Clothes equal to 12 full-size sheets at one time!

4 In less than two minutes the Damp-Dryer automatically whirls the water out of a tubful of clothes — ready for sun-drying on the line. Absolutely no strain is placed on fabrics. No friction. No squeezing.

5 Rinse clothes in the Dryer, if you wish—without handling, until ready for line, by running rinse water into Dryer and whirling it out. Saves rinsing in another tub and again "feeding" clothes into wringer.

You cannot compare the no-wringer EASY with any other washer, for it is more than just a washing machine. The centrifugal Damp-Dryer enables it to do extra things beyond those of any wringer type washer—all with absolute safety.

These pictures will give you some idea of how the no-wringer EASY comes nearer to eliminating all labor than does any other washer. How it washes and damp-dries at the same time. How it damp-dries blankets and pillows. How it rinses. Instead of damp-drying by crushing out the water, EASY whirls it out of a tubful of clothes in less than two minutes.

Free Trial Offer! But the only way to fully appreciate its wonderful advantages is to actually try the no-wringer EASY in your own home on free trial. Phone the nearest EASY dealer—he is listed in your telephone directory—about this free trial offer now.

Now at lowest prices ever offered

The No-Wringer EASY in choice of Suction Type or Agitator Type Washer

6 Damp-dries pillows which will not go through a wringer. Pillows can be washed and dried to original fluffiness same day without removing feathers. The hems do not drip. Evenly damp clothes dry much faster on line.

7 Damp-dries bulky things like blankets. Does not stretch or distort woolens. Leaves the nap raised and fluffy like new. There are no deep, hard creases because no pressure is applied to clothes. Ironing is easier.

8 Ready in half the time for line-drying, because hundreds of hand operations are saved and many others done at one time. Sun-drying is faster. In bad weather clothes can be line-dried indoors for ironing that day.

9 You save mending, because buttons don't come off. Metal fasteners don't flatten, fabrics don't tear, silk and rayon garments don't crack. Sheerest silks can be washed and damp-dried with absolute safety.

8 years ahead

EASY announced the centrifugal method of damp-drying almost 4 years ago—after 5 years of research and experiment. We believe that eventually all better washers will be offered with some type of damp-dryer. But it will not be the EASY Damp-Dryer. For no other damp-dryer can incorporate all of EASY'S features.

The BACKSTAGE MYSTERY

by OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

The Story in Brief:

TERRY MOONEY, young reporter, "makes the front page" of the Evening Record with the story that Wylie Thornton, matinée idol, is to leave the local stock company and to take a train that night for New York and a Broadway engagement. Unknown to the adoring public, Thornton is a drunkard and a wastrel, and is inhumanly cruel to his wife. In one of his most recent escapades, when disgracefully intoxicated, he has knocked down John Norris, real estate operator, on being ordered from the Norris home. He has, however, superficial attractions which have dazzled Doris Manning, an amateur member of the stock company, who is the daughter of Major Manning, affluential banker. He has persuaded Doris to elope with him, promising to marry her after divorcing his wife. Mrs. Thornton threatens to kill him to prevent the elopement. Despite remonstrances from her father and from her fiancé, Carey Weldon, Doris clings defiantly to her plan. Major Manning and Carey visit the theater with the hope of intimidating the actor.

INSTALLMENT IV.

The Crime.

AS Mathilde Norris watched her husband settle himself with his evening cigar and newspaper the balance of the scene of the previous night came back to her with horrid clarity.

She remembered following two or three of the male guests upstairs and finding John Norris calmly inspecting his revolver. They argued with him, and he answered in a cold and emotionless tone.

"There's no use trying to stop me," he said as calmly as though discussing the weather. "I am going to kill him."

He did not bluster. He merely stated a fact. And when he started from the room they restrained him by force. He did not struggle or otherwise stoop to melodramatics.

"It doesn't matter whether you stop me now," he said quietly. "If I don't kill him tonight I will some other time."

Then Mathilde had rushed back downstairs and begged Wylie Thornton to leave. The big man, sobered by the situation, did a great deal of loud, blustery talking, but finally allowed himself to be persuaded to leave.

Mathilde watched her husband open the newspaper. She saw his sharp-featured face grow stern as the eight column streamer impressed itself upon him. Her heart was pounding, and she did not wait for him to speak.

"Doesn't that satisfy you, John?" she asked.

He smiled thinly.

"Doesn't what satisfy me?"

"The fact that Wylie Thornton is leaving town?"

He betrayed no emotion: merely a clinical interest.

"Why should it?"

"Because every one will know that he is leaving through fear of you."

"You think so?"

"Of course, dear. Why else should he reach this sudden decision? O, can't you see it, John? He wanted you to know that he was frightened and running away."

"I see. . . ." The man, never very communicative, was terrifying in his absolute calm. He produced a platinum pocketknife and meticulously clipped the entire story from the paper. This clipping he folded carefully and placed in his vest pocket. Then he rose and started for the stairway.

Mathilde darted after him and grabbed his arm.

"Where are you going?"

"Upstairs."

"For what?"

"I'll be back directly."

"John! Please . . . I know what you're going for. But you mustn't! Besides, it isn't there."

"What isn't?"

"Your—your gun."

His face grew stern. "Where is it?"

"I won't tell you. I hid it, and I'm not going to help you be a murderer."

Again that icy smile creased his lips.

"You don't understand very well, do you, Mathilde?"

"But I do understand. I understand better than you do. I know that you are going to do a very foolish thing because you think that your father or your grandfather would have done it. Do you think for a minute that if you let him leave the city the public will think you were afraid of him? Are you afraid of public opinion?"

"No," he answered quietly, and she knew that he was speaking the truth. "I really don't care what the public thinks. But for the first time in my life, Mathilde, a man has knocked me down. I cannot fight with him, but I can kill him. And I shall."

SHE gazed upon her husband in horror, wishing that he had something of the bluffer or grandstand player in his makeup. But she knew there was none of it there. For one thing, John Norris was too unimaginative. He had been mortally insulted; he had stated publicly that he intended to avenge that insult, and Mathilde knew that he could not be stopped.

She pleaded with him. She impressed upon him the absurdity of lowering himself to Thornton's level, of bringing scandal upon the family name. She had sufficient tact not to stress the fact that he himself might be in danger, for she knew his courage well enough to realize that such a suggestion would send him straight to the big, loud-mouthed actor. She dwelt, with more cleverness than her friends would have believed, upon the fact that Thornton's departure from the city would be sufficient vindication of the Norris honor and finally, when all of her other arguments failed, she fell back upon the one tender spot in the man's being.

"And about me, John?" she asked. "Have you considered that?"

He was surprised.

"What about you?"

"A good many things. If you kill Thornton there will be a great deal of gossip. Remember, I have had him at the house frequently. I guess I have been a fool with my lion hunting, but the fact remains that he has been very intimate here. If you kill him tonight——"

"That's rot!" snapped Norris, more impressed than he was ready to admit. "The story of what happened here last night is all over town, and everybody will understand."

"Perhaps, and perhaps not."

"What makes you think there is any doubt?"

"Because," she answered logically, "the public will insist on going back of the occurrence last night. It cannot understand that you despised Thornton because he was a coarse, uncouth person; it will not understand that he hated you because he knew that you held him in contempt. No, John, the public will seek a cause it can better understand, and that motive will be myself."

John Norris' eyes grew tender. Queer the depth of the love for his wife. And he was surprised, too. He had fancied always that she was addlepated and not at all addicted to clear thought. He had loved her, perhaps, because she was so different from him; he had adored her flighty irresponsibility. To find her now matching argument with argument, meeting his decision with powerful logic . . .

HE carried the newspaper with him to the veranda. She followed and watched hopefully as he seated himself again and thought carefully. Finally he looked up and the bleak light had returned to his eyes.

"I'll alter my decision a trifle," he said, "because of what you say."

Her heart bounded with thanksgiving.

"Yes, John?"

"I shall drive downtown to the theater. Now. I shall take you with me. When I get there I will give Wylie Thornton a chance to apologise to me before you. If he does so I will drop the matter. If he doesn't . . ."

She was across the room and her lips were on his.

"O, I am so happy. I know he will apologize, because he is afraid of you. And he knows he is in the wrong. Of course, I'd rather you didn't go down there at all——"

"You know I must do that, Mathilde."

As they stepped into the car she asked one question.

"You haven't a gun?"

"No. Plenty of time for that later—if I need it."

She glanced at him as he guided the car deftly through the heavy traffic of a street intersection. He was so small, so quiet . . . it amazed her to look upon him as a physical lion . . . something she was pleased to term a hero. It was characteristic of the man that he had no intention of forcing Wylie Thornton to apologize before the same crowd which had witnessed the affront. It was enough that he should apologize before Mathilde, and the others could think what they chose.

She marveled, too, at the cold courage which was sending him unarmed into Wylie Thornton's dressing room. She fancied that Thornton must have equipped himself with a gun, in view of John's threat. She even considered advising John to arm himself, then discarded the idea!. She knew the depth of temper of which he was capable and was afraid of what might happen in that dressing room should Thornton prove unpleasant and her husband be in possession of a revolver.

They arrived at the theater at the very minute that the big clock on a downtown department store chimed the three-quarter hour. Seven forty-five. Norris parked straight across the end of the theater alley in fine disregard of traffic regulations, and as he slipped from under the wheel she reached over and pressed his hand. He gave her a brief, reassuring smile.

"I'll be back in a minute, Mathilde," he promised. "With Thornton."

SHE watched his small, erect figure moving through the gloom of the theater alley toward the pale yellow light which hung over the stage door. And then for five mminutes she suffered a torture of apprehension.

Five minutes! Or was it six, or seven, or ten? Her eyes were focused on the stage door so desperately that her head ached. Her body was hot and cold by turns. She found that her hands were clenched until the shiny nails dug into the soft pink flesh of her palms.

And then the stage door opened. She breathed a prayer as she saw the figure of her husband emerge.

Then she knew a moment of apprehension. He was alone! She realized what that meant. Wylie Thornton had refused to apologize. Norris would arm himself and return.

She watched him as he walked down the alley. He was moving swiftly and once he turned to look back at the stage door. She had a vague idea that he seemed apprehensive, and as he came within the radiance of the electric sign which now blazed bravely from over the front of the theater, she saw that his face was drawn and his eyes filled with worry.

A horrible fear clutched at her as he took his place at the wheel and jammed his foot on the starter. She tried to speak and could not. He threw the gears into second and the car leaped ahead. It shot past a red light on the corner and Norris ignored, or failed to hear, the blast of the traffic policeman's whistle. She watched the speedometer climb to twenty-five, then to thirty and thirty-five—an unheard of speed for John Norris to achieve.

She knew the man at her side and realized that something terrible had occurred. She saw that he was struggling for self-control, and making a very poor job of it. For the first time in their years of married life she was seeing him as a victim of nerves, he whom she fancied didn't have a nerve in his body.

Finally she found the courage to speak.

"Where are you going, John?"

His voice was strained and unnatural. "Hot night," he said. "Thought you might like to drive in the country."

She was on guard and did not answer immediately. He turned to her with an unnatural irritation.

"Would you?"

She pulled herself together.

"Would I what?"

"Like to drive in the country."

"Certainly . . . Yes . . ."

"He was half dressed, getting ready for the evening performance."

ILLUSTRATION BY W. H. WISNER.

They sped through the city and came eventually to a broad ribbon of concrete which wound through a moon-drenched valley. The hot breeze whipped in through the open windshield and fanned his flushed cheeks. Mathilde Norris felt that she must speak—or scream.

"What—what happened, John?"

He struggled to be casual.

"At the theater, you mean?"

"Yes . . ." She wanted to cry out that he knew she meant the theater, but managed to control her hysteria.

"NOTHING. I simply went into Thornton's dressing room. I told him that he had to apologize before he left town. He surprised me very much by being quite decent about it. He apologized immediately, and as humbly as I could have wished. I told him that I wanted him to come to the curb with me so that you could hear his apology, and he was quite willing. But he was half dressed, getting ready for the evening performance, and I figured it would not be necessary to make him do that when he was so willing. Under the circumstances it seemed that bringing him with me in a dressing gown, and forcing him to repeat the apology, was rather absurd and somewhat of a pose. So I accepted his apology and told him that the affair was ended."

She had watched him closely. He spoke with a fierce intenseness, as though praying that she would believe his story.

For a moment, when he finished talking, she was silent, and finally he turned to her.

"Why don't you say something?" he asked with nervous querulousness. "Don't you believe me?"

She forced a light laugh from between trembling lips.

"Of course, I believe you, John. Of course, I do."

But Mathilde Norris knew that her husband was lying!

. . . .

Scarcely had John Norris driven off with his wife when Carey Weldon again reached the theater alley and resumed his vigil.

His usually placid expression was not at all pleasant. The scene with Doris Manning had been bitter and heartbreaking. His love for her had made her cruelty even less excusable, and the young man who was known to his friends as perpetually cheerful and jolly was exceedingly upset.

For two or three minutes he stood staring at the dim light over the stage door. Then, with sudden grim determination, he walked the length of the alley and vanished backstage. Less than five minutes later he reappeared, and as he descended the three steps leading up from the alley to the stage door he almost collided with Doris.

His face was white and drawn, his eyes glowing with an anger which he made no attempt to conceal. He placed himself directly in Doris' path and spoke with a harshness which caused her eyes to open in wonder.

"You are acting like a spoiled child," he accused. "I have warned you what would happen if you went backstage."

"I think," she said with what dignity she could muster, "that we have indulged in all the discussion necessary."

"You're wrong, Doris. Because you choose to make a fool of yourself hasn't altered the fact that I love you."

"I feel quite flattered." Then her voice softened. "Hasn't it occurred to you, Carey, that perhaps you and father are the ones who are acting foolishly?"

"No, I can't say that it has."

"Think it over, then. We'll admit that when I leave here tonight on the same train with Wylie Thornton the gossips will let their tongues wag. That is my lookout. But at least I shan't have started anything as serious as you and dad propose."

"You may be right. But that doesn't change the fact that your father's mind is made up."

"And so is mine."

"You mean—in spite of all I've told you—you're going back yonder?"

"Yes."

"Please, Doris . . ."

"There's no use arguing, Carey. I don't want us to part as bad friends. I'm trying to be calm and reasonable and sensible. But I must see Wylie."

"Can't I bring him out here to you?"

She smiled. "Now it's you who is talking foolishly. What earthly advantage would that be? No, Carey—I'm going back, and neither you nor dad can stop me."

She pushed by him and started up the three little steps. Worried and desperate, he followed her. His heart was pounding.

THEY entered the wings. The clock over the callboard showed ten minutes after eight. From the front of the house came the murmur of early arrivals, and backstage the hands were moving idly about, chatting with one another. One or two of the actors who were to be onstage at the curtain were already in costume and were chatting with one another. Off in a corner they could hear the two violinists tuning their instruments in preparation for the overture, and they could discern the slender, nervous figure of Pete McIntosh, the property man, assuring himself for the dozenth time that everything was in order.

Briefly they halted as they came through the stage door. Carey waited for the explosion. They were standing directly in front of where Major Manning was supposed to be sitting, and Carey knew that Doris' presence would be the signal for which the girl's father had been waiting.

But nothing happened. Weldon looked over his shoulder. There was the canvas stool on which the major had been sitting, but Manning himself was not there. The girl followed the direction of Carey's eyes.

"Is that where dad was supposed to be?" she questioned.

"Yes."

There was relief in her voice. "Thank goodness he's not there, then." She started forward toward the archway leading to the dressing room corridor, but he stopped her.

"Won't you wait until he returns, Doris?"

"Certainly not."

"But he would wish to speak with you before you went to Thornton's dressing room."

"That is the very thing I'm happy to avoid. Do you suppose that I will wait here to invite a scene?"

"But surely a minute or two won't make any difference."

"Surely it will. Wylie is onstage almost from the first curtain and if I don't see him before the performance starts I won't get much of a chance later."

She moved through the archway and turned down the dressing room corridor, with Weldon at her side, pleading with her in a low, passionate voice, to think again before inviting the trouble which he knew would be unavoidable once the major learned where she was.

She paid no attention to him. Martin Vance, the character man, stepped out of his dressing room and called a cheery "Good-evening" as she passed. She nodded and Vance walked on toward the stage.

Carey Weldon was not unused to this corridor, but somehow he liked it considerably less tonight than ever before. It was musty and gloomy. The three ceiling bulbs were of the ancient carbon variety which gave a dull, sickly glow. The walls were cracked and pasted over with torn programs, ancient lithogr[illegible] worn flashlights, and a few post[illegible]nouncing sporting events, cleaning establishments, and quick service laundries.

They paused outside the door at the end of the hallway. And there, Carey made one last futile plea.

"Won't you reconsider, Doris?"

She turned on him angrily.

"No," she snapped, "I will not."

"You'll be starting something you can't stop."

"You irritate me, Carey. I know what I'm doing."

SHE knocked lightly on the door. There was no answer. Once again she knocked. She waited with some impatience, but still there was no answer.

With a defiant gesture, Doris Manning turned the knob and opened the door. Carey Weldon stood at her shoulder and he, too, saw the horrible spectacle—even before she uttered her first scream.

At their feet, sprawled grotesquely on the floor and lying face down, was the body of Wylie Thornton. He was partly dressed . . . and on the floor was a tiny pool of blood.

For a few seconds Doris Manning stared at the body of the man whom she fancied she loved. This first stark tragedy of her young and sheltered life appalled her, and so for a moment she only stared.

Then, slowly, she raised her eyes. It was then that a scream escaped her lips . . . a hysterical scream which was charged with agony . . . a scream which brought pudgy, good natured Martin Vance running down the corridor, and behind him a half dozen persons who had been lounging under the archway.

Doris' eyes were focussed in fascinated horror on the figure of a man who stood in the corner of the dressing room—next to the dressing table where, obviously, Wylie Thornton had been making up for the evening performance.

Major Manning stood erect—fearlessly. His fine, somewhat heavy face was stern, and his eyes met those of his daughter unswervingly. Across the body they stared at each other—and then something snapped. Unmindful of the half dozen persons who crowded the doorway behind her, unconscious of anything save the body on the floor and the figure of the man standing grimly on the other side of the room, Doris Manning uttered the thought which hammered in her brain.

"O! Dad," she cried, "why did you kill him?"

CAREY WELDON caught Doris as she fainted. A woman in the corridor began uttering low, moaning cries. Dressing room doors opened and members of the cast crowded about the door of Wylie Thornton's room in various stages of undress.

Faces were stricken. Eyes were wide with horror. They looked at the body of the actor, and then at the stern face of the dignified man in the corner. Major Manning stood like a statue, staring first at the body and then at the accusing eyes of the members of the company.

Into the group dashed a voluble, dynamic little man who elbowed his way through the door and took in the situation at a glance. Jed Samuels blinked just once—then took complete charge.

"Don't anybody else come in the room," he snapped, "and don't anybody leave the theater. Let things stay just as they are. Vance, telephone police headquarters and tell them to send somebody. McIntosh, you phone for a doctor."

The low, quiet voice of Major Manning broke in.

"You don't need a doctor, Samuels. He is dead."

The black eyes of the director flashed upward to the face of the major.

"You are sure?"

"Positive."

"Then phone the coroner," he ordered. He surveyed the group at the door and singled out the little ingénue. "Anice," he said, "I've got a nasty job for you."

She stepped over the threshold.

"Yes, Jed. What is it?"

"You're a good scout. Take one of the men with you and go up to the Raleigh hotel——"

The girl's face grew pale beneath her makeup.

"You mean . . . ?"

"Tell Mrs. Thornton. Bring her down here in a taxi."

For an instant Anice Garet hesitated. Then she squared her shoulders and nodded.

"I hate the job, but I'll do it."

"That's the girl." The efficient man eyes the others sternly. "I'm asking you again not to disturb anything. And, major, I suppose I have your word that you won't leave?"

Manning bowed slightly.

"Certainly, sir."

Jed Samuels stepped into the wings, where he paused briefly to adjust the collar of his coat and his tie. Then he stepped in front of the curtain, silenced the orchestra, and raised his hand.

The house was three-quarters filled. The spectators stared at the drawn face of the little director and sat forward tensely as though they had a premonition of what was coming. Jed's voice came clearly, but unsteadily.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "I regret to inform you that there will be no performance tonight. There has been a very regrettable accident backstage. One of our principal players has been severely injured. May I ask that you file out quietly and stop at the box office for your ticket refund? The seat stubs will be all that you need. If the crowd there is too great you may return any time in the next week. I thank you."

He walked off, ignoring the buzz of comment and the questions which were fired at him from the audience. At a signal from the leader the orchestra again struck up, and the spectators filed from the house of death to the strains of a popular jazz tune.

MEANWHILE, backstage, the actors and stagehands were milling about the lower corridor. They didn't seem to grasp the tragedy; it was too difficult to grasp the fact that their leading man, so boastfully and aggressively alive a few minutes since, was now dead. It was even more difficult to believe that Maj. Manning was responsible for the killing.

Returning to Thornton's room, Jed Samuels passed Carey Weldon, who was carrying the still unconscious form of Doris Manning. Walking beside them, with a silk kimono over her exquisite figure, was Lola Gresmer, the leading woman. Samuels fired a question.

"I thought I asked that things be left as they were. What are you doing with this girl?"

"Taking her upstairs to my dressing room," answered Miss Gresmer. "She'll be there when you want her."

Samuels jerked his head and walked on. Weldon mounted the winding stairway with Doris. He reached Lola Gresmer's room, which was immediately over that in which Thornton's body lay. Lola swept some lingerie from a straw couch and on this Doris was placed. Instantly the leading woman found a bottle of smelling salts which she placed under the girl's nose. Then she spoke to the shaken Weldon.

"I think you had better go downstairs, Mr. Weldon. The major may need you."

Carey moved slowly downstairs, where he made his way into Thornton's dressing room again. Apparently the major had not moved. His habitually ruddy cheeks were pasty, and it was clear that he was controlling his nerves with a superb effort. At sight of Carey he spoke quietly.

"I want you to do me a favor, son."

"Yes, sir."

"This is rather a nasty mess. The police will be here in a minute or so. I want you to telephone the Mountain house and ask Jim Hanvey to come here immediately."

"Jim Hanvey? Who is he?"

"Probably the best detective in America. He has been down here investigating a series of forgeries at my bank. I think I will need his help."

"I'll phone him, sir. Immediately."

"And explain to him . . ." The major's voice was strained, "that it is quite important."

The audience had not immediately left the house. Wild, fantastic rumors had reached them, and they stood about talking. Then some one telephoned the office of the Morning Record. The city editor managed to get the house manager of the Edwin Booth on the telephone and checked up on the fact that Wylie Thornton had been killed.

"How?" he asked.

"We don't know."

"Who by?"

"We don't know."

"When?"

"We are not sure."

"Good God! Are you certain he is dead?"

"Yes, we're certain of that."

The city editor slammed the receiver on the hook and yelled to his copy editor.

"Composing room, quick! Wylie Thornton has been murdered in his dressing room. Tell 'em to get ready to pull an extra. And hop to it!"

WITHIN ten minutes newsboys spewed forth from the Record building shrieking the news of Thornton's dramatic death. The extra had been cleverly put together. The bulldog edition had been made over, and across the top of the front page was an eight column streamer. A three column picture of Wylie Thornton smiled from the first page. It was the best of many pictures which were on file in that department of the paper which, congruously enough in this case, was known as "the morgue." The city editor himself had done the story. Boiled down, it was nothing more than the bare statement that Wylie Thornton had been killed. But the city mogul, being a clever re-write man, had drawn on his imagination in painting a vivid picture of the turmoil backstage, and had followed that with a biography of the dead actor and a graphic account of how this tragedy had befallen him on the very eve of his departure for the greatest rôle of his stage career.

It was the first time that the younger members of the staff had ever seen the man excited, but now he fairly frothed. He declared loudly that this was the greatest local story in his experience; that from a local angle it was fully as good a yarn as the signing of the armistice.

He swept the office with his eye. Seated calmly at his desk was the heavy-set figure of a very self-possessed young man—Ken Johnston by name—and admittedly the best pavement pounder in the city.

"You, Johnston!" yelled the city editor, "you're in charge. Drop everything else and stick to this. Keep the wires hot. We want another extra in half an hour."

Johnston rose unhurriedly. The harassed eyes of the city editor continued to rove, and they came to rest on a slender young man with unruly blonde hair, who stood in the corner staring pop-eyed at the terrific excitement which pervaded the city room.

"Hey, Mooney!" yelled the city editor. "Come here."

Terry Mooney answered the summons.

"You're on the Evening Record, aren't you?" inquired the city editor.

"Yes, sir."

"Didn't you write that blurb in this evening's edition—the one about Thornton leaving for New York?"

"Yes, sir."

"You hang around with that theater gang a good bit, don't you?"

"Yes, sir."

Ken Johnston edged in.

"They say he's engaged to the ingénue, chief. What's her name, Terry?"

"Anice Garet."

"Right-o. And you can pick 'em for me, son. She's a pip."

"To hell with that kidding," growled the city editor. "Johnston, take Mooney with you. Keep him with you. He can help if he knows that gang intimately. You, Mooney—keep both eyes open for human interest. Grab some heart stuff out of the bunch backstage. You know—here this minute, gone the next. What it feels like to have your best friend murdered. All that kind of blah. Johnston will look after the official end—police, coroner, all that sort of stuff. You're under Johnston's orders—see, you do what he says . . . but for God's sake give me action—and copy! Reams of copy! Now get out of here before I kick you out."

THEY left the place together—the veteran and the youngster. Both were excited, but Mooney did not conceal his excitement. Johnston wore a carefully cultivated mask which he fancied made him appear hard boiled. He questioned the younger man only once as they whirled toward the theater in a taxi.

"This Thornton," he asked, "he was pretty much of a louse, wasn't he?"

The boy nodded slowly. "Nobody liked him very much."

"Good enough. But, son, when they're dead they're all sweet characters. Don't forget that—ever."

And a half hour later the city editor, stewing in his own perspiration, received a call from his star reporter.

"Chief, this is Johnston. Got a few facts. Wylie Thornton shot. Dead. Coroner on the job. Marty Gallagher here from headquarters. Major Manning discovered in the room with the body. His daughter found him there and accused him of the murder. Manning probably under arrest. Miss Manning just coming out of a faint. She was supposed to be Thornton's sweetie, but soft pedal that stuff until you hear from me again. It's a darb of a yarn. And say, chief, I think Jim Hanvey . . . you know, the big bank sleuth—I think he's going to work this case with Gallagher."

Strange Affair at a Hotel

A Mysterious Writer Pretends to Commit Suicide in His Room, Thereby Causing Surprising Results to a Couple of Love-Struck Girls.

By Arnold Bennett

Without awaiting a reply sat down at the table.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY A. S. PACKER.

MERCIA had just finished dressing—by electric light, 8:15 a. m.—when there was a knock at the door of her bedroom.

The room was in perfect order, save for the unmade bed; it had something of the appearance of a home—indeed it was Mercia's home, retreat, fastness, castle; but its dimensions and general aspect were modest, and its window showed that it formed part of an attic floor in the hotel. Worse rooms than Mercia's were, however, to be found by opening doors on the long and narrow carpetless corridors of the attic floor. For Mercia was a member of the upper class of the hotel staff. On one side of her lived the second floor housekeeper, quite a personage; and a few rooms away a far greater personage, the Italian manager of the Grill room, hid the secrets of his private life.

"Come in," said Mercia, in a quiet, composed voice.

That voice was one of the keys to the enigma of Mercia's individuality. (Not that her individuality could fairly be called more enigmatic than that of any other human being!) Twenty-four years of age, dark, tallish, with some perhaps disputable claims to beauty, simply dressed in black alpaca enlivened by certain trimmings of silk, well shod, smoothly coiffured, unjeweled, efficiently self-manicured, she spoke with benevolent, firm restraint, and she moved in the same manner.

A fat, middle aged housemaid entered the room, bearing a box in brown paper.

"I knew you'd be dressed, Miss," said the smiling incomer, glancing at the alarm clock which stood on the small mantelpiece between framed photographs of Mercia's parents. "So I thought I'd run in with this before you went down. I happened to see it on the radiator by my lift."

Evidently Mercia was a favorite with at least one humbler member of the staff.

"It was awfully nice of you," said Mercia, and took the parcel.

The housemaid, rather breathless, vanished quickly, waddling, as one who had five seconds to give and no more.

Mercia gazed with curiosity at the parcel.

Three years earlier, on the death of her mother—her last surviving parent—Mercia had inherited a sum of about 6,000 pounds. She had immediately invested her inheritance in gilt edged stocks and sworn to herself never to touch the capital. In the three years she had saved and invested 800 pounds of interest. Having been told all her life that she possessed a talent for housekeeping and organization and being modestly convinced of the truth of the story, she had decided to learn the art of running a hotel; for during short sojourns in English provincial hotels she had not once stayed in a hotel whose management she did not think she could easily improve. She had a desire to put herself to the test by renting in due course a small hotel and so at the same time exercising her faculties and earning a good livelihood.

The strangely logical creature had accordingly set about making her career by obtaining, through the hazard of influence, entry into a first rate London hotel and then laboring in such of its various departments as were open to girls. She had heard that in Switzerland, where hotel proprietors are the only salt of the earth, the haughty sons of salt learned the job of their fathers by beginning as dishwashers and ascending industriously in the scale till they reached the throne of supreme power in the director's room. Why should she not do likewise?

SHE had done likewise—as completely as was permitted to her. She had toiled in the mending department and the clerical side of the kitchens. She had been a housemaid and then a floor housekeeper; she had familiarized herself with the beauty parlors styled cloakrooms; she had rung on and off in the telephone exchange; she had performed early morning shopping in the great markets, and now she was in the bills department, where day by day the money arrives and a good part of the friction also arrives. To be perfect in the bills department one must have a very wide knowledge of the functioning of all services charged for in the bills, which Mercia demonstrably had.

She now undid the parcel, whose address was written in a masculine hand. Inside the beribboned box within the brown paper was a wreath of gardenias, and on the wreath reposed half a sheet of note paper on which had been inscribed, in the same hand as the address, the words:

"Many happy returns of the day.
"M. F. H."

The unromantic, commonsense creature instantly, to her own surprise, slipped into a most romantic mood. She knew nobody with initials "M. F. H." She knew nobody at all likely to bestow flowers upon her. She lived the strict, monastic, insular life of a hotel employé. She had never mentioned her birthday to any one, scarcely even to herself. What was the conclusion, she thought, was that among the hotel guests she had an unknown male admirer who had been bewitched by her across the counter of the bills department. She accepted this conclusion. Silly! But sweet! Yes, it was a sweet conclusion and a thrilling one. A conclusion which changed her from Mercia into a quite different girl of the same name.

She always, on principle, had a margin of time in hand. She now expended the margin in arranging for the comfort of the gardenias in a bowl of water.

SUSIE was dressing, in terrific haste and wild disorder, all across and around the next room to Mercia's. Susie had reached the lipstick stage of her toilet, and was using to the lipstick language which no refined young woman ought to use to a lipstick. As for the room, it had the air of having recently been put to the sack by a burglar with no time to spare.

Twenty-four years of age, dark, tallish, with indisputable claims to beauty, simply but not inexpensively dressed in black alpaca, touched at the wrists and the neck with color, jeweled watch on one wrist, stylistically shod, marvelously coiffured, her fingernails a fine unnatural pink, Susie mumbled to her lipstick without benevolence and without restraint.

Three years earlier Susie had inherited a sum of about £6,000, which money she had immediately employed in transactions on the stock exchange, buying many more shares than she had capital to pay for and selling them again before the dawn of pay day. For some mysterious reason she had a profound belief in her own financial affair. In the first three months of her transactions this belief was richly justified by results. Her £6,000 grew into £12,000 odd and she foresaw herself a millionaire in a year or so.

But in the second three months fate somehow fought against her and she lost the entire £12,000 plus a hundred pounds or so which she had to borrow to save herself from bankruptcy, shame, humiliation, and other trials.

Through influence she had obtained a post as a saleswoman amid the luxuriant blossoms of the hotel flower shop. She had been so successful that a vacancy occurring, she became the head of the fabulous shop. She was not a good head. Her buying was scarcely economical; her accounts were comic, when not tragic, in the eyes of inspecting clerks from the accountant's office. She sinned against various disciplinary rules of the hotel. Punctuality was not her chief virtue. But she kept her position easily, because she could sell more flowers at higher prices than anybody else in the varied history of the hotel flower shop. Hotel guests seemed to be drawn into the flower shop as by invisible magic cords. She had a passion for flowers, and she would communicate that passion to her fellow creatures, especially males, by means incomprehensible even to herself.

Susie had the trustful type of mind which assumes that time stands still for you if you are late and still ardently want to accomplish something outside your schedule. She never had in hand a margin of time, but in desperate cases, which with her happened about ten times a day, she always pretended that she had.

This morning she snatched up a parcel from her toilet table and dashed out of the room and dashed into the next room like Byron's Assyrian wolf. And just within the doorway she dashed into Mercia, who, calm and unhasting, was on her way forth. Susie hugged Mercia fondly.

"Child!" said she, her sticky lips in Mercia's soft cheek. "Many of 'em. Here's some chocs. Couldn't afford anything better." And bestowed the parcel.

Mercia took an envelope from her handbag and bestowed it in exchange for the chocs. The envelope contained a check.

"Ten pounds!" Susie exclaimed. "You horrid, wealthy darling. You've saved my life!"

Then Mercia hugged.

"We shall be late," said Mercia.

"Hello!" said Susie. "Hello!" She had spied the wreath of gardenias in their watery bed on the mantelpiece. "Who's the simpleton, my child?"

Mercia, not without pride, displayed the sheet of hotel note paper.

"O, him!" said Susie. "You know him?"

"A customer," Susie replied. "Buys flowers twice a day. Can't think what he does with them. Yes, he bought those gardenias last night." She examined the flowers and recognized them. For her every flower had a personality. "Yes, them's all right. He gave me some chocolates last night."

"These?" Mercia inquired, lifting the box and smiling ironically.

Susie nodded and laughed. They both laughed.

"You don't mind, child?" said Susie. "You know I never eat chocs. Daren't. And you oughtn't to."

"Of course I don't mind!" Mercia pooh-poohed the absurd idea. "But how did he know about our birthday?"

"I suppose I must have mentioned it," said Susie, self-conscious.

Mercia asked for information about M. F. H.

"Room 404," said Susie, shortly.

"O!" Mercia murmured, and cogitated. "Name's Helford, then?"

"Yes."

Thoughtful, Mercia led Susie in the direction of their day's work.

THE bills department gave on to the main entrance hall or foyer, from which it was separated by a mahogany counter. Over the counter hung an electric sign, "Cashier." At a right angle to this counter was another and larger counter labeled; also electrically, "Reception." Behind the reception counter rose an immense lacework of hundreds of pigeon holes, with brass keys hooked on to some of them, and here and there little packets of letters ledged slantingly within them. Next came the book and newspaper stall and the tape machine. Then the sacred lair of that great, benevolent and aged panjandrum, the splendidly uniformed hall porter, who was so important and respected that nobody could ever be quite sure whether he or the managing director was the supreme authority in the world of the hotel. Susie's flower shop, which from the exterior resembled a conservatory of green punctuated with rich and rare blossoms, stood on the other side of the entrance hall. The entrance hall lived night and day in electric light.

At the back of the cashier counter lay quite a large room, with a wide doorway but no door in it. In the room were several clerks, including two girls (one of them Mercia) and a man. They entered items from slips into colossal books of many colors, and they transferred the entries from the books on to bill sheets. Every bill bore the words "Checks not accepted"; checks, however, were frequently accepted. On one wall of the room was suspended a framed, printed managerial notice of guidance: "THE GUEST IS ALWAYS RIGHT." But the clerks knew that they must add to this injunction the proviso: "Except sometimes when money is in dispute."

The traffic between guests and the bills department was usually at its most active in the morning; for it was in the morning that guests as a rule would depart. On this particular morning Mercia happened to be at the counter. A stout, shabby, and plethoric old gentleman was arguing with her about his bill, which included an item of £26.8.6 for a dinner and a supper. Mercia was exhibiting to him a series of slips, all indubitably signed by himself, vouching for every bit of food and drink served to him or to members of his party during their visit.

Her diplomatic task consisted of proving that the hotel was right while tacitly admitting that he could not possibly be wrong. "Yes, my lord." "Certainly, my lord," said Mercia mildly, soothingly.

His lordship looked at Mercia (when he did not look through her) and saw a discreet female clerk who presumably had no human ties, no private life, no distractions. His lordship had not the least notion that Mercia was not really standing opposite to him at the counter, but rather was flitting in and out of the flower shop gazing at a wreath of gardenias in an attic, wondering how and when she could wear them, recalling the physiognomy of room 404 (with which as floor housekeeper she had once been completely familiar), and recalling, too, the physiognomy of a blonde young man named Helford who had several short conversations with her across the counter about his bills, about London traffic problems, and about nothing. A somewhat wild young man, though agreeable. He made unexpected remarks, but was never familiar; and he never looked through her.

SHE had not thought twice about him, nor imagined that he had thought twice about her. And now the startling wreath of gardenias! That wreath of gardenias might well have induced, in a young woman less perfectly self-controlled than Mercia, an absent mindedness fatal to the diplomatic conduct of business. The gift of chocolates to Susie she could understand; she could have understood a bracelet to Susie. But a wreath of gardenias to a bill clerk! Baffling! Exciting! Yes, very exciting—she could not deny the excitement! However, she managed to overcome his lordship, who signed a check.

In the glass which covered part of the counter she could, by bending, see herself. She looked curiously at herself, as if looking for an explanation of the wreath of gardenias.

She had heard the subdued tinkle of the telephone bell in the room behind her. As soon as the Scottish peer had left the counter the male clerk came to her side and murmured, scarcely audible, one word:

"Suicide!"

"What?" Mercia breathed, frowning.

"Suicide. 404. Name Helford—you know. Seems he's a playwright. Writes under the name of Dusk or something. Richard Dusk. Had a failure at the Charing Cross theater or somewhere."

"O!" breathed Mercia, gathering up the check and the series of slips.

Now in a hotel a suicide, or any sort of demise, is an exceedingly grave matter, the news of which reaches every member of the staff in a hundred secret ways. The duty of every member of the staff is to hide it from all surviving guests, or, if it becomes known, to be either mute or utterly mysterious about it.

Susie, helped by an assistant, a capable young girl of sixteen to whom she gave an order about every half minute—and sometimes two orders simultaneously—was busy among her flowers in the flower shop; the flowers which had lived all alone during the night and the flowers which had just arrived from the wholesalers.

She looked at the latter, lying as if they were drugged with their stalks stretched straight in long wooden boxes, and her glance somehow instantly gave them life and individuality. She talked to them while lifting them from the cotton-wool as she might have talked to a cat; she caressed them; she called them sweet names; she condoled with them upon the brevity of floral life and the imminence of death.

And she dashed around the shop, and the assistant dashed around the shop eager to be useful. And the flowers were housed and fed. And Susie's eyes glinted and her limbs moved freely and loosely, and her hands were expressive of her feelings toward the flowers.

An impulsive, flyaway, beautiful creature! She had the sort of mind that flits incessantly to and fro, incapable of concentration because of the variety of its interests. While thinking of the flowers she thought of the bestower of chocolates and gardenia wreaths. Her unspoken reflections and her spoken remarks ran into one another and made an extraordinary medley.

"I LIKE him, but I don't like his mustache! Take that box from under my feet. Of course he's a flirt, but he's quite straight. Why does he have a mustache? No! Fold up the paper. Anyhow, put it somewhere else. Why did he send those gardenias to Mercia? He never said a word to me about them being for her. You never know what he'll say next. But he's frightfully nice and polite. Under thirty. Yes, under thirty. Now, do cut the stalks evenly. You can't cut them with those scissors. Get the large pair. No, stick them in that brown vase in the corner. No, not that one; the brown one in the corner. Can't you see? Why Mercia? He told me when his birthday was, of course, I had to tell him when mine was. Only decent to tell him. Besides, he's all right. Steady with that maidenhair. Steady. He must have money. Comes in twice a day and spends about a pound each time. I wonder what he does with them all. Must know lots of girls . . . And then Mercia! And he never let on who they were for. Don't drown them, now. You're flooding the entire shop. Mind your apron. And leave that Japanese pigmy alone. You know it only wants watering every other day. But why Mercia? She never mentioned him to me, and he never mentioned her. Not his sort—I should say——"

"Please, miss," said the assistant, "Mr. Medmenham's outside."

And Mr. Medmenham was indeed outside. The great, gloriously uniformed panjandrum, he who had once been summoned in the night to chat with an American envoy lying sleepless on a bed of pain! The benevolent old fellow had left his den and was espying from the front of the flower shop.

Susie thought of him always as Father Christmas, because his hair was white and his uniform chiefly scarlet. She dashed to the front of the shop and enchantingly beamed upon him. She had an affection for the panjandrum, and the affection shone in her bright eyes and showed itself in her parted, pouting red lips.

The panjandrum's red face was very sad and very sympathetic. He thought that Susie was a strange and incalculable piece; but he returned her affection, and his general attitude towards her was that of a guardian and protector.

"Whatever's the matter, Mr. Medmenham?" Susie burst out, rather loudly, ignoring the movement of people in the foyer.

The panjandrum spoke low, a warning in his voice.

"I wanted to tell you myself," said he in a murmur. "Something rather dreadful's happened, and it'll be a shock to you."

Susie glanced across the hall and descried the figure of Mercia. So it could not be Mercia to whom something dreadful had happened.

"O, dear! What?" Susie lowered her tone.

"It's that Mr. Helford. He's—he's had an accident."

"But he was in here last night. And I've been expecting him every minute. This is his time. Is he hurt?"

"I'm afraid he's hurt. I'm afraid—they say he's gone and killed himself. It's a great calamity for the hotel."

Susie gave a shriek, startling the hall. In the whole of the panjandrum's experience such a shocking noise had never before been heard in the sacred foyer. Hysterical giggles, yes. But a loud shriek!

Mr. Medmenham pushed Susie back into the shop, followed her and shut the door.

"Come, now! Come, now!" he softly adjured his ward. And thought: "How sensitive they are!"

WHEN, according to custom, the chambermaid entered the bedroom of Mr. Montagu Frederick Helford from his sitting room on the morning of the events previously narrated, she found it, as usual, in darkness, save for one or two glints of daylight at the edges of curtains and blinds.

Mr. Helford had been staying in the hotel for several weeks, and the woman knew exactly what she was to do—namely, draw the curtains and the blind of the right hand window and leave the curtains and blind of the left window alone. Mr. Helford did not care for a lot of light at an early hour. He preferred to get used to the dawn gradually. Sometimes Mr. Helford would ask her to transmit his breakfast order to the floor waiter; and sometimes he would telephone the order himself from his bedside. The nature of his breakfast would depend on his waking mood.

The chambermaid softly attended to the right hand window and was just leaving again by the sitting room door when she had a "feeling" (as she afterwards described it) that all was not as usual in the bedroom of the amiable and vivacious Mr. Helford. Till that moment she had refrained, as every discreet British chambermaid does, from looking at the bed.

Looking now at the bed, which was in the shadow of the curtained left hand window, she perceived, or thought she perceived, in the gloom, that Mr. Helford was lying in bed fully dressed. Not in evening dress, which might have been explicable, but in a lounge jacket with soft collar and a club tie. Being a chambermaid of immense experience in life, she was not unduly alarmed by the odd spectacle; indeed, a sardonic and indulgent smile transiently lit her face. Then it struck her that the features of the sleeper (turned toward the wall) had a mortal paleness.

She very courageously approached the bed. Yes, the face of the sleeper was nearly as white as his pillows. Also, though clad, he was lying not on the bed, but in the bed, with the sheet, blanket, and eiderdown only just below his shoulders. One arm was inside the bedclothes; the other, the right, was stretched rather crookedly on the eiderdown. Still more odd, the right hand wore a thick, dark, fur lined glove. The chambermaid, horrified but spellbound, gazed closer. There was a small red hole in Mr. Helford's blanched temple. From this hole a little blood, very little, had exuded. Lastly, on the purple eiderdown, and scarcely distinguishable from it, reposed a revolver.

The chambermaid gave a gasp and fled quickly.

In the corridor the chambermaid met the second floor waiter, an Italian, whose English, though adequate enough for his duties, drooped under the strain of tidings poured out by a highly excited woman about the alleged suicide of a rich young gentleman who was admired and beloved by every employé on his floor. The two retired in rapid converse to the service room at the end of the corridor. In which room the chambermaid fell into hysterics. Other employés joined the scene. The head floor waiter could not be discovered. When he arrived he listened to the tidings with a certain incredulity, whereupon the chambermaid, who had partially recovered her reason, grew angry.

The head floor waiter commanded the chambermaid to accompany him into No. 404. She refused. The man insisted. The woman relapsed into hysterics. The head and second floor waiters decided to invade the room themselves. They beheld what the chambermaid had beheld, and the head floor waiter seemed to lose nerve when his subordinate lifted the arm of Mr. Helford and it dropped back like a piece of wood. The head waiter, an Italian also, had an appalling fear of the police, and he furiously cursed the second floor waiter for daring even to touch the body in the absence of authority.

"Yes," the two men heard as they reëntered the service room. "And they'll be having me in the dock for murder." The tearful, despairing voice of the chambermaid!

Confusion! Indecision! Long delay! The supreme director must be informed of the event. The senior waiter picked up the telephone receiver, then replaced it.

"No," he wailed. "I can't say that on the telephone," and he instructed his subordinate: "You go down to the office."

The subordinate declined the job. Discipline had vanished. Bells were unanswered. At length, because some pusher of an unanswered bell had telephoned a complaint to the office, the supreme director most strangely did make his appearance, solemn, calm, ineffably important. He demanded a pass key. Several were offered to him, but the door would not yield to the persuasion of the key. Nor would the door of 405, the sitting room.

PAUSE.

"Both doors have been bolted on the inside," said the director.

A case of the irresistible force meeting the immovable post!

Should one of the doors be broken in? Decision against this course, as being both too noisy and destructive!

Then somebody thought of the bathroom door, No. 403. The bathroom door yielded. But the door between the bathroom and the bedroom was locked and the key gone, and there was no pass key for that secondary door. Who could have locked it? And who could have bolted the other two doors from the inside?

In the end another key was found, and the locksmith began to file its wards. At the very moment of the locksmith's triumphant success, Mercia arrived in the corridor. At the next moment Susie arrived in the corridor. Both were neglecting their duties. They gazed reproaches at one another, but not for the neglect of duties. After them came a doctor who had been summoned; also a policeman. The supreme director, with the head floor waiter and the locksmith (who felt that he deserved a reward) and the doctor and the policeman and Mercia and Susie (neither of whom cared twopence what the director might think or say) streamed in file into the bedroom.

The bed was empty; the bedroom was empty; the wardrobes held naught but clothes; the sitting room was empty. The policeman threw up a window; but the window looked upon a stone precipice some seventy feet in depth.

Mercia and Susie, by previous arrangement, spent that evening together at the newest and largest and grandest cinema house, the El Dorado, in the center of the west end. The great sensation of the hotel had died down during the day, under the influence of a new rumor to the effect that there had been something spurious about the tremendous case of suicide. No member of the staff lower than a few hierarchs of the topmost rank knew the true inwardness of the affair, but instructions had come down from the directorial room that the occurrence of a suicide in the hotel was to be categorically denied. And denied it was. And among the employés everybody pointed out sagaciously to everybody else, first, that a corpse could not have been conveyed unseen out of room No. 404, and, second, that the doors of Nos. 404 and 405 could not have bolted themselves on the inside.

Susie could have provided a man or so for the joint birthday festival, but Mercia said that they had had enough of men for the present, and Susie had rather regretfully agreed to this proposition.

AT the end of one superfilm, and before another superfilm began Susie suggested that they should test the resources of the refreshment lounge. As they went out they talked of the superfilm just witnessed, but the conversation was less lively and critical than usual; partly because the event of the morning had taught them that superfilms were not, after all, so wildly untrue to real life as the girls had supposed; and partly because the relations between the pair were not completely cordial. Each had privately resented the presence of the other at the crucial moment of entry into No. 404. Some obscure form of jealousy.

Further, Susie resented the fact that whereas not a managerial word had been said to Mercia about her absence from duty, Susie had barely escaped sentence of dismissal for a precisely similar absence from duty. In vain did Mercia explain to Susie that as she, Mercia, was officially in the hotel for the purpose of learning the whole business of hotel running, it was at once her privilege and her duty to learn the methods of procedure in dealing with cases of suicide, for a suicide might happen in any hotel, and a manageress who through lack of practice could not cope with such a calamity would hardly be justified in claiming that she knew her job. Susie merely sniffed at the argument.

Still, on the surface, and perhaps some distance beneath the surface, the pair were on goodish terms.

The refreshment lounge rivaled in vastness and surpassed in splendor the auditorium itself. Louis XV., of whose style it was a modern imitation, accustomed though he was to the dimensions of Versailles, would have regarded the lounge as no trifle. Scores and scores of tables dotted the immeasurable, thick, glowing carpet, dozens of natty waitresses waited, and hundreds of patrons either promenaded over the carpet or sat in easy chairs at the tables.

The bill clerk and the florist sat down at a table, felt quite at home in the magnificence, and, having lit cigarets, were served with synthetic lemonade.

"Look!" murmured Mercia warningly, and bent her head.

Susie looked, and saw the giver of gardenias and chocolates wandering about with the bright eye of a searcher, just as if he had not been dead twelve hours earlier. He wore the fawn tinted suit in which the chambermaid had discovered him.

"He's looking for us," muttered Susie, and bent her head.

"Did you tell him we should be here tonight?"

"I may have mentioned it," admitted Susie, confused.

FUTILE for the pair to avert their faces! The searching eye found them, and Mr. Helford advanced with an astonishing sangfroid.

He doffed his hat. "May I?" he asked, and without awaiting a reply sat down at the table.

"Thank you," said he to Mercia.

"For what?" Mercia quietly demanded.

"You're wearing some of my gardenias."

It was true. The lapel of her coat held a couple of gardenias from the wreath.

Both girls were self-conscious. Susie kept strict silence.

"But what have I done, dear ladies?" the blonde and airy Mr. Helford inquired in a most innocent tone. "I used my knowledge of the stage to make my face a dead white—'dead' is a good word—I painted a fine wound on my forehead, and I put a thick glove on my right hand so that nobody could tell whether my hand was burning hot or stone cold; and I got into bed and laid a revolver convenient, and when the door opened I shut my eyes and didn't move an eyelash. Any harm in that? Was it a crime? Was it bad manners? Did it do wrong to anybody? If anybody carelessly mistook me for a corpse am I to be blamed? And yet you look at me as if I had assassinated both my parents! I know people said I was in despair because my play has just failed in London. What a notion! All good plays fail in London. One expects it. But in New York I made a hundred thousand dollars with that same play. Why should I despair?"

"Mercia," said Susie. "We are missing the next film."

"No, you aren't," said Mr. Helford blithely. "I'm the next film. I've come here to tell you everything, and I must tell you. I haven't told any one else, and don't want to tell any one else. Except the police. The police very kindly paid me a visit this afternoon—at another hotel. They asked me how I got away from No. 404 unseen. I told them I had a confederate. 'Who is he?' said they. 'Wouldn't you like to know?' said I. But I don't mind telling you he's a waiter who's going to start a little restaurant of his own in Soho and I promised him some capital. All he had to do was to create as much delay as he could before informing the management. He did very well. I washed the grease paint off my face, put on a uniform mackintosh and a cap which I abstracted from the locker of one of the chauffeurs of the hotel laundry vans, slipped out of the bathroom door and down the service staircase, and out by the goods entrance. So simple! I do confess that if I'd known earlier it was your birthday today I'd have put the affair off, because I admire both of you so much and I wouldn't have spoiled your birthdays for anything." He smiled. "But you didn't let me know about your birthday until it was too late to alter my arrangements." He smiled anew.

Strange Affair at a Hotel

"So that was it!" said Mercia awkwardly.

"That was it. I see you both hate me. So, as I'm desperate at being hated and don't care what happens to me, I'll just tell you one more thing. I only gave both of you little birthday presents because I couldn't bear that one of you should feel out of it. But it's the other one who's knocked me silly. You're dying to know which of you it is who's knocked me silly. And you never will know now, because I see everything is all up with me. And, anyhow, it's nobody's business but mine. I must say that, though you are alike in looks, you aren't so frightfully alike in anything else—for twins."

Susie glanced up at him and then quickly down again.

"What we are dying to know, Mr. Helford," Mercia primly remarked, "is why you played this prank at all."

"It wasn't a prank," Mr. Helford cheerfully protested. "There's a fake suicide in a hotel in my next play, and I had to find out exactly what does happen and how it happens when some idiot shoots himself in a big hotel. You often read of these things in papers, but I needed a few realistic details. And I've got 'em. I interviewed my confederate—five minutes after the police had retired hurt—and the conscientious fellow had taken very careful notes for me. True, he can't spell."

"I understand now," said Mercia, no sign of reproof in her sedate voice. "And I'm glad you told us."

Mr. Helford, the successful playwright, gazed appreciatively and with intense relief into Mercia's eyes, and Mercia gazed into his. And Susie witnessed the exchange and threw down her cigaret. In that instant she had comprehended, with shocked amazement, that it was the chocolates, and not the gardenias, which had been given so that one of the girls should not feel "out of it."

"Well, I don't understand," she exclaimed. "What I do understand is that I've lost my situation through this lark of yours, Mr. Helford."

"Susie!" her sister demurred.

"Well," said Susie, correcting herself. "I mean I might have lost it. Mercia, let's go home. I couldn't possibly stick another film. Besides, it's half over."

The refreshment lounge was indeed nearly empty. None of the three had noticed the exodus.

The synthetic lemonade had been supplied on an immediate cash basis, and thus there was nothing to delay departure. Mr. Helford rose from the table with the girls. Nobody said good night. Hence Mr. Helford permitted himself to accompany the girls through the satin foyer and the silk vestibule into the street. Susie walked on in front. Mercia made an excuse for her to Mr. Helford, who replied that in his opinion Miss Susie was perfectly justified in her annoyance at his suicide escapade. He said that he understood. Plainly he and Mercia were in a mood of mutual understanding, and the resentful defection of Susie somehow drew them closer together. Suddenly Susie stopped a taxi and, jumping into it with the rapidity of an acrobat doing a trick, cried out:

"You two can walk to the hotel together, if Mr. Helford dare put his nose into the place!"

She was gone.

A sad display of pettishness on Susie's part. But Mercia again made an excuse for her, and Mr. Helford asserted that she was, really, a charming girl, and so good looking. And this tone said further: "But not as charming and as good looking as you are, Miss Mercia."

They did walk to the hotel together, or rather they walked together till the hotel was less than a hundred yards off. A solemn promenade! And somewhat taciturn! But they both enjoyed it, though they could not have explained why. A month or two later Mr. Helford was in a position to explain why he at any rate had enjoyed it. And he did explain, and Mercia accepted the explanation for the gospel which it in fact was.

Susie proved to be an enchanting sister-in-law to Mr. Helford, full of affectionate mockeries.

Pie on the Pate.

About a year ago I offered to assist a friend at a church dinner. Everything went successfully and I was just passing through swinging doors from the kitchen with a tray of individual butterscotch pies when I collided with one of the church trustees and knocked him down, spilling the pies on his bald pate.

Every one screamed with laughter and I managed a silly grin and slunk back to the kitchen. H. A.

Her Initiative Cooled.

One day several years ago I casually told my mother that the boy next door had asked me to go out with him that same evening. I just said this to see what she would say.

At that time I happened to be of the age when my mother planned my "goings" and "comings." She politely said that she wished me to attend a family gathering with my dad and herself, and that I could not go out. This did not disappoint me, as I had not been asked in the first place.

Before all this happened I had called this boy up by phone to give him a message from a teacher at school. He was not at home, but his dad said he could run over as soon as he got in.

Imagine my embarrassment when he came for the message and my mother, who thought he wanted to know if I could go with him, came in the living room to say she was sorry but her daughter could not go with him that evening.

I certainly would have given anything if the floor had opened up and swallowed me. L. M. H.

"My Skin Nearly Drove Me Mad"

"I had blemishes and blackheads so badly, and used to fuss with them so much that my face looked red and raw. On the advice of a nurse friend I got a jar of Rowles Mentho Sulphur and used it faithfully for ten days. In 3 days' time there was a big difference in my skin and today it is as soft and clear as my ten year old sister's."

The sulphur in Rowles Mentho Sulphur clears the skin while the Menthol heals the sore, broken tissue. That's the twofold action you want for skin troubles. Try Rowles Mentho Sulphur not only for pimples and blackheads, but for dry, scaly skin, rash and itching eczema. IT WORKS! All druggists sell it in jars ready for use. Be sure it's Rowles.

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that follow severe cold epidemics.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of distressing coughs, chest colds, and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Informal Ideas for a Sunday Night Supper

It is the aim of this department to serve as a practical guide in problems of everyday etiquette. Self-addressed, stamped envelope must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Miss Helen Bartlett, Sunday Department, Chicago Tribune.

By Helen Bartlett.

SUNDAY night suppers are increasingly popular and deservedly so. It is a pleasant custom and a meal almost every one enjoys tremendously. In most households servants are permitted on Sundays to be free after luncheon or dinner at noon, and supper is one of the easiest meals to prepare in advance, and to serve.

There are no rigid rules for it, since the hour and the type of food are governed by personal preference and general plans for the day.

At Sunday night supper hors d'oeuvres can play a most important part. An attractive tray of them, with a single hot dish, will constitute a most satisfactory meal. Hors d'oeuvres are a joy to the hostess with a fertile imagination.

They can be simple or elaborate. If the hostess wishes to spend the money and save herself time and effort she may order a tray of them from the caterer, but if she has any cleverness about such things she can prepare most attractive ones at home at much less expense.

Attractive Hors d'Oeuvres.

Stuffed olives wrapped in bacon and skewered with a toothpick are easily prepared. Canapes take more time. There are many delicious foods to be used in the preparation of hors d'oeuvres which are comparatively unknown to many hostesses. They may be found in cans or jars, practically ready to serve. Antipasto, the Italian hors d'oeuvres; tuna fish, olives, pickles, onions and artichokes might provide one item for the compartment dish. Then there are pimento cups put up in cans, which are stuffed with a cheese mixture and chipped chives.

Another group might be toasted bread rounds with mustard, ham and caviar. Another might be bread rounds or squares covered with jam and ornamented with cream cheese. Celery stuffed with Roquefort could be another.

The countless varieties of hors d'oeuvres range from simple slices of hard boiled eggs with seasoned mayonnaise to elaborate creations in aspic. Any woman with imagination, a can opener and a flair for decorative garnishing can produce a dazzling tray of them in half an hour.

After these a hot dish may be served. Here again the originality and preference of the hostess must determine what it is to be. Deviled crab meat is well suited for this purpose, or cheese soufflé or lobster Newburg. An oyster stew on a cold winter night might be the answer to cold and hungry guests' prayers.

Or the meal may be planned in an entirely different manner. One might start out with cups of steaming bouillon or broth, after which a large and decorative tray of cold things might be served for the second course. A jellied vegetable salad could be placed, molded, in the center of the large platter; around it, in alternate slices, could be ham and chicken. Nestling close to the salad could be deviled eggs and stuffed tomatoes. This would make a handsome dish. Have plenty of good coffee, of course.

Service Should Be Simple.

Informality is the very excuse for being of a Sunday night supper, so service should be as simple as possible. The hostess can easily serve as many as six people and if supper is of the buffet variety, many more.

By far the easiest plan if one is without servants is the buffet service. The table may be covered with a lace cloth, if it is not too elaborate, or set with runners. An attractive decorative scheme is, as always, important. A low bowl of flowers and figurines, or candelabra are placed in the center of the table. Food in its trays with the necessary silver beside it, is placed at intervals on the table or buffet. At one end of the table the requisite silver is laid in neat lines, napkins and plates are stacked beside it. At the other end is the coffee urn, at which the hostess presides. Before her are placed cream and sugar, cups and saucers [sometimes just cups, which are placed on the plates] and spoons. Guests procure their plate, silver and napkin, fill the plate, serving themselves, from the trays and platters on the table and either then or later obtain their beverage from the hostess.

The filled plates may be taken to a comfortable chair anywhere in the dining room or an adjoining room, or one may eat standing up. A daughter or one of the guests can be appointed to see that the guests are comfortable, that they have enough food, and that every one is well taken care of.

Answers to Etiquette Questions.

"Is it considered good taste to wear long white evening gloves to any sort of formal affair? May one wear bracelets over the gloves? Is it ever correct to roll the lower part and tuck it back at the wrist? D. W."

Fashion, more than convention, has taken over the glove question. This season long gloves for evening may be worn correctly for any formal affair, but if you wear a dinner dress, which is not an evening dress, long gloves are not worn. According to Paris reports, bracelets worn over gloves are quite smart. The gloves are removed entirely when it is necessary to have the hand free; they're never turned back at the wrist.

"1. With what piece of silver does one eat hors d'oeuvres? 2. When meat, chicken a la king, or any main dish is brought on a platter, does one place small portions of it on the dinner plate with a large spoon, or a knife and fork? 3. Does a gentleman order for a woman or does she order her own meal first?—Mrs. H. S."

1. Some appetizers may be taken up and eaten with the fingers; for others a fork is used. 2. A serving spoon is used to transfer food from platter or tray. The fork may be used with it, if necessary. 3. The woman tells the man what she wishes and he relays the order to the waiter.

Children Ha[...] Rights Pare[...] Should Re[...]

Children Have Rights Parents Should Respect

The following booklets by Mrs. Bevans will be sent free on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope: "Books to Be Read to Children or by Them," "Sex Education Booklet," and "Play Booklet." A book on the care of babies by Carolyn Conant Van Blarcom can be had at The Tribune Public Service Office, 1 South Dearborn street, for 50 cents, or by mail for 65 cents.

By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

SATURDAY'S article was only a drop in the bucket—there is so much to be said about children's rights at home. Not their moral rights and all that sort of thing—but their material rights, as we might call them, their right to actual space and their right to use it freely, even if it means disorder and confusion.

Now, of course, whenever any one makes a statement like that, apparently encouraging disorder and confusion, one needs to rush an explanation along right after it. So, it is necessary to add that this doesn't advocate giving children the freedom of the house for the purpose of allowing them to be destructive and inconsiderate of the furniture or the grown people in it.

In fact, quite the opposite thing results when children are given the intelligent freedom of their home. When their right to use it is granted, when they are not nagged or scolded for their effects on the home landscape by legitimate play—that is, when their position in the house has some dignity, their attitude toward the whole set-up becomes intelligent and considerate. This is not a fine or idle theory—it is practice—proven practice. I could give dozens of instances of it—of tiny children who have never pencil marked a book or a wall and who have never done a purposely destructive thing—but I haven't the space for such details.

Just Be Fair.

If we do that simple thing of being quite fair, which often means merely treating them with as much lenience as we treat ourselves, we can get a slant on the children's play which will revolutionize our attitude toward it, provided that we have been on the wrong track.

For instance, we want to make a dress, and we haven't a sewing room—who has? Well, the cutting out of a dress on the living room table with paper patterns, scraps, a sleeve laid here, a godet there, the sewing machine dragged out—wreck the place. But do we hesitate? It's a legitimate confusion, and we don't question our right to it.

Or the man of the family being musical decides to get out all his ancient music from the old black trunk and sort it and throw some away. The fact that he ends by covering every chair and table in the place with it, by "mooning" over this or that song, that the dry and yellowed edges break off on the rug, that he's called away in the midst of the job for several hours—none of that opens him to criticism in any one's eyes. It's a logical disorder—he's entitled to it. What's a home for?

They Appreciate It.

The disorder that results from the children's play is just as logical—and they have just as much right to it. Like all other rights, it has to be put on a working basis.

But there it is—a legitimate upsetting which results from a legitimate play with blocks, or doll's sewing, or a stamp collection, or a carpentry job, a train made of all the chairs and pillows in the house, or a cave of blankets in the center of the living room floor.

If we admit their right, if the children feel our regard for it, we can get a surprising degree of intelligent coöperation from them, even from the little ones.

Of course, children are human. I don't mean they'll never give a tempting football an impetuous kick perilous to the lamps and pictures, nor oil a truck on the rug, forgetting to put down papers. Nor do I mean that the 2 and 3 year olds will always be able to distinguish between the fact that they have carte blanche in the saucepan closet, but not with the china.

There will be slips, but they won't be from destructiveness nor stupidity. When these slips come we may overlook the little ones—or explain and make a satisfactory substitution with the big ones—or somtimes come out with a flat denial. A "no" or a "don't" that isn't always popping in the children's ears gets a respectful consideration that a hundred a day do not.

Increase Their Intelligence.

It is astonishing how quickly even a very young child who is lovingly and intelligently given the run of a house will sense what he may and may not do. Not being always restrained and frustrated, he is in a calmer and more acquiescent state when restraint or denial are necessary. So, when the time and the place for not permitting some sort of play arrives, he is open to reason. He has an underlying if unconscious faith in you and your understanding, and so an open mind. It is the same old story—or ambition: to make our children intelligent, not just obedient.

Of course, this giving children their right to play freely and the place or space in which to do it, takes a little doing. But it can be done and should be done, even at the cost of interior decoration and good housewifeliness. Which makes me think of a man who said to me the other day, "Now I have only a back yard—it's all I try to have. I'll wait till my children are grown up to have a beautiful, decorative garden."

There must be some space you can set aside where certain sorts of things can be done. There must be one room that can be used by the children in the daytime with comfort and freedom. There can be one big solid table on which magazines and drawings and the paraphernalia of interesting activities can be spread out in the early evening.

There's some way it can be managed so that the children's fun and play and hobbies have a legitimate place in the home that belongs to them as much as to the grownups.

Life in Old England, as Seen by One American

He Searches Country for an Average Britisher.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MANCHESTER, England, Feb. 1.—What is the average Englishman thinking about in this critical period of his national life?

That would be interesting if it were possible to find the answer. I have talked with many men in many places, and with women, too, seeking some fugitive light on this average mentality.

Some time ago a search was made for the average man in the United States, and he was finally spotted in a small city in a central state, a cheerful, fairly prosperous clothing merchant, a Rotarian, a church member with a weakness for Sunday auto rides or golf, a neat little home in a neat little street, and a Republican.

Following this method, I have come to the Midlands of England, the industrial north, for this is a nation of industry and shopkeepers, and here he must live, if anywhere. And here is the "spiritual home" of the labor school of thought which at present rules England and which seems destined to go on to greater experiment.

Money the First Think.

It is superficial, of course, in this scientific age, when the human personality, with all its distinctions and temperament and soul life, may be probed in so many ways, to label any man or woman as "average," or middle class, lower class, or upper class. Yet these classifications are being constantly made here, by waiters, hotel clerks, and other experts. A turn of phrase, a manner of dress, an accent, and one is fixed in a class. The daughter of a peer becomes the Hon. Phyllis ——, and at a tender age her pictures appear in the newspapers and her best talents are carefully nourished. The undermaid, or "skivvy," at the Grand hotel, at $2.50 a week and 10 hours' work a day, may have much more native ability and beauty, but it is hidden under coal dust and poor clothes and sharp treatment by a superior world.

Money is the first thing that people think about, for this is a land of industrial depression and the average man has a hard time to make both ends meet. Average earnings in the principal manufacturing industries for a given week in 1928, just published by the ministry of labor, show the highest at $26.50 a week [newspaper printers] and the lowest, $10 [cotton workers]. The women workers get from $8.75 [tobacco] down to $6.25 [clothing].

The penny in England is a very respectable coin, indeed, not only in weight but in buying power. An American, used to a grand disregard of pennies, finds himself constantly trying to get rid of the weight of copper in his pocket. They are about the size of the half dollar.

An Englishman of the upper middle class sat in the hotel lounge last evening listening to the radio program which the British government decides is good for him on Sunday, sipping stout. That is about all there is to do in a British city on Sunday, for everything is closed and the streets deserted.

Gives Twopenny Tip.

This Englishman was young, nicely dressed, and looked amenable to casual conversation. He ordered another bottle of stout, giving the waiter a shilling, which is worth 12 pennies. The drink cost 9 pence. The waiter had not even offered me any change, on a similar errand. He had hesitated a moment, waiting for a wave of the hand, and was gone with the 3 pence. This was an American, and he knew what to expect. But with the Englishman he carefully counted out the three big pennies and then waited. The gentleman in turn hesitated and fingered over the pennies. He knew that he could buy stout at a public house on the corner for 6 pence, and at another place across the street, where the working class was not wanted, for 7 pence. He was willing to pay a penny or two extra for the nice chair, the coal fire and the music, but he hated to tip this impressive looking waiter, who was dressed like an admiral, with red vest and gold braid on his shoulders. Finally he counted out two pennies and put the other one in his pocket. And the waiter was grateful about it. Imagine tipping a waiter at the Blackstone four pennies!

This may seem a trivial incident, but it shows the attitude toward money, even in such a place.

This young man was an engineer, I found, making $20 a week, which puts him definitely in the middle class. He was somewhat disgusted with his surroundings in the potteries district, and did not think he had much chance to get far. He was not the average man, for he was not content.

Don't Like Americans.

"They won't listen to anything here," he said. "Still using horse power and the factories scattered all over the map. There was a proposition recently to amalgamate, scrap all this old stuff and put up a new central plant with all late improvements, but the owners would not listen to it. Why, they are still weaving silk by hand near here, on home looms.

"There was one man who went to America because he could not get a raise of five shillings a week here. He was an expert moulder and started up a business there which grew to great proportions. He was able to come back here and plant his feet on the desk of his old employer and pull his leg a bit. 'You wouldn't raise me five shillings,' he said. "Well, now, you can't sell in your old market because I can undersell you. What do you think of that?' I guess they don't like Americans around here very much. They don't want to be driven out of their old ways."

And so, in search of the average man, I journeyed to the potteries country, the district made famous by Arnold Bennett twenty years ago in his Five Town series. The Five Towns are now one city—Stoke-on-Trent—but they still retain a strong parochial feeling and have refused to become a great city in reality.

Whistler or Pennell would find beauty here, in smoky sunset, in the regimented lines of two story brick dwellings that make the homes of a quarter of a million workers in these dark valleys. Potbanks, black holes in earth, chimneys, and factories strung along for eleven miles. And out of this comes the delicate china and glass that graces the tables of the rich and the common pottery that is used in all parts of the world.

Whole Scene Unlovely.

There is a touch of green, a garden, a glimpse of hillside, and more ornamental dwellings now and then, but the whole scene is unlovely unless one calls it home, an inferno something like Pittsburgh, where the drama of the human spirit is stark and unrelieved. Through the center of the towns run the threads of bricked streets and bright store windows. There is a cheerful, friendly atmosphere here. Chattering groups fill the public house bars, and there is talk of football, a dance, the latest American picture. The men are more carelessly dressed, with a touch of the west in their manner. The girls and children bloom with strange vitality in this damp and sooty atmosphere.

Our average Englishman has a respectable background here, for the pottery towns are rooted in the history that goes back of the Roman invasion, and is traced through Norman times to the industrial revolution and the coming of the steam engine. Little by little he has taken political power away from kings and brought it into his own hands. The sense of this past is with him, and something of the pride of craft which Morris tried to revive in the workman. He has produced through the centuries a system of justice, museums and art galleries, parks, public baths, theaters, schools and schemes of social service. He has hospitals and technical societies, commercial associations, trade unions, political organizations, sport, and developed agriculture. The old wooden Anglo-Saxon cross at Stoke has grown to 300 churches.

Follow him now into his home and talk with him.

An Average Britisher

The average Englishman is ruddy of face, blue eyed, stocky, dressed decently but without any effort at style, his accent unmarked by affectation, his views of life serious but kindly and practical.

He is not concerned deeply with the phenomena of American life and the bright picture of its industrial prosperity which is held before him. There are too many bizarre things about America to intrigue him beyond the vague interest which he gives to Italy or Russia or any other country.

In his hallways hangs a portrait of the king and queen, with a note of thanks addressed to him from the king's secretary, for in one red letter year of his life he had a prominent part in receiving his majesty on the occasion of a royal visit to his town.

His home is near a bit of parkland, where he can take out the dogs on a Sunday morning. His house is the usual two story brick, semi-detached, with a neat little garden, potted plants in the window, and clean lace curtains. There is a bathroom in it, for it is one of the new houses built by the corporation, with government subsidy. There is a coal fire in the front room, cheap but comfortable furniture, pictures of country life, and china whatnots on mantel and table. His income is about $25 a week, whereas the average laborer in the district makes about $12.50 a week.

GEORGE M. COHAN

APPEARING in Chicago for the first time in a great many years, George M. Cohan will open at the Erlanger tomorrow night in "Gambling." Fritzi Scheff will bring back old times next Sunday night at the Majestic, where "Mlle. Modiste" is to open a series of revivals of Victor Herbert operettas. Erin O'Brien-Moore, appearing as Rose Maurrant, is one of the many reasons for seeing Elmer Rice's prize play, "Street Scene," at the Apollo.

Among the cinema attractions for the current week in the loop are Dorothy Mackaill, playing the part of the only woman on a jury in "The Love Racket," at the Orpheum; Pauline Frederick in "The Sacred Flame," at the Chicago, and Mary Brian in "The Kibitzer," the feature picture at the Oriental.

Variety Enough in Month's Films to Satisfy the Tastes of All Fans

THE SIX BEST MOVIES OF JANUARY.

THE VIRGINIAN.	APPLAUSE.
HALLELUJAH.	SUNNY SIDE UP.
THE PASSION OF JOAN OF ARC.	HIT THE DECK.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD Morning!

Movies last month were good, and assorted. So, if you didn't enjoy any of them, the chances are it was because you had a cold or the gout and couldn't get over to your favorite film theater.

The first three listed above were four star productions. The others were awarded three twinklers. The last are, in my opinion, the best of the three star pictures for the month, but you are likely to disagree with me on that score. Which would you have chosen, I wonder?

"THE VIRGINIAN," adapted from the "glorious western classic which, issued in 1902, brought its author, Owen Wister, speedy and lasting fame, was a delight. To quote from the original review:

"Long, lanky, awkward, shrewd-eyed, wistful Gary Cooper with his drawl and the smile that flashes with such sudden sweetness over his sober and somewhat melancholy countenance is, I should say, about perfect in the title rôle. Steve . . . is given a beautiful sendoff by Richard Arlen. Walter Huston as the snake, Trampas, to whom the Virginian delivers his famous ultimatum! 'When you call me that—smile!'—gives a great characterization . . . Mary Brian makes Molly Wood a live and adorable maiden . . . scenery is marvelous . . . photography and synchronization throughout are fine. . . . 'The Virginian' has been directed with admirable restraint and an eye to brevity. . . . Dialogue unusually well rendered and recorded. . . ." I said not to miss this film, and I still say so.

"HALLELUJAH" is an epic of the southern Negro, with an all Negro cast, and it's a whiz. Sedwe: "It is original unto itself, imitative of nothing . . . has drama, swing, rhythm, gayety, and a brooding, tragic note that are all its own. It is realism presented by a southerner who knows his subject and also his theater and his camera. The man? Mr. King Vidor. . . . One great beauty of the piece, as I see it, lies in the fact that it is offensive to no one . . . the hand picked cast is a dandy. Sets and scenery are picturesque and beautifully lighted and photographed. The singing alone is worth the price of admission . . . a work of art . . ."

"THE PASSION OF JOAN OF ARC" is one of the greatest pictures ever made. I'm wondering if, perhaps, it's not the greatest. The story of the imprisonment, trial and execution of the Maid of Orleans is presented with amazing sincerity and forcefulness. There is no prologue, no epilogue, no attempt at any time on the part of the director to inject rhapsody or synthetic drama. . . . So marvelously does Maria Falconetti interpret the title rôle that for you she IS Joan. . . . Magnificent work is done by all members of the supporting cast. . . . The picture is historically accurate. Costumes and settings are convincingly of the period and some remarkable photographic effects have been obtained, especially in the closeups. The action proceeds with commendable continuity from arresting start to powerful conclusion. The accompanying musical score is delightful.

"APPLAUSE" was "different" because of the unusual photography achieved with a moving camera by the director, Rouben Mamoulian, the Theater Guild's director who staged "Porgy" and "Wings Over Europe." It was thought that "Mr. Mamoulian proves himself a wizard at obtaining effects with shadow and light. Unforgettable are love scenes on Brooklyn bridge and on top of a Manhattan skyscraper, shots in the tawdry rooms of theatrical boarding houses and intimate backstage glimpses. . . . Helen Morgan . . . does good and effective work. Joan Peers, a Chicago girl, plays the ingénue rôle . . . gives an honest and sincerely appealing performance . . . other rôles splendidly portrayed.

Mr. Talkie Has Young Brother in Television

By Tom Pettey.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Mr. Talkie has a little brother. His name is Television and he already has celebrated his first birthday. He may not grow up as rapidly as his brother, but if he grows at all, he has a grand future assured him. The producers have given him a screen test and are soliciting him to make his mark on the dotted line. Television, however, it is reported, is the ward of General Electric and when, possibly a year from now, he is ushered before the world in a big way, General Electric will be holding his hand.

Nevertheless, the producing companies are laying plans to meet the situation when it comes. There is a whisper going up and down Broadway that television is going to be a household pet before many moons. There are hints of a "startling announcement" less than half a calendar inch away. Broadway has been a sounding board before and the credulous ones have been left holding a bag of echoes more than once. Just the same, there have been times when the word of mouth boys made good. A couple of years ago Western Electric listened and bought. And look at the theaters they have wired. Well, there are a lot more homes than theaters.

The producing companies believe the television rights to their pictures

German Grand Opera Begins Week's Program

Civic Singers Start on Annual Tour.

By Edward Moore.

TURNING to the roto pages today, you will find a picture of Mme. Johanna Gadski in the costume of Bruennhilde. It is a symbol of the German Grand Opera company which is coming to the Auditorium tonight to begin a week's series of performances. Mme. Gadski, however, will make her first appearance Tuesday night, and her three performances will be three different Bruennhildes, that of "Die Walkuere" Tuesday, of "Siegfried" Thursday, and of "Die Goetterdaemmerung" Saturday, the company's last night.

With one exception the seven performances will be of Wagner. That one will be Mozart's "Don Juan," known hereabouts of recent years in its Italian version as "Don Giovanni." It will be sung in German Friday night.

But even the Wagner operas contain one that will be new to a good section of Chicago's opera going public. It is "Der Fliegende Hollaender" [the Flying Dutchman] which, apart from its overture and "Spinning Song," occasionally done by Mr. Stock

Costly Show in Salon of French Liner

Big Event of the Week Staged in New York.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Judging them by the amount of money they cost, which, heaven help us, is the favorite New York standard, a show given in the grand salon of the French liner Paris, lying alongside her dock hard by the end of Fifteenth street, was the big event of the week in this section.

Consider, for instance, a mixed bill that included the services of Harold Bauer, pianist; Anna Case, soprano; Giovanni Martinelli, tenor; Felis Salmond, cellist; Maurice Chevalier, diseuse; Irene Franklin, chanteuse; Jack Donohue, comedian and dancer, and Moss and Fontana, ball room favorites who specialize in what is known as adagio dancing.

That octet, I venture, cost M. Maurice Tiller, managing director De La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, at least the French equivalent of a pretty penny. Of course, it is natural to assume that he expects to get it back by selling cabins to three or four hundred of the audience this coming summer, but, with the competition what it is, he has no better than a sporting chance.

The real object of the party, which was an invitation affair and called for all the clothes the well dressed man of the theater programs has been able to accumulate, the real object was to show off the new decorations of the Paris.

She is a grand ship, this boat, and long popular with the touring public, but she ran her nose into a mud bank a year ago and later burned out a part of her interior woodwork while she was on the other side. Just for that La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique decided she should be reconditioned, if not from stem to stern at least as far back as the smoking room and bar.

Note Moderne Much in Evidence.

The French, you know, are strong for the note moderne in decoration. It looks a bit crazy to us old-fashioned mid-westerners, but we get used to it. Take, for instance, the case of the flagship of the French line the Ile de France, a sort of floating turreted castle that hops between here and Cherbourg. The Ile de France is moderne no end. Clanging colors, angular furniture, patterned linen and silver and bedspreads that dare you to take them casually. Ever so different, but a difference that grows on the investigator and is finally accepted with enthusiasm.

The Paris is also done over in modern fashion. The early concert, opened by M. Salmond, the cellist, at 9:45, was in the grand salon with seats for 450, I would say, probably 500 with standees, and 1,100 invitations sent out. They shut the doors after the salon was full.

Then the other 600 tried to get into the salon mixte. I don't know exactly what mixte means, but I suspect it is something more or less informal. Here there is a dancing floor of glass through which shine vari-colored lights. One moment you are enpurpled below the knees and the next moment you are encarmined. Frequently, so to speak, you are enrainbowed. Which adds something to the display of these new trailing tails the ladies are wearing on their longer evening gowns. Often in fact the effect is so startling that most of the men who were not dancing just could not seem to keep their eyes off the floor.

No One Kicked in the Face.

Along about 11 o'clock the snappier entertainment started with the Moss and Fontana dancers. The audience fringed the place, two rows of bejeweled and be-satined ladies sitting

Postscripts on 'Field God' and Larrimore Play

With Anticipations of Gay Cohan First Night.

By Charles Collins.

SECOND thoughts are definitely in order for the new play at the Goodman, "The Field God." Its première ran until 11:20, which left an important section of this North Carolina tragedy (with a happy ending) unheard by the morning newspapers, and caused the evening press to turn in a verdict of "too much talk." Thomas Wood Stevens, the director, was filled with post-opening ideas, himself, and rallied a rehearsal the next day, blue pencil in hand.

The fact remains, however, that a drama which is rich in atmosphere and vivid in its characterizations, which carries in three of its acts an emotional climax of the kind that used to be called "a punch," can digest an astonishing amount of dialogue. "The Field God" paints its scene thoroughly and establishes its characters soundly; and words are the only material the dramatist can use in this necessary work. Out of this background, patiently created, action arises, naturally and suddenly, warm with theatrical life. In some of the more vigorous passages I had the sense of complete illusion which doesn't come often to the weathered playgoer; I felt that these people were real and that these things were actually happening. And so there were not too many words in "The Field God" for me—although the backwoods preacher was exceedingly garrulous in his fanatic zeal to convert an agnostic.

An O'Neill of the Deep South.

Moreover, Paul Green, the young follower of Eugene O'Neill and, more remotely, the Dublin dramatists, who wrote this play, is not merely a follower. He seems to have a strong talent for expressing the moods and manners of the land-of-cotton peasantry. He writes like a man of letters with an instinct for the theater. When his characters meditate upon God and Nature, or when they talk of weather signs, rain crows, katydids, and the anatomy of the butchered razor-back, they speak a dialogue which is an essential part of their environment. Their phrases belong to the soil; they have the raciness of folk literature.

Too many words in "The Field God"? Well, there is a double ration of dialogue for each character in "Strange Interlude," and consider how fortunately that overburdened opus has fared. Bernard Shaw, too, has talked himself to death, for the dramatic critics, many a time, and yet he still thrives on his royalties, plus his vegetables. Prompt-book editing will add about twenty-five per cent to the value of "The Field God"; but generally speaking, it was a fortunate thing for his play that young Mr. Green listened so carefully, notebook in hand, while his characters stood before him, on the stage of his imagination, and talked their drawling heads off.

Last Act Re-Written.

"The Field God" has been published, as Miss Butcher of the Books will probably note, in a volume that also contains the author's Pulitzer prize winning piece, "In Abraham's Bosom." The last act as printed, is not, however the last act as staged at the Goodman. This section has been reconstructed and rewritten; and among other things, the question of the birth of an heir to Hardy Gilchrist, the lusty, thrifty yeoman who refuses to worry about his immortal soul, and Rhoda, the niece-in-law whom he courted illicitly and married honestly, has been omitted. Which is an excellent idea. The play has its full equipment of the devices that make life serious without the obstetrics of the original last act. Young dramatists like Mr. Green are too often tempted to inflict a sorrowful maternity upon their heroines. The fact that he changed his mind is a symptom that he is a true playwright instead of a brilliant accident. In the theater, the rewrite boys are the ones that go farthest.

Let's Be Gay and Divorced.

"Let Us Be Gay," bringing Francine Larrimore back to a Chicago following which has rated her for years as one of the stage's most spirited "It" girls, arouses no post-première reflections whatsoever. It isn't that kind of a play. One might wonder, of course, what would happen to the theater if the monotonous, reiterated, eternally tomtommed theme of divorce were, by some act of God or congress, taken away from it.

Such a deprival would, no doubt, throw us back into the dark ages, when Shakespearean usurers clamored for their pound of flesh; or even into the lost era of the noble Greeks, when heroes were always murdering their fathers or marrying their mothers. We probably couldn't get along without the divorce comedies. But at the same time, we seem to be getting more than our share of them.

The boldly etched high comedy style of Charlotte Granville, the demon dowager and heckling hostess of "Let Us Be Gay," will cause many playgoers to ask where she has been all of their lives. Her hit, as she rattles her necklaces and smokes her cigars in this worldly little play, is no less than Miss Larrimore's. Well, Miss Granville has been around, playing this and that part, always with distinction, for numerous years. Look her up in John Parker's "Who's Who in the Theater," an excellent reference work for playgoers, if you are curious.

Miss Granville's last time here is merely a statistic for the career chasers. Her first time here, however, was in association with a bit of stage history. She came from England to figure prominently in one of Chicago's brave experiments in the underwritten drama. She was a member of Donald Robertson's and the Chicago Theater society's "Drama Players," who gave ten fine weeks of high brow things at the Great Northern before miserable and the symphony orchestra, has not been heard in this neighborhood in many years.

Improvement Over Last Year.

The four items of the "Ring des Nibelungen," the Mozart work, "Der Fliegende Hollaender," and "Tristan und Isolde" tonight will complete the list, and though the week is somewhat concentrated, it looks interesting. Juliette Lippe continues to share with Mme. Gadski the more important soprano rôles, Sonia Sharnova is prominent among the mezzo-soprano characters, Carl Joern is back to sing tenor, this year being joined by another famous veteran of the operatic stage, Johannes Sembach, and Carl Braun and Richard Gross are remembered as being among the excellent male voices of the lower range. Ernest Knoch and Ernst Mehlich will alternate as conductors.

From all accounts gathered from some of the cities where the company has been singing on its way here, there has been a considerable improvement in quality over last year, though that visit displayed entirely respectable, well routined, and satisfactory performances. But after Archie Bell heard "Tristan und Isolde" in Cleveland last week, he was moved to write this in the News of that city:

"By some sort of magic known only to impresarios like S. Hurok, who directs this vast undertaking, the singers and instrumentalists have been recruited from the various subsidized theaters of Germany, brought across the ocean and offered at a small operatic price, exactly the sort of thing that American tourists count themselves fortunate to witness when they are in Germany." He adds that Mme. Lippe was "superb" and "a revelation," and that Mr. Joern took rank among the best of them as the hero, finally that the company has new scenic equipments and costumes and that the singers have been selected for their special fitness and experience.

It really looks like a pleasant prospect.

Civic Singers Depart.

In the meantime, while the German company is moving into Chicago, the Civic Opera company this morning is on its special trains—there are several of them—headed in an easterly direction somewhere between Chicago and Boston.

Looking back at the last thirteen weeks, there is a distinct air of big business about the operations of the company. It has completed its first season in its new opera house, its attendance and receipts for the season set a new high record for Chicago both in subscriptions and box office sale. At that fewer operas were given than in recent years. There were thirty-two in all. That, however, is a step in the right direction. There is a distinct limit to the number of operas that can be prepared and presented in any sort of a satisfactory manner during a brief season. After that, it becomes a case of under prepared operas by overworked artists.

Of novelties, there were two, Mascagni's "Iris" and Beethoven's "Fidelio," neither of which had ever been sung by the resident company. Two more almost classified in the same way, both being revivals from as far back as the year 1913. They were Zandonai's "Conchita" and Massenet's "Don Quichotte." It is to be hoped that all can be continued as permanent items. "Conchita" in particular has a more than commonly fine and imaginative score, and Rosa Raisa's brilliant singing of a more than difficult rôle is vivid in the memory. There are other vivid memories, Vanni-Marcoux's magnificent performance of Don Quichotte, the way that Egon Pollak stopped the show with the third "Leonore" Overture as an entr'acte in "Fidelio," and so on.

Few Changes in Personnel.

Of the thirty-two operas, eighteen were Italian, eight French, and six German, and they totaled to 101 performances. The most popular of all, judged by number of performances, was "La Traviata," which was sung six times. "Aida," "Il Trovatore," "Tosca," "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame," "Don Quichotte," and "Tristan und Isolde" took four performances each, and there were sixteen more that were sung three times.

A few changes, not many, were made in the personnel of the company, but almost without exception the additions proved their right to be present. Three were sopranos, Hallie Stiles from the Opera-Comique of Paris, Kathleen Kersting after an experience in many theaters of Italy and Germany, and Thelma Votipka from the American Opera company. Two were tenors, Giovanni Manuritta, Italian, and Theodore Strack, German. One was baritone, Giovanni Inghilleri, Italian.

But the increased strength of the conducting staff was possibly the outstanding feature of the season. The addition of Emil Cooper, the return of Egon Pollak after thirteen years and of Frank St. Leger after two, plus the continuing presence of Giorgio Polacco as musical director and Roberto Moranzoni as senior conductor gave the company the finest staff of conductors that the Chicago company has ever known. This, too, is a state of affairs whose performance is in the highest degree desirable.

Makes Nation-Wide Trek.

The special trains of the company were scheduled to leave Chicago at two-thirty o'clock this morning for for Boston.

The company will stay in Boston two weeks and give sixteen performances, thence moving to Detroit for one week of eight performances. From Detroit, it goes to Columbus for three performances, thence to Louisville for four performances, Jackson, Miss., for two performances; New Orleans, La., for two performances; Memphis, Tenn., for three performances; Shreveport, La., for two performances; Dallas, Tex., for two performances; San Antonio, Tex., for three performances; Houston, Tex., for a Sunday matinée; Tulsa, Okla., for two performances; Wichita, Kas., for one performance; Lincoln, Neb., for one performance; Minneapolis for four performances; Des Moines, Ia., for one performance; Omaha, Neb., for two performances, and Kansas City, Mo., for three performances—a total of sixty. Approximately 7,500 miles will have been covered by the company when it returns to Chicago on the morning of March 31.

Music Notes.

Playing upon an instrument known as the kobza-bandoura, Vassyl Yemetz will make his first appearance in Chicago today with a recital of Russian, or more specifically Ukrainian, music at the Civic theater this afternoon. The kobza-bandoura is the national instrument of Ukrainia, and it is said that even now as in ancient times blind, wandering singers are found in the country playing the instruments and singing their ancient national songs.

It belongs to the guitar or lute family, is carved from a single piece of wood, usually willow or maple, and has from twenty to thirty-six strings. It has considerable historical connection with the Ukraine, not only among the soldiers but in the preservation of the past of the country at a time when the Russian government sought to forbid the teaching and printing of the language. After the world war the instrument again became popular and was taken up by skilled artists and made a means of higher art, irrespective of Ukrainian national boundaries.

Those striking examples of the art of the modern dance, Harald Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi, will appear again at Orchestra hall tomorrow night. Their program tells of several dances which they have not yet presented in Chicago. Friedrich Wilckens, who composes much of their music, will continue to be at the piano.

"JUNE MOON"

EDITH ARNOLD.

This is the little lady who inspires the Broadway song writer to sentimental rhymes in "June Moon," the comedy at the Selwyn. A New York siren steals her boy friend, but she wins him back in the end. Some of Ring Lardner's neatest writing goes into Miss Arnold's rôle.

audiences in 1911. One of the best grande dames of the American stage for about twenty years: there you have Miss Granville fairly well labeled.

The return of George M. Cohan, to be celebrated tonight at the Erlanger in his play called "Gambling," ought to be one of the liveliest events of the season. There was a time when Mr. Cohan was distinctly a "Chicago boy," in spite of the fact that his career was devoted to the romantization of the Broadway legend. But wherever there was a Rialto in America he was its white haired prodigy; and Chicago worshiped him with more than the fervor that it grants to any native son. He had a gang here—Randolph Streeters and that extinct species called "loop hounds" in the argot of Nineteen Ten. They were more enthusiastic in their adulation than Al Jolson's gang of first nighters. Whenever there was a Cohan opening they almost stood on their heads for joy.

No doubt they will turn out tonight, grayer and quieter than of yore, but still faithful to the lad who wrote the song about the Grand Old Flag. Maybe they will have reënforcements in the form of collegiate sons, trained in the Cohan tradition by fireside reminiscences during the seventeen years (not really?) of his absence. The occasion will be worth attending, and the audience will deserve the attention of a social observer. This première ought to add a footnote to the history of Chicago customs.

A checkup on the Cohanesque contributions to the theater reveals an amazing series of titles. This versatile and fecund fellow—author, actor, and manager—has written thirty-four plays and musical comedies (words and music). He has been a collaborator of thirteen other plays. He has dashed off eight vaudeville sketches (this when very young). He has written the lyrics and composed the tunes of 173 songs. For nearly thirty years he has been one of the spectacular figures of the American theater, and he is still young, in a manner of speaking—only 51. His hair is white now; maybe hard work turned him prematurely gray. ¶ They say, however, that George became hoary over night, from sorrow. When the White Sox of 1919, which he regarded as the best baseball team in history, turned Black, he reversed.

NEW IN CHICAGO

GEORGE M. COHAN'S company of "Gambling," will appear at the Erlanger theater for three weeks, beginning tonight. This is the play in which a dapper gambler risks his reputation and his gaming house in a hunt to track down the slayer of his foster daughter. The main point, however, is that Mr. Cohan is positively among those present. He hasn't been on a long theatrical tour for twenty years, and hasn't acted in Chicago for seventeen. His last appearance here according to veterans with long memories was in "Broadway Jones."

Others in "Gambling" are Mary Philips, Isabel Baring, Robert Middlemass, Harold Healy, Jack Leslie, Douglas McPherson and Kathleen Niday.

Mr. Cohan's tour will take him to Los Angeles. While there he will appear in "Gambling" at night and in the daytime direct and write a talking picture for Al Jolson.

THEATER GOSSIP

CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER will give her last recital at the Selwyn theater this afternoon. This is an extra performance, inspired by "requests" after her last Sunday's appearance. The daughter of the famous Otis Skinner, who seems to be building herself up into Ruth Draper's next-in-succession, will give two new sketches today: "Woman's Crowning Glory" and "An American Girl on the French Telephone." The program begins at 3 p. m.

The costuming of "The Matriarch," at the Princess theater under the sponsorship of the Dramatic league, represents the authentic styles of 1921, which, the dress experts say, are coming back into vogue. Mrs. Frank Vernon, wife of the play's stage director, describes her research as costume designer thus:

"I got a 1900 copy of Punch for the clothes of the prologue. The 1921 scenes of the three acts which follow were designed from the Maison Worth advertisements in the American magazines. I also write to that firm and commissioned it to re-create their old dress models according to their designs of the period."

Mrs. Vernon is herself an actress; she appeared in some of the Winter Garden revues as prima donna under the name of Virginia Brooks. She also has some writing for the stage to her credit; for example, she translated "Journey's End" into French for its Paris run, and translated the play now being acted in New York under the title "Red Rust" from the Russian. She speaks six languages.

"Salt Water" is coming to Chicago, but Frank Craven will not leave New York with it. Dan Jarrett, the play's author, may act the part—he has already done so in Mr. Craven's illness—or it may be taken over by Hugh O'Connell.

There was an actor who turned producer not so long ago and who managed, with such money as he could scrape up, to put on a revue. When it collapsed, not many days after its opening, the actor was gay and nonchalant about it. "It won't be long," he explained. "I'm just recasting my backers."

Jed Harris will proceed as soon as possible with the production of "Mister Gilhooley," a play based on Liam O'Flaherty's novel. For the title rôle Mr. Harris is importing Arthur Sinclair, the veteran comedian of the Abbey Theater company of Dublin. It is planned to stage the play in New York in March.

BACKGROUND FOR MARX BROTHERS

ELINORE HUNT

THE four famously funny Marx Brothers are almost the whole show in "Animal Crackers," at the Grand Opera house, but not quite. This is one of their comely assistants, who helps with the songs and decorates the scene. A smart-looking girl for a smart entertainment.

New in Manhattan

SIX premières are on this week's schedule for the first-nighters of Broadway and the side streets of the White Light area. They include a play of special interest to Chicago — Margaret Ayer Barnes' "Dishonored Lady." Here is the list of New York openings:

"REBOUND."—Tomorrow night at the Plymouth. A comedy by Donald Ogden Stewart which is said to be in the manner of the successful "Holiday" of last season. The play has been written for Hope Williams, who will be featured in a cast that will include Donn Cook, Walter Walker, Robert Williams, George MacQuarrie, Corinne Ross, Katherine Leslie, and the author.

"MANY A SLIP."—Tomorrow night at the Little. A comedy by Edith Fitzgerald and R. R. Riskin which at one time or another has borne several titles. Sylvia Sidney, Douglass Montgomery, Dorothy Sands and Maude Eburne will help interpret it.

"DISHONORED LADY."—Tuesday night at the Empire. The function of this play, of course, will be to restore the luminous Katharine Cornell to the New York stage. "Dishonored Lady" is the work of Margaret Ayer Barnes and Edward Sheldon, who dramatized "The Age of Innocence" for Miss Cornell's profitable uses last season. Among those giving aid and support will be Frances Lister, Paul Harvey, Fred L. Tiden, and Fortunio Bonanova.

"THE BOUNDARY LINE."—Wednesday night at the 48th Street. A play by Dana Burnet, who came onto the stage several seasons ago, and in collaboration with George Abbott emerged with the piece called "Four Walls." Among several personalities in the cast will be Otto Kruger, Winifred Lenihan, Katherine Alexander, Charles Trowbridge, and John T. Doyle.

"OUT OF A BLUE SKY."—Wednesday night at the Booth. A play adapted from the German by Leslie Howard which, summoning its actors out of the audience, is said to contain a number of theatrical surprises. Reginald Owen, Katherine Wilson, Warren William, Gregory Ratoff and Tammany Young are in it.

"EVEN IN EGYPT."—Friday night at the John Golden. A comedy by Bertram Bloch which deals, in the modern manner, with the Egypt of Biblical times. George Jessel will be the trumpeted performer. The surrounding company will hold Ferdinand Gottschalk, Ara Gerald, and Douglas R. Dumbrille.

MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL.—This afternoon at the Martin Beck. In addition to giving excerpts from various plays she has acted in, the charming veteran will repeat her discourse of "Beautiful Speech and the Art of Acting."

An American's Impressions of Life in England

He Searches Country for Average Britisher.

By Philip Kinsley.

life serious, but kindly and practical. He is, first of all, a Britisher. He is content to move with the mass, securing to himself a measure of comfort and holding stubbornly to his conception of personal rights.

He is not concerned deeply with the phenomena of American life and the bright picture of its industrial prosperity which is held before him. There are too many bizarre things about America to intrigue him beyond the vague interest which he gives to Italy or Russia or any other country. Back of him is this English countryside, where the duke of Sutherland sends over a haunch of venison to the ancient borough of Hanley every year, and the king and queen, who represent to him glory of race and power of country.

In his hallway hangs a portrait of the king and queen, with a note of thanks addressed to him from the king's secretary, for in one red letter year of his life he had a prominent part in receiving his majesty on the occasion of a royal visit to the potteries. The crown became to him something human and kind, and that was the end of any republican stirrings that his heart may ever have had.

The King a Fine Man.

His home is near a bit of parkland, where he can take out the dogs on a Sunday morning. His house is the usual two story brick, semi-detached, with a neat little garden, potted plants in the window, and clean lace curtains. There is a bathroom in it, for it is one of the new houses built by the corporation, with government subsidy. There is a coal fire in the front room, cheap but comfortable furniture, pictures of country life and china whatnots on mantel and table. His income is about $25 a week, whereas the average laborer in the district makes about $12.50 a week.

He has a little jobbing business and is secretary of a labor union organization. He began life in a factory at the age of 8 and had little time for regular school.

"The king," he said, "is a very fine man. When I met him in 1925 he talked about conditions here and was deeply interested. It was just like talking with any intelligent visitor.

"There is no trouble about the king, nor the aristocracy. They are our friends. Our opponents in social progress are the diehards of business, the big employers who insist on their regular dividends, even if they have to take it out in lower wages. They do not seem to realize that high purchasing power for labor is better for them. They will not change. So we have had to force them.

Illness Meant Destitution.

"I am for the program of the Labor government. Changes must come slowly in England. When I look back I see how great these changes have been in the last 30 years. Then even a little illness on the part of a wage earner meant destitution for a family. Old age was looked forward to with terror. There was nothing ahead for the poor but the workhouse. Now there is hope and new energy. We have had to fight for every improvement—pensions, increased education, health insurance, old age pension, unemployment pension. This is not the road to ruin as the old diehards say. It is the road to national health and safety. We can afford it. We must find ways of taking money for these things from those who can afford it."

Although retaining a connection with the Church of England he is not greatly interested in religion. Science interests him only as it applies to his work. The flower festival, which is an annual affair, is interesting, for out of this grow new designs for the decorations of vases. He watches the football contests closely, and occasionally wagers a few shillings on the results.

He lives comfortably and is satisfied with the conditions under which his social program is being worked out. While an individualist in strong degree, he is interested in the general welfare. He lives in a Labor, and what some consider a radical, center, but says this:

"If any one should get up in the public square and advocate revolution or great and sudden changes the people would laugh at him." Communism is making no headway here.

Dollar Goes Farther.

Our Englishman is a little weary of hearing how much more money the workers in America are making and comforts himself with the thought that a dollar here goes a much longer ways in purchasing power than it does in the United States. He buys a two pound loaf of bread for 8 cents, and it is better bread than the American bakeries supply. He pays 14 cents a quart for milk, 21 cents for 14 pounds of potatoes, 18 cents a pound for poor mutton cuts, 20 cents a pound for bacon, and 40 cents a pound for butter. A careful shopper may get along fairly well on a food bill of $6 or $7 a week for a small family. About $3.50 or $4 a week goes for rent. Clothes are cheaper here, good suits for $20. He does not own a car, for the tax is too high even though he could make the installment payments. He has, however, a fine bus and tram service, and can make his usual ride to work for two cents. Or he may ride to work on his bicycle. The roads to the factories are cluttered with bicycles every day. Even here the British worker shows his independence and conservatism, for he will not get out of the way for autos but forces them to take his pace or wait until he is ready to leave the road.

A business man of the town reports that he is harassed to death by the income tax and the dole tax, that the workers do not work hard enough and thousands do not care to work at all during the winter, preferring to go on the dole. In his little shop, where he had two or three employés, he has to give $5 a week to the government for the unemployment fund.

Represented by Peeress.

The good feeling between the aristocrats and the labor men is shown by the fact that Lady Cynthia Mosley is one of their parliamentary representatives from this district.

"Why?" I asked.

"Why not?" answered our ruling Englishman. "She is sympathetic with the movement and has subscribed to the program."

A viewpoint on this is given by Dr. Egon Wertheimer, German Socialist, in his recent book on the British Labor party. Of his attendance at a Labor party meeting he writes:

"Even the platform offered to the foreigner an astounding sight. Here sat—a thing undreamed of—a parson with his clerical collar among the speakers of the Socialist party. Suddenly there was a movement in the crowd and a young man, with the face of the ruling class in Great Britain, but the gait of a Douglas Fairbanks, thrust himself forward through the throng to the platform, followed by a lady in heavy costly furs. There stood Oswald Mosley, whose later ascent was to be one of the strangest phenomena of the working class movement of the world, a new recruit to the Socialist movement. He was introduced to the audience, and even at that time, I remember, the song 'For He's a Jolly Good Fellow,' greeted the young man from two thousand throats."

Proletarian Snobbery.

He continues with a discussion of what he calls "proletarian snobbery in England" as follows:

"The number of workers, organized in trade unions and owing allegiance to the Labor party, who feel flattered by the presence of members of the ruling class in their midst, must run into hundreds of thousands. A certain amount of moral responsibility for this lies at the door of the yellow illustrated press, circulating in millions among the working class, which has aroused this condition of mind by its insistence on interest in its columns of society gossip and twaddle. The spectacle presented by a queue, formed almost exclusively of working class women, braving wind and rain to catch a glimpse of bride and bridegroom as they emerge from the portals of a west end church and enhancing the glamour of a rather ridiculous parade of vanity, is among the most peculiar that ever strikes the foreigner. It must ever remain for him impossible to reconcile the great measure of self-respect possessed by the British working class, a self-respect which cannot fail to strike him, with this tenderly wistful interest in the vacuous doings of the upper ten thousand."

The sixth of Mr. Kinsley's articles will be published next Sunday.

How to Get Things Done

By Robert Benchley

Illustrations by John T. McCutcheon.

One Week in the Life of a Writing Man

Gradually the scheme begins to work.

A GREAT many people have come up to me and asked me how I manage to get so much work done and still keep looking so dissipated. My answer is, "Don't you wish you knew?" and a pretty good answer it is, too, when you consider that nine times out of ten I didn't hear the original question.

But the fact remains that hundreds of thousands of people throughout the country are wondering how I have time to do all my painting, engineering, writing, and philanthropic work when, according to the rotogravure sections and society notes, I spend all my time riding to hounds, going to fancy dress balls disguised as Louis XIV., or spelling out "Greetings to California" in formation with 3,000 Los Angeles school children. "All work and all play," they say.

The Principle of the Thing.

The secret of my incredible energy and efficiency in getting work done is a simple one. I have based it deliberately on a well known psychological principle and have refined it so that it is now almost too refined. I shall have to begin coarsening it up again pretty soon.

The psychological principle is this: Any one can do any amount of work, provided it isn't the work he is supposed to be doing at that moment.

Let us see how this works out in practice. Let us say that I have five things which have to be done before the end of the week: [1] A basketful of letters to be answered, some of them dating from October, 1928, [2] some book shelves to be put up and arranged with books, [3] a haircut to get, [4] a pile of scientific magazines to go through and clip [I am collecting all references to tropical fish that I can find, with the idea of some day buying myself one], and [5] an article to write for this paper.

Now, with these five tasks staring me in the face on Monday morning, it is little wonder that I go right back to bed as soon as I have had breakfast, in order to store up health and strength for the almost superhuman expenditure of energy that is to come. Mens sana in corpore sano is my motto, and not even to be funny am I going to make believe that I don't know what the Latin means. I feel that the least that I can do is to treat my body right when it has to supply fuel for an insatiable mind like mine.

As I lie in bed on Monday morning, storing up strength, I make out a schedule. "What do I have to do first?" I ask myself. Well, those letters really should be answered and the pile of scientific magazines should be clipped. And here is where my secret process comes in. Instead of putting them first on the list of things which have to be done, I put them last. I practice a little deception on myself and say: "First you must write that article for the newspaper." I even say this out loud [being careful that nobody hears me; otherwise they would keep me in bed] and try to fool myself into really believing that I must do the article that day and that the other things can wait.

All in a Day's Work.

I sometimes go so far in this self-deception as to make out a list in pencil, with "No. 1. Newspaper article" underlined in red. [The underlining in red is rather difficult, as there is never a red pencil on the table beside the bed, unless I have taken one to bed with me on Sunday night.]

A great many people have asked me.

Then, when everything is lined up, I bound out of bed and have lunch. I find that a good, heavy lunch, with some sort of glutinous dessert, is good preparation for the day's work, as it keeps one from getting nervous and excitable. We workers must keep cool and calm; otherwise we would just throw away our time in jumping about and fidgeting.

I then seat myself at my desk with my typewriter before me and sharpen five pencils. [The sharp pencils are for poking holes in the desk blotter, and a pencil has to be pretty sharp to do that. I find that I can't get more than six holes out of one pencil.] Following this I say to myself [again out loud, if it is practical]: "Now, old man, get at that article!"

Self-Education.

Gradually the scheme begins to work. My eye catches the pile of magazines, which I have artfully placed on a nearby table beforehand. I write my name and address at the top of the sheet of paper in the typewriter and then sink back. The magazines being within reach [also part of the plot], I look to see if any one is watching me and get one off the top of the pile. Hello, what's this! In the very first one is an article by Dr. William Beebe, illustrated by horrifying photographs! Pushing my chair away from my desk, I am soon hard at work clipping.

One of the interesting things about the Argyopelius or "Silver Hatchet" fish, I find, is that it has eyes in its wrists. I would have been sufficiently surprised just to find out that a fish had wrists, but to learn that it has eyes in them is a discovery so astounding that I am hardly able to cut out the picture. What a lot one learns simply by thumbing through the illustrated weeklies! It is hard work, though, and many a weaker spirit would give it up half done, but when there is something else of "more importance" to be finished [you see, I still keep up the deception, letting myself go on thinking that the newspaper article is of more importance], no work is too hard or too onerous to keep one busy.

The Perfect Correspondent.

Thus, before the afternoon is half over, I have gone through the scientific magazines and have a neat pile of clippings [including one of a Viper Fish which I wish you could see. You would die laughing]. Then it is back to the grind of the newspaper article.

This time I get as far as the title, which I write down with considerable satisfaction until I find that I have misspelled one word terribly, so that the whole sheet of paper has to come out and a fresh one be inserted. As I am doing this, my eye catches the basket of letters.

Now, if there is one thing that I hate to do [and there is, you may be sure], it is to write letters. But somehow, with the magazine article before me waiting to be done, I am seized with an epistolary fervor which amounts to a craving, and I slyly sneak the first of the unanswered letters out of the basket. I figure out in my mind that I will get more into the swing of writing the article if I practice a little on a few letters.

Conscience Salve.

This first one, anyway, I really must answer. True, it is from a friend in Antwerp, asking me to look him up when I am in Europe in the summer of 1929, so he can't actually be watching the incoming boats for an answer, but I owe something to politeness after all. So instead of putting a fresh sheet of copy paper into the typewriter, I slip in one of my handsome bits of personal stationery and dash off a note to my friend in Antwerp. Then, being well in the letter writing mood, I clean up the entire batch. I feel a little guilty about the article, but the pile of freshly stamped envelopes and the neat bundle of clippings on tropical fish do much to salve my conscience. Tomorrow I will do the article, and no fooling this time, either.

When tomorrow comes I am up with one of the older and more sluggish larks. A fresh sheet of copy paper in the machine, and my name and address neatly printed at the top, and all before 11 a. m.! "A human dynamo" is the name I think up for myself. I have decided to write something about snake charming, and am already more than satisfied with the title, "These Snake Charming People." But, in order to write about snake charming one has to know a little about its history, and where should one go to find history but to a book? Maybe in that pile of books in the corner is one on snake charming! Nobody could point the finger of scorn at me if I went over to those books for the avowed purpose of research work for the matter at hand. No writer could be supposed to carry all that information in his head.

Just Another Day.

So, with a perfectly clear conscience, I leave my desk for a few minutes and begin glancing over the titles of the books. Of course, it is difficult to find any book, much less one on snake charming, in a pile which has been standing in the corner for weeks. What really is needed is for them to be on a shelf, where their titles will be visible at a glance. And there is the shelf, standing beside the pile of books! It seems almost like a divine command written in the sky: "If you want to finish that article first put up the shelf and arrange the books on it!" Nothing could be clearer or more logical.

As I lie in bed I make out a schedule.

In order to put up the shelf the laws of physics have decreed that there must be nails, a hammer, and some sort of brackets to hold it up on the wall. You can't just wet a shelf with your tongue and stick it up. And, as there are no nails or brackets in the house [or, if there are, they are probably hidden somewhere], the next thing to do is put on my hat and go out to buy them. Much as it disturbs me to put off the actual start of the article, I feel that I am doing only what is in the line of duty to put on my hat and go out to buy nails and brackets. And, as I put on my hat, I realize to my chagrin that I need a haircut badly. I can kill two birds with one stone, or at least with two, and stop in at the barber's on the way back. I will feel all the more like writing after a turn in the fresh air. Any doctor would tell me that.

Achievement.

So in a few hours I return, spick and span and smelling of lilac, bearing nails, brackets, the evening papers, and some crackers and peanut butter. Then it's ho! for a quick smack and a glance through the evening papers [there might be something in them which would alter what I was going to write about snake charming], and in no time at all the shelf is up, slightly crooked, but up, and the books are arranged in a neat row in alphabetical order and all ready for almost instantaneous reference.

There does not happen to be one on snake charming among them, but there is an interesting one containing some Hogarth prints and one which will bear even closer inspection, dealing with the growth of the motion picture, illustrated with "stills" from famous productions. A really remarkable industry, the motion pictures. I might want to write an article on it some time. Not today, probably, for it is 6 o'clock and there is still the one on snake charming to finish up first. Tomorrow morning sharp. Yes, sir!

Four Out of Five.

And so, you see, in two days I have done four of the things I had to do, simply by making believe that it was the fifth that I must do. And the next day I fix up something else, like taking down the book shelf and putting it somewhere else, that I have to do, and then I get the fifth one done.

The only trouble is that, at this rate, I will soon run out of things to do and will be forced to get at that newspaper article the first thing Monday morning.

Makes Bridal Pairs Seal Pact with Kiss

BELFAST.—(AP)—The Rev. John McCaffrey, a Belfast Methodist minister, insists that all bridal couples in his church kiss immediately after the ceremony.

"I think it is a very good and proper way to start married life," Rev. Mr. Caffrey explained. "I may add that couples carry out my behest cheerfully, and I have never known a refusal."

AUCKLAND.—(AP)—Plans for air line communication between the north and south islands of New Zealand are being made by the air force. A modern seaplane base is being built by the government near Auckland from which flying boats will operate between the islands.

A Screen Lover with a Sense of Humor

By Rosalind Shaffer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 1.—[Special Correspondence.]—Ronald Colman is perhaps the only great lover on the screen with a real, not cultivated, sense of humor. The screen public met this for the first time in "Bulldog Drummond," his first talking picture, and it is noteworthy in his "Condemned," as well.

When interviewed at the studio this week, where he is busy getting tailored and rehearsed for his next picture, "Raffles," Colman blamed it on talking pictures. He believes dialogue is making a real, old fashioned, romantic love scene entirely passé.

"I believe the sheik sort of thing is definitely dead," said Colman. "In silent pictures a love scene was, of course, without anything but an occasional title. It was straight pantomime. Every one in the audience supplied his or her own words and to each one the words were different. It was satisfying.

"Now, with dialogue it is difficult to supply conversation in a love scene that will satisfy everybody. The result is that some of the screen's great lovers have been greeted by guffaws in their talking love scenes.

"A whole new craft will have to be evolved to write successful dialogue for talking pictures. Stage dialogue will not do. People demand such realism in pictures that stage lines are not in conformity with it. On the stage the audience accepts a back drop with a castle painted on it. In films, you must have the castle. The stage has the frankly artificial frame of the footlights and the scenery. A certain amount of artificiality is part of the theatrical effect. But in films you must have realism and writing dialogue that sounds real is something of a task."

Hollywood has changed with the times. Two years ago a casting director would have gone crazy trying to fill an order for fifty girls with long hair and southern accents, but they did it over at Paramount for Gary Cooper's latest picture, "Only the Brave." Incidentally, Gary has been cheering Lupe Velez as best he might through a convalescence. The little Mexican charmer is not very strong and overworking and fatiguing hours combined to confine her to her home for a few days.

Mr. Talkie Has Healthy Baby Brother Now

His Name's Television; He's Coming Along.

By Tom Pettey.

are valuable. Now they are buying these rights to every story they accept for talking pictures. Universal and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have inserted the new clause in their contracts and last week Tiffany announced that in all contracts it is retaining the rights of television. Tiffany's name was also signed to this rather out of the ordinary statement: "If the truth could be told at this time as to what will be developed in television within the next year it would astound the world."

Radio Corporation of America photophone executives are watching daily tests being conducted here between a radio station and their reception room. They are enthusiastic over improvements made in television since Christmas.

Your eastern observer attended a commercial television demonstration given by D. W. May, Inc., in Newark, N. J. It was to advertise the first "home television machine," which the host announced could now be bought for "less than $100."

The pictures were not very clear, but the talking was good. The television machine can be attached to any radio, but the radio must tune down below 180 meters. At the demonstration the pictures came through the air from Jersey City and were flashed on a small screen set in a synchronized radio. The pictures could be seen at times, but more often the screen looked like a pinwheel. Your observer did not buy one, as they have not yet been put on an installment plan.

Talkie Studios Busy.

When Maurice Chevalier returns from his "master of ceremonies" visit to San Francisco late in February he will begin work at once on his next film, "Too Much Luck," which, like his others, will be made at Paramount's Long Island studio. Stuart Erwin and Helen Kane now are on active duty at the above mentioned studio in the work preparatory to the filming of "Dangerous Nan McGrew."

Warner Brothers' Vitaphone studio in Brooklyn still is turning out short sketches in wholesale quantities. The new sound stage has been opened in the Flatbush plant and workmen and landscapers are puttering around the grounds making things pretty for the tra-la-la-la folks from Broadway and the Metropolitan Opera house who act over there.

A lady film star of the silent days came to town the other day and called on a vaudeville booking agent. The booking gentleman was awfully sorry and everything and after the silent star had faded out shook his head sadly.

"Wired and found wanting," he commented, thinking of these days of sound and fury.

"Yeah, wired and fired," added a none too innocent bystander.

Gleanings of the Films.

Rudy Vallee is in Brooklyn and all is well on the radio. Clara Bow, who acts in the movies, is in town. Harry Richman, who acts anywhere, is acting as Clara's beau. Getting married? Maybe. There is a new producing company in town, Judea Pictures corporation. Moe Goldman is general manager and the company expects to begin operations by making four two-reeler all-talking pictures in the Jewish language. "Cloaks and Suits" will be the first.

When Eddie Cantor makes "Whoopee" for Sam Goldwyn out at Hollywood he will keep right on taking the bows he is accustomed to in the stage presentation. It is a Goldwyn idea and Eddie's encores will be carried on an extra projecting machine. If the audience claps loud enough, Eddie will come back. This talkie business is getting spooky.

John D. Rockefeller Sr., the oil and dime man, is getting to be a regular talkie star. He has made his second appearance at the News Reel theater in two weeks. Recently, you remember, he sat on the sun porch of his Florida home and talked to his Standard Oil boys. Now he is back again in a shot that some of the Hollywood stars leave to their doubles. Mr. Rockefeller climbs into a plane and is "taxied" around the flying field.

The oil man apparently does not agree with the aviators who insist you cannot get hurt in the air and advise height for safety. Mr. Rockefeller's plane did not leave the ground.

cross-legged around the edge of the dancing floor, risking kicks in the nose from the flying and slipping feet of the dancers. There were however, no casualties.

Maurice Chevalier sang his character songs, with hats [he does as much with hats as Ruth Draper does with shawls], and about midnight Jack Donohue came down from "Sons o' Guns" and Irene Franklin [substituting for Irene Bordoni, whose night club job kept her away] came from "Sweet Adeline." They have all, being popular, been applauded more riotously in larger halls, but I'll wager they never heard a greater racket than in salon mixte.

There were things to eat after that but nothing to drink. The Frenchmen may not believe in prohibition, but while their boats are in American ports they do as aliens do—sneak their drinks. And there were crowds of prohibition officers watching this party, or pretending to. Which was as bad.

It was a grand party. I've been told the women's gowns were simply gorgeous and that if there were 500 of them, 499 were brand new. The other one was worn by a certain newspaper correspondent's wife. He has not been any too popular at home since then, I understand. Understand? As if I didn't know!

Jewish Tragedian Arrives.

The chief theater event last week signalized the arrival of the Jewish tradegian, Maurice Moscovitch, with the play "Josef Suss." Moscovitch is new to English speaking New York, but spent many years of his youth here on the east side and in the Jewish theaters twenty and thirty years ago.

At that time his success was so satisfying to him that he would not take the trouble to learn English. Once, he relates, he had a single line to read in English and the thought of it gave him an attack of chills nightly.

Leaving America, Moscovitch went to England and played in London's one Yiddish theater for another stretch of years. Then his advisers insisted that he should learn the rôle of Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice," which he did. Learned the whole play in English, in fact. When he played Shylock on the other side he was so successful that the revival ran for eleven months. After that he bought the foreign rights to Leo Dietrichstein's "The Great Lover," and played that for two years.

Moscovitch is that robust type of actor we have seen little of since the passing of the standard and the classic repertories. Big of frame, large featured, of sonorous voice, he plays with that quiet dignity and nice sense of timing the most gifted of actors acquire by instinct. And then, coming into a big emotional scene, he tears the heart out of it, and out of his more sympathetic auditors at the same time.

Looks Like a Comedian.

Without whiskers or other effective masking, the Moscovitch features suggest the comedian (he looks much like the late Louis Harrison) rather than the tragedian, and he is therefore handicapped to me in the performance of this "Josef Suss," which has been cut by Ashley Dukes from Leon Feuchtwanger's novel "Power," and calls for a romantic figure.

The story is of that romantic and ambitious Jew who gained power craftily and successfuly in the duchy of Württemberg in the eighteenth century. Josef Suss Oppenheimer befriended Karl Alexander, duke of Württemberg and thus became his chief of financial advisers. He helped him also in the conduct of his social campaign and was instrumental in leading to his chambers the fair daughter of the Councillor Weissensee.

Later the councillor returned the compliment by guiding the amorous duke to the forest castle in which Jew Suss had hidden his own daughter, the beautiful Naemi, and when she fell to her death from the battlements in trying to avoid the duke, her father registered with his God a vow of revenge that later was consummated in an uprising of the people against the duke. Gratefully then the avenged Jew went to his own death as traitor to his benefactor.

The Moscovitch production is English and his company also. Its chief player is a fine actor, Malcolm Keen, and its most decorative lady member a blonde ingénue named Janet Morrison. Charles Dillingham is the local sponsor, but the real importers are the Australian firm of J. C. Williamson, Ltd.

Rudy Vallee Finds a Gold Mine.

Speaking a moment ago of Irene Bordoni and the night club job which prevented her being on the steamship Paris program, I am reminded of a story I heard of the currently popular Rudy Vallee and his enterprises.

This young man, an obscure tooter of the saxophone not long ago (you know the lady's definition of a gentleman as one who can play the saxophone but doesn't) this Rudy Vallee, they tell me, is now collecting from his various jobs the tidy sum of $12,000 weekly.

Five thousand of this sum comes from whichever of the Paramount theaters he happens to be playing in, $3,000 from the Villa Vallee, to which he takes himself following his theater appearances; $2,000 from a club in Greenwich Village at which he plays during the dinner hour and the other $2,000 from the sale of records. Probably no more than half of it goes to pay his three bands.

In fact, if what I hear is true, the night club racket, as the boys speak of it, is now by far the most lucrative in town. Miss Bordoni is paid something like $2,000 a week for her few hours' work and Beatrice Lillie gets $3,500 for entertaining a few hundred restless rich ones nightly.

These places get their part back by charging $5 for a chair, a place at table, a napkin, and a glass of water and by boosting the price of scrambled eggs whenever the program warrants it.

"NINA ROSA"

BERNA DEANE.

This singing girl carries the title rôle and heroine's honors of "Nina Rosa," the operetta at the Great Northern. She plays a Peruvian senorita who loves a gringo, but dissembles (to the extent of castigating him with a bull whip) because she fears the wrath of a native son. Miss Deane is a pleasant addition to the comic opera sopranos.

LOVE SCENES should be realistic in "Smooth As Satin"! Because, you see, Ben Lyon, who is scheduled to whisper soft nothings and somethings into Bebe Daniels' ear, is her honest-to-goodness fiancé in real life. This will be the first screen appearance of the two together. They were supposed to play opposite each other in "Love Comes Along," but at the last minute Mr. Lyon was summoned to another studio for retakes. "Smooth As Satin" is a screenization of Bayard Veiller's stage play, "The Chatterbox," in which Fay Bainter starred, several years ago.

See you tomorrow.

The most beautiful movie I have seen for some time was "Coquette." I consider it so, not only because of Mary Pickford's exquisite impersonation of the lovable heroine, but also because of the naturalness of its plot and setting.

Mary Pickford's southern accent was almost perfect. Her acting in the scene where she realizes that her lover is dead brought tears to every eye in the audience. John Mack Brown was so "ado'able" that you couldn't wonder at his sweetheart's love for him. The father's willingness to pay his debt to the state was gloriously typical of the southern gentleman.

I have lived in the south and learned to love it. Never has a picture so vividly brought back to me the atmosphere of the romantic south with its stately white homes, dreaming in the sunlight, and the evening air heavy with scent of the magnolia, and the lazy crooning of some darky singing to his love. R. K.

The Best of All Movies.

It was my good fortune, this summer, to attend the second performance of Cecil B. De Mille's "Dynamite." The unusualness of the plot is enough to make it more interesting than any other movie.

In one "talkie," you are lifted into wealthy society, as well as shown the fifth level of a coal mine. The change that takes place in Roger Towne and Cynthia Crothers, portrayed by Conrad Nagel and Kay Johnson, is most interesting.

Imagine two women bargaining for a husband, and a prison marriage, and you might get an idea of what "Dynamite" is about. Added to the wonderful acting, and unusual plot, is the beautiful theme song, "How Am I to Know?" Of all movies, to me, this is the best. H. B.

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

IN NEW YORK.

"JEW SUSS" arrived in New York, a dramatization of the novel by Lion Feuchtwanger which caused such a tempest a year or so ago when it was published in America under the title "Power." "Jew Suss" was its English name and as a drama it has returned to that label.

"Power" was, as you remember, a tremendously impressive book, oppressive, some thought it depressive, but none denied its expressiveness of its subject.

The play itself and the play in book form had a simultaneous debut.

"Children of Darkness" is the title Edwin Justus Mayer gave to his dramatic version of "The History of Jonathan Wild, the Great," one of the not so well known works of Mr. Henry Fielding, who in the early middle of the eighteenth century satirized his fellow men in a fashion so novel to them that his satires bore the label "novel." That isn't the explanation of the original use of the word novel to describe a form of literary work, probably, but certainly Fielding was among the first to use the "novel" form.

His first novel was "The Adventures of Joseph Andrews," begun as a satire of Richardson's virtuous "Amelia." It became, however, a genuine picture of life. "The History of Jonathan Wild, the Great" followed "Joseph Andrews" [1743] and preceded his greatest work, "The History of Tom Jones," by six years.

Fielding began writing at the age of 21. Until he was 35 he wrote nothing but plays. "Jonathan Wild" is the story of a dissolute rake, his "greatness" being measured by his success in crime and wickedness. Mr. Mayer's play was published in book form in May, if you want to read the script. Its production points the way to reading in that amusing eighteenth century period.

PUBLISHED.

"The Revolt of the Actors," by Alfred Harding [Morrow], is the story of the fight which the Actors' Equity association put up against the producers—the story of a fight by the strong for the weak. The individuals who for themselves gained nothing (for they needed nothing) gained for their fellow men standard contracts, decent dressing rooms, fair working conditions, no extra performances without pay, transportation from New York to New York for road companies—"Equity shop." Mr. Harding has made it the story not only of the accomplishments of the Equity but the human stories of the leaders in the revolt.

IN LONDON.

Rumor—from many sources—says that R. C. Sherriff is to be knighted by King George for his influence toward world peace in "Journey's End." A year ago Mr. Sherriff was an insurance clerk who was afraid to take more than the six weeks allotted holiday from his office when he came to New York to see the American premiere of his play. He is turning the play into a novel with the help of Vernon Bartlett.

Hugh Walpole has gone in for the drama. His first play is called "The Young Huntress" and will be produced in London soon.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

More Praise for Ronald.

To the one who failed me: "I didn't laugh or cry or shout. Or give a hang how the thing turned out." Mae Tinée—how could you! You've failed me. After the many wonderful things you said about our Ronald in "The Rescue" and in "Bull Dog Drummond" you came along and said that in "Condemned," the most wonderful, interesting, gripping melodrama, I have ever seen, that he didn't play his rôle with "fervor or sympathy" . . . Mae Tinée . . . how could you?

I thought that he played his rôle with true understanding and to the best of any actor's ability. Who could have played it better? [Don't mention John Gilbert's name in the same sentence with our Ronald.] I thought you were a Colman fan, and now even if you didn't like the picture—can't you say one kind word for him in "Condemned?"

Please, Mae Tinée, before my heart is broken—just say it once—that he is wonderful! RONNIE'S ADMIRER.

Editor's note: YOU'RE a wonderful friend to have!

Gives One a Nightmare.

To the Editor: The other day I witnessed the presentation of the "Passion of Joan of Arc." I never saw a moving picture so horrid and so repelling. It does not possess one single redeeming feature from beginning to end—nothing uplifting, nothing educational.

It is not even historically correct. It presents only the gruesome part, grossly exaggerated. It seems to have been calculated to give one a nightmare, which it surely does. N. D. P.

Chicagoans Seen During a Gay Social Season

DOROTHY MARSHALL and CAROLYN CROSSET.

JEAN WILHELM and SEABORN WHATLEY.

CHICAGOANS of various ages who were present at parties given during the last part of the season that ended unofficially this week with the close of the Civic Opera include Mrs. William H. Mitchell, who wore white satin with a girdle of crystal at one of the large balls; Mrs. Arthur D. Bissell, and Miss Jane McKinney, one of the debutantes. Jean Wilhelm, Dorothy Marshall, Carolyn Crossett, and Seaborn Whatley are members of the sub-debutante crowd that attends a series of junior subscription dances at the Fortnightly.

Society Knows No Geographical Boundaries on Palm Beach Sands

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Never before have Chicagoans played such a large and important part in Palm Beach life. All through this season the westerners have run the easterners a close race, both in the number and importance of their entertainments.

Were it not for the fact that society knows no geographic boundaries and that the various eastern and western groups intermingle freely, one would be tempted to believe that the men and women of the prairies might before many seasons sweep the effete easterners from their predominating position here.

There is now not a hotel, club, or café, smart or not so smart that does not boast a sizable and active group of the Illinois folk, and it is difficult to find any happening here of any kind in which some of their names do not figure.

McKinlocks Are Hosts.

This week saw more than a score of large functions given by Chicagoans.

The George A. McKinlocks alone were hosts on several different occasions. They entertained at a small dinner at their home and at several luncheons, one at the Bath and Tennis club in honor of Mrs. Conde Nast of New York, and were kept busy with invitations to others, including the brilliant tea and musical given by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Seligman. They plan more entertaining this coming week in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Thayer, their guests from Southboro, Mass. But civic affairs are laying a large claim to their attention.

Mr. McKinlock has been made vice president of the Palm Beach Taxpayers association, a development of a fight on the part of wealthy islanders to bring about the abandonment of a strip of the North Ocean boulevard. Erosion of that part of the beach gave wealthy ocean front home owners a good talking point in their efforts to exclude the public from that part of the ocean front, and such figures as Mr. Stotesbury, J. Leonard Replogle, and John Shepard, society's mayor elect, have been trying to get the county commission to see the light.

Mrs. McKinlock has been honored by a less conspicuous but just as important office, that of being one of the five members of the town planning commission, a body pledged to the systematic beautification of the island. Another honor and one unexpected by Mrs. McKinlock came to her during the week in her election to the American Civic association, in recognition of her valuable services in town planning here through the Garden club of Palm Beach, of which she is president.

Dinners and Luncheons.

Mrs. Vincent Bendix, Mrs. Frank O. Butler, and Mrs. O. N. Tevander have entertained extensively in the last few days and nights. Mrs. Bendix gave two parties in honor of her sister, Miss Letitia Channon and Mrs. Roy E. Bard, and Mr. Bard, her house guests, and also entertained a party at one of the famous beef steak dinners, features of the weekly ladies' nights at the Oasis club.

Mrs. Tevander had many of the Chicago colony as guests at a party for Mrs. Roy Sharp, house guest of Mrs. Charles H. Hall, and also presided at a luncheon for twenty at the Breakers. Mrs. Butler gave a large luncheon at the Everglades club for Mrs. Julius P. Meyer. And one of the largest was enjoyed by forty guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Urion Jr.

Mrs. John R. Thompson arrived from Chicago just in time to attend the house warming held at the home of her son-in-law, H. L. Thomas, which brought together 200 guests. She is here for a short visit before leaving on a Mediterranean cruise.

Gotham Sighs Regrets as Musicales End

By Nancy Randolph.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—[Special.]—One of the surest signs of the passing season is the fact that this week saw the last of the Albert Morris Bagby musicales. Until next winter the Astor ballroom will pine for the refreshing presence of the dapper Albert Morris and the truly magnificent gatherings that he alone seems able to bring forth.

Not only was Albert Morris' last songfest of the winter a great affair socially, but he achieved the almost impossible by getting Mme. Schumann-Heink to make one of her rare appearances. It was, you may be sure, quite an old home week affair, with grandmotherly Schumann-Heink greeting matrons she has known for more years than anyone is willing to admit.

Besides Mme. Schumann-Heink, Frances Alda, and Albert Spalding played, after which the notables went out into unaccustomed Broadway and gave the few theatrical folks who were up the chance to see what society looks like in broad daylight.

The Old Guard Out.

Among those present were Princess De La Tour d'Auvergne, Mrs. Alexander Biddle, Mrs. Rutherfurd Stuyvesant, Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, Mrs. Philip Rhinelander II., Mrs. Charles H. Scherrill, Mrs. Charles D Dickey, Mrs. Adolf J. Pavenstedt, Mrs. Lewis B. Gawtry, Mrs. Henry Fairfield Osborn, Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, Mrs. Morris De Peyster, Adele Kneeland, Louise Scott, Louise Iselin, Mrs. Myron C. Taylor, Mrs. Ansel Phelps, Mrs. Richard Stevens, and Mrs. Moses Taylor Campbell.

Also Mrs. Finley Thomas, Mrs. Lewis Gouveneur Morris, Mrs Moses Taylor Pyne, Mrs. Morin S. Hare, Mrs. Edwin Gould, Mrs. Philip A. S. Franklin, Mrs. Robert E. Tod, Annie Burr Jennings, Mrs. Marius De Brabant, Mrs. Robert Tittle McKee, Mrs. Rufus King, Mrs. William M. V. Hoffman, Mrs. Walter B. James, Mrs. Edward Stettinius, Mrs. Charles E. F. McCann, Mrs. Paul D. Cravath, and Mrs. Alison Wright Post.

New York-Chicago Alliance.

It isn't often that I have a chance to record the alliance of Chicago and New York men and maids. However, it was this week that saw the nuptials of Mrs. Elliot Cowdin Bacon of New York and your Paul E. Gardner.

Mrs. Bacon, of course, is frightfully well known here, though Mr. Gardner is an unknown quantity. As the widow of Elliot Bacon, the one time Hope Norman is scarcely more noted in society than for her parents, the Guy Normans, who were ever among the leaders at Newport, their all year home.

The wedding of Hope and Elliot Bacon in '15 was a swagger affair and Hope's position as daughter-in-law of Mrs. Robert Bacon was a most enviable one. She has loads of money and, since the death of the late Mr. Bacon, has been living quietly with her four children in a town apartment and at her estate at Westbury, L. I.

Hope Bacon that was, met Mr. Gardner during a visit to Chicago, and their bethrothal followed.

Notables See Newport Memorial Dedicated

NEWPORT, R. I., Feb. 1.—[Special Correspondence.]—An event of the week was the dedication here on Wednesday of the new home of the Seamen's Church institute. The building is the joint gift of the Misses Maude and Edith Wetmore in honor of their parents, the late Senator and Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore. Many notables were present for the exercises.

End of Opera Tolls Knell for Social Season

Chicagoans Obey Impulse to Wander Afar.

By Mme. X.

LAST evening tolled the knell of departing grand opera and with it the end of Chicago's social season for the winter of 1929-'30. It has been a brilliant thirteen weeks, both because of the opening of the splendid new opera house and by reason of the excellence of the presentations. The company gathered together this year was of a high class and one with a wide horizon, musically. Our German opera, for one thing, has been peculiarly good, Wagner's great works having been presented in such a manner as even the most caviling Teuton would approve. The two great artists, Mesdames Leider and Olszewska, have been largely responsible for this.

Several personalities in the opera company stand out from the rest because of the social recognition accorded them by our society leaders. Chief among these were Maestro Polacco, and M. and Mme. Vanni-Marcoux, who were very popular guests at luncheons and dinners. Another charming singer who made many friends here and was much wined and dined was Mme. Hallie Stiles, an American soprano who has made her way entirely by her own efforts and merits.

Popular in Paris.

Before coming here she was the leading soprano at the Opera Comique in Paris, where the musical standard is high. Although she made her fame there in such works as "Manon," "Louise" and "Boheme," in all of which she was, if rumor be true, considered to be remarkably effective and delightful, the powers that be here put her in such rôles as Elsa, in "Lohengrin," and similar exacting parts. As Micaela, in "Carmen," last Friday, however, she was given an opportunity to give her fine voice its great opportunity. Micaela's song in the third act is considered by many one of the most beautiful in a soprano's repertoire.

This p.p.p. goes to press too early for it to record her work in this, but we hope that it was sufficiently successful to insure her a return to our Civic opera next season, not only for cause she is so generally liked for herself, but because it will further the growing movement to encourage American singers in American grand opera.

She sings tonight at a musical supper Mrs. Leverett Thompson is giving at the Arts club.

Friends of Opera Entertained.

Quite the most beautiful musical and social event here in the last three months was the musical which, at the instigation of its presiding genius, Samuel Insull, the Chicago Civic Opera company gave last Monday for the Friends of Opera at the Palmer house in recognition of its assistance in the sale of opera boxes and in other ways. This association is unique in its construction and aims. There is no other quite like it anywhere else in the world. Besides undertaking the sale of boxes and seats and also the securing of guarantors, it uses its funds to buy tickets for musical students, for the blind and for officers of the army and navy.

The exquisite pleasure which these three sets of opera goers get can only be adequately appreciated by reading the letters of gratitude received from them by the committees in charge of this work. Mrs. Arthur Small told me of such expressions from army officers as open the eyes to an understanding of the lives of self denial led by this important class of citizens.

One officer wrote that in six years spent in service in New York, neither he nor his wife nor his three daughters had ever had a chance to attend the opera, yet all five are musical, each playing some instrument, and the opportunity given them here had meant more than any other privilege that had come to them.

An officer's pay is not such as to make the purchase of tickets for operas or concerts possible. This is only one of innumerable cases.

Social Leaders Depart.

But now the opera season of 1929-'30 is over. The company concluded its thirteen weeks here last evening and departs today for Boston, where it has a four weeks' engagement. The lights of Chicago's social season are going out, its members are dispersing, and "Low on the sands and loud on the stones the last wheel echoes away." Our conspicuous social leaders are scattering to the four winds, especially to those breezes that blow in the west and in the south. Europe lures many, but Americans are tending more and more to find their pleasure and comfort in their own country.

Our hotels and traveling arrangements are improving so fast that there is less and less inclination to seek diversion on the other side of the water. For one thing, to mention but one phase of the subject, we Americans are becoming so accustomed to the higher standard that prevails here for cleanliness and sanitation, especially in the matter of pasteurizing milk and protecting the public from unwholesome supplies, that we begin to fear the less careful supervision of these on the other side of the big pond.

In all France there is said to be but one institution that pasteurizes the milk supply, and that though the mere name for the process is derived from that of the famous French doctor, Pasteur. No continental country makes a specialty of this.

Medical science in this country has in recent years put so many people on diets, regimens of food in which milk is an important factor, that to be deprived of ample supplies of pure lacteal fluid is a distinct hardship. This, of course, is not a sufficient reason for the healthy and well to refrain from going abroad, but is one of the compelling facts that keep many Americans at home. We have not in this country the picturesque, historic backgrounds that make every turn fascinating over there; we lack that air of cosmopolitanism that appeals to many; we have some needless laws that irk millions of us; and it costs much more to live here than it does there, or at least so many people say. For myself, I think that the difference in cost is chiefly due to the fact that my country people are willing to live over there under conditions which they would not consider for a moment here.

Factors that Appeal.

To offset these seeming European advantages we have here certain things that make an increasing appeal to us. We have thousands of miles of splendid, dustless roads. Europe has some fine roadways, but they are apt to be narrow and dusty, O very dusty! We have certain household arrangements such as an abundance of bathrooms, plenty of electric light, telephones, and so forth, that combine to make us most comfortable. Then, there is one fact not generally recognized by many: here we are a part of the structure of the country; these are our roads, our hotels, our homes, our customs, and our manners. Over there we are merely so many strange insects, crawling over the surface of life. We have no real cause for existence except as bringers of much needed money. They don't like us over there; they don't understand us; they just endure us.

Now that our own country is opening up so many attractive places for recreation and pleasure there is less and less reason for our going abroad. With the entire south from northern

Dr. and Mrs. George Mader of 7704 Crandon avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Ivadell Bernice, to Charles W. Rea, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Rea of 7730 Yates avenue.

MISS MARY L. MALZACHER.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Malzacher of 6244 North Campbell avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Louise, to John McCann, son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. McCann of 4852 North Keeler avenue. The wedding will take place in June.

Florida 'way round the seacoast to Texas, and that long and beautiful sea line on the Pacific ocean from Monterey to the Mexican border, not to mention all those sunny resorts in Arizona, New Mexico, etc., all bidding us to visit them, why should Americans travel so far for relaxation and recreation?

I know that there are many who will consider these remarks as indicating a narrow, provincial, unintelligent point of view. They will say I do not give due weight to the enlarged culture that is the result of a tour of Europe. I am not speaking to those who have never been abroad. I think that a European trip is a necessity to those who want to be really cosmopolitan and understanding of matters outside of this country. It should be part of the education of the young, before they settle down to life in this country, but for those who go year after year simply from habit or because they think they get more for their money there, it is getting less and less worth while. I know Europe pretty well from having spent much of my life there for some fifteen or more years. I learned several languages there sufficiently well to understand what the opera singers here are saying when they sing in Italian, French, or German, which is certainly an advantage. But beyond that I consider those years of my life rather wasted.

Apropos of understanding these vocal artists when they sing in these foreign tongues, I find it difficult to understand the same artists when they sing in English, that is when they are of foreign birth. Opera in English should be sung by English speaking people, not by Italians, French, or Germans. But that is merely an aside.

Americans Love to Roam.

However, many of our Chicago fellow citizens have got the Europe habit too deeply inset in their habits of mind to forego their annual hegira. Chicago, its outlets, and opportunities do not satisfy them, nor do they find in this country sufficient change of scene and atmosphere to satisfy that restlessness which seems the inevitable concomitant of wealth with us Americans. Especially are American women possessed with this passionate desire to roam. You find them wherever you go abroad—on the tops of the highest mountains; in the depths of the deepest caves; in the most remote regions where "the hand of man has hardly set foot"; but especially where the conglomerate hordes of foreigners of all nations delight to congregate are our fellow countrywomen to be found looking on at the great spectacle of life.

They are mostly widows of those hardworking creatures, American business men, whose years of toil seem to have been chiefly productive in providing the means of travel to their families after they, the A. B. M., have earned an early grave through too much work. Myself, I don't find Europe nearly so interesting as our own vigorous country, because the female of the species Americana is so much more abundant there than the male. It just throngs with women on the other side; women and a few quite aged and wornout males. It may be coarse and bad taste on my part to confess this preference for a more even distribution of the sexes, but such is the case.

Of course those women who, like Mrs. Forsythe Sherfesee, can accompany their husbands in their search for new scenes and strange impressions, have more reason for roaming over unknown lands. The Sherfesees set forth early this month for northern Africa, which they propose to explore from the interior of a high powered automobile. Both are experienced travelers and have had unusual adventures.

On their wedding trip they had two years ago what was probably a unique mishap. They were on their way by motor to Timbuktu when their car was stuck in what was probably the only rainstorm of its kind in countless centuries on the desert of Sahara, one which caught the car in an impenetrable bog where it stuck with its five passengers for three pretty ghastly days, until the chauffeur, a native, was able to bring succor from a remote village.

They never reached Timbuktu, but returned immediately to their point of departure, having been routed by the only recorded desert rainstorm in history. In another case, the Cyrus McCormicks Jr. and Arthur Aldis once set forth on a desert caravan trip from Algiers and were beset by a cold winter blast which made camping on that supposedly red hot sand as cheerless and uncomfortable as trying it in midwinter in Saskatchewan. The enterprise ended almost as soon as it began.

Discomforts Bound to Occur.

Some discomforts are always apt to be the lot of even the most luxurious travelers. They are taken as part of the game, as, in fact, adding to the excitement and pleasure of it. I remember on a trip to central Africa some years ago when we were unable to take the regular steamer across Lake Victoria because it had run on a rock on what was then an uncharted body of water, and so were conveyed on a 52 ton little craft, known as the Sir William McKinnon. So unattractive were the accommodations below deck, which seemed largely inhabited by the biggest, most nervous cockroaches I've ever met, that some of the company, myself, my mother and a Mr. Bradley among them, decided to stay on deck for the night.

Mattresses were laid out there on a small deck space under the stars. Towards morning a wind and rain storm came up that tossed the little steamer about and considerably dampened the ardor of some of us. Mr. Bradley was not a good sailor, though he was a good sport, and between paroxysms would shout out gayly, "Home isn't a bit like this." It lightened a good deal the troubles of the moment when we were

Plan Benefit for Stevenson Memorial

Funds Provide Shelter for Needy Mothers

Women's Clubs Carry on Worthy Work.

By Roberta Nangle.

THE annual card party for the benefit of the Sarah Hackett Stevenson memorial will be held on Wednesday at 1:30 o'clock in the crystal ballroom of the Edgewater Beach hotel. Mrs. Oliver O. Olson of 2614 North Spaulding avenue is general chairman of arrangements. On her committee are Mrs. C. P. Willems of 831 Cornelia avenue, Mrs. J. F. Morse of 7610 Constance avenue, and Mrs. E. H. Christie of 5501 West Washington boulevard, chairmen of tickets in the north, south, and west sections of the city, respectively. They are being assisted by forty women's clubs and other organizations interested in the work of the memorial.

Proceeds will be used to swell the annual budget of $48,000, of which sum only one-fourth is now assured. The organization gives but two benefit affairs per year; the greater portion of its maintenance fund is obtained through membership dues and contributions from clubs and individuals. Another source of income is a thrift shop operated in a house just south of the memorial on Prairie avenue, which was willed to the organization by the late Mrs. Montgomery Ward.

Started After World's Fair.

Founded in 1893 by the late Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson as an emergency shelter for women left destitute after the World's Fair, the memorial has developed into a home for working mothers and their children. A daily average of fifty-two women and sixty-seven children are given board and lodging. The ground and buildings at 2412 Prairie avenue was presented to the organization by Senator William B. McKinley as a memorial to Dr. Stevenson.

The primary object of the memorial is to assist mothers to become self-supporting and to provide for them a mode of life wherein they may keep their families intact. For the sum of 10 cents a child is cared for during the day by workers trained to supervise both play and study. The children receive four substantial meals per day and return to their mothers' room for the night. Sixty cents a day is charged for board and room for both working mother and child.

Jennings Residence Given.

The residence of the late Edwin J. Jennings, which adjoins the memorial property, was recently presented to the organization by George and Charles Jennings and four of the other heirs of the Jennings estate. The executive committee hopes soon to raise the $10,000 needed to remodel the building and to use it as a permanent home for mothers of families, who, at an average salary of $15 per week, would not be able to maintain living quarters elsewhere.

The executive committee includes Mrs. Roy O. Nereim, president; Mrs. W. Harry Ray and Mrs. George G. Bixby, first and second vice presidents; Mrs. Sarah A. Graham, treasurer; Mrs. R. F. Morrow, recording secretary; Mrs. Oliver O. Olson, corresponding secretary. Col. George T. Buckingham is chairman of the trustees.

CLUB ETHICS . . . By Maude Swalm Evans

SEVERAL club presidents sat chatting together as they waited for the district meeting to begin.

"I've traveled a good deal deal over the country," the president of the Parko club remarked, "and I've met a great many women in a great many cities, and I want to tell you that the ones who belong to clubs are by far the most intelligent and wideawake of them all."

"Why shouldn't they be?" asked the East End president. "Most clubs have such a variety of interests that it makes you broad minded just to read over their program for the year."

"Yes, why shouldn't they be?" reiterated the Lakeside president. "Isn't the club the place we think over, talk over, and put over about every conceivable thing under the sun?"

"As I was saying," continued the Parko president, "I'm always glad when I meet club women—they're easy to talk to—interested in every subject, and ready to express an opinion."

"Yes, the club does that for them," voiced the Lakeside president. "You know, when the chairman of a meeting says, 'Now, I want you all to feel free to express yourselves on this matter before us,' the members DO express themselves freely—sometimes a little too freely."

"The freer, the better," remarked the East End president. "When I sit on the platform at my club and look into the faces of our members, I'm always glad for the sparkle in their eyes. Really, I love it. To me it shows an everlasting interest in life and a love of humanity."

"I suppose you'd call it the 'club woman's sparkle,'" suggested the Lakeside president.

"That's just the idea I've been looking for!" exclaimed the Parko club president. "We're putting on a membership drive and we've been wanting a slogan, and here it is: 'Cultivate the sparkle in your eye by joining the Parko Woman's club.'"

Question.

"Are the individual members of a club responsible for the debts of a club? MEMBER."

Answer.

No, individual members cannot be held legally liable for any debts contracted in the name of the club.

THANKS ... to the Great City of Chicago

The Saks-Fifth Avenue shop at North Michigan and Chestnut is an established success in the short period of eleven months.

Over 30,000 Chicagoans have opened charge accounts with us since the opening last March.

A little over a year ago Saks-Fifth Avenue of New York, after many requests from its Chicago patrons, decided to open a shop at North Michigan and Chestnut Street. From the very beginning only the choicest fashions and accessories from the stocks of our New York establishment were permitted to become a part of our presentation in Chicago.

This policy and the hearty co-operation of the people of Chicago has brought success to us so fast that a new third floor will be opened in the Saks-Fifth Avenue shop in Chicago on or about February 15th.

This floor will be devoted entirely to the presentation of junior fashions from the tiny tot of two years to the junior miss. Saks-Fifth Avenue thanks Chicago for the splendid co-operation it has received and hopes to continue to merit the confidence placed in the management during the past eleven months of operation.

Close of Opera Finds Devotees Free for Travel

Party at Arts Club Promises to Be Enjoyable.

By Mildred Jaklon.

THE last rag-tag ends of the gay winter season are now raveling themselves out and the hiatus between the various seasons of activity is imminent. The state of affairs when there is actually no news at all, dreaded by the society reporters, whose columns depend upon something happening all the time, is really never realized, but it seems distressingly possible this year because of the lateness of Lent and Easter.

The close of the opera releases for travel those loyal subscribers who stayed out the season of performances in the new opera house. For those who aren't satiated with opera fare the German Grand Opera company offers the Wagnerian operas this week at the Auditorium.

Galaxy of Interesting Exhibitions

Foreigners Set Pace in Shows of Excellence

Styka, Choultse, Dufy Among Visitors.

By Eleanor Jewett.

SEVERAL exhibitions of exceptional interest are on view in the various galleries. With one notable exception, Bessie Lasky [the wife of the film magnate], the artists are foreigners. Sharing the Knoedler galleries with Mrs. Lasky is Tade Styka, from Poland, whose group of portraits strikes terror into the heart of the boldest appreciative phrase. At the Arts club are José de Creeft, sculptor of Spanish origin, Raoul Dufy, painter, French, and Leon Carrol, painter [possibly another exception with Mrs. Lasky]; at the Nachemsohn of London gallery is the Russian, Iwan F. Choultse, at one time court painter to Czar Nicholas II.

These have been the principal exhibitions of the last two weeks. The Chicago artists' exhibition which opened this last Thursday at the Art institute will undoubtedly supplant them in interest during the next few weeks, but for ten or twelve days they have ruled supreme, and rightfully so. There has rarely been seen as fine an exhibit of portraits as this of Tade Styka. It is a brilliant show. Styka is more than the perfect craftsman, he is the inspired artist with his inspiration based on a sound training and a thorough mastery of his profession.

The portraits file through one's memory in retrospect with all the allure, vivacity, variety and power they possess in the exhibit. They are impossible to forget — that laughing spring face of Madge Bellamy, that piquant and provocative face of Gemito, that dignified and thoughtful face of Marshal Foch, the dapper and well pleased Berry Wall, the lovely blonde with her Persian cat. Nor does one easily forget the "Brown Harmony," the Pekingese held between two slender, ringed hands, deliciously painted, set against a background of harmonious browns. Nor does one forget the romance and poetry of "Icarus."

Paintings by Mrs. Lasky.

Wiping their strength, power and vital, fantastically alive and potent qualities from your mind for a moment, you can enjoy the more placid and less startling work of Bessie Lasky. It is like going from a star to a candle; from a flaming sun to a dusky lamp, but the step can be made. Mrs. Lasky has a flair for texture and color and exquisite arrangement. Many of her still lifes are most lovely —the "Rose Offering," for example, and "White Freezias" and the "Della Robbia Plaque." In her interiors, too, she unfailingly strikes the right note. You will enjoy the "Studio Corner," "The Great Aunt's Gown" and "The Martha Washington Dress."

At the Arts club the sculpture by José de Creeft is in the modern vein with a harking back to the stolid and shapeless creations of early Asiatic and Egyptian sculpture. This is not true of the larger pieces; it is of many of the smaller works executed in the light of architectural design. The larger conceptions are livelier in theme and more human, more natural and more amusing. Particularly lovely is the "Enigma" in which something of the Virgin mingles with something of the Sphynx. The portrait of Rosa de Grenada, carved in black granite, is unusually beautiful, simple, tranquil and strong. The little figure, "The Bather," is a lovely, smooth, rounded piece, delicate and fine to the touch. Both "Orchid" and "Liana," made from beaten lead, are poetry solidified. They are charmingly fantastic.

Careless and Impatient.

In the next gallery are the haphazard and hurried paintings by Raoul Dufy, the Frenchman who is always in haste and flings pot hooks of black into masses of green or blue, as the case may be, to signify either leaves or waves. He is a careless and impatient painter; in contrast with any of our thoughtful artists [in contrast with Choultse and Styka, too] he fades into insignificance. You feel he he is cheating at the game and getting away with such insipidity that the credence placed in him by some self styled connoisseurs is maddening. Not that occasionally he does not manage to fling off a humorous retort to criticism; he does. It is just because he does now and again achieve a certain daring insolence of perfection in color and running figures that he is dangerous to a world all too uncertain of its standards.

The paintings by Leon Carroll in the long hall of the Arts club bring us back with a thump to the reality of color and form. Carroll has invented a new mode of expression and it is dramatic and extremely beautiful.

"SUNSET ON THE ATLANTIC," by Iwan F. Cloultse, formerly court painter to the Czar of Russia. Cloultse is having a one-man exhibition of paintings in the Nachemsohn of London galleries, 910 North Michigan boulevard. There are landscapes from Russia, Norway, from along the Mediterranean, and from Egypt and France. It is a rarely beautiful exhibit; technically perfect. M. Cloultse paints sunlight as few artists ever have. He vies with Sorolla in this unique talent. His exhibit will continue to Feb. 22.

He paints flowers, full size and larger, in all the panoply of their full blossomed depths, rose, red, yellow, white, green. The leaves are magnificent supports to the flowers. Their green is accurately painted and then in attendant shadows it is outlined and encouraged and built up into patterns.

Particularly illustrative of Mr. Carroll's methods are "Lavender Crocus," "Lilium Aratum," "Funkia," "Pink Tulips," and "Tiger Lily."

Landscapes by Choultse.

At the Nachemsohn of London galleries, 910 North Michigan boulevard, the landscapes of the Russian, Iwan F. Choultse are on view. This is the second of the really brilliant exhibitions current today. The first is the Styka portrait exhibit. Choultse studied and practiced painting in an effort to portray nature and sunshine. He has succeeded. His canvases are little short of marvelous. His sunshine is scintillating; it lights his landscape indirectly, but it floods it with a bewitching purity of light that is magical in effect.

Russia and the cold north are the theme of many of the paintings. Supremely beautiful is "Midnight Sun in King's Bay." "Sunset on the Black Sea: Russia," shows a marvelous sea and sky. "Evening on the Mountain: Hte-Savoie," is another inexpressibly fine painting of chalets, snow, and towering peaks bathed in a red glow. "In Upper Engadine" depicts trees and mountains in snow, and his snow is soft and deep and still and real, marvelous in texture, beautiful in lighting.

"Before the Storm: Russia," is a fascinating canvas. The sky is a wild threatening gray and low down over the hills more clouds boil in a blacker mass; the foreground is lighted by that rather fearful sunlight, thin and shy, which often precedes a storm. Cows are grazing lazily in the green pastures. Something of the charm of George Inness is in this canvas, but it makes a surer, more masculine and more rugged challenge. It is the spirit of the storm that strides those clouds, and the spirit of summer that slips into hiding.

It is impossible to enumerate by title all the thirty-five paintings which represent Choultse. Enough to say that the exhibit is of the most unusual quality. In London a critic said the paintings "must be seen to be believed," and the same holds true now. They are incredible. And they show up the careless mannerisms of modernism in a way to make a conservative heart chuckle. Here are Benson's "standards of workmanship" and here is a supremely valuable show.

Hoosier Salon at Field's.

In the Marshall Field galleries is the Hoosier salon. It is a pleasant enough affair, but not startling. Wayman Adams is represented by the most finished piece of painting in the rooms; Lucie Hartrath has put a fine lot of rich color into her gorgeous canvas, "Autumn Pageant"; Guy Brown Wiser is practical and amusing in "The Faculty Club"; Frank V. Dudley has accomplished a splendid piece of painting in "From Hanover Campus"; L. O. Griffith gives us a good canvas in "Hills of Kelp," and Olive Rush captures the imagination with her delicately fantastic "Judging Horses."

The wood block prints by Gustave Baumann make a most attractive room. He understands this craft to perfection and in design, color, and subject leaves little to be desired. W. C. Musick shows two bright, interesting, and picturesque water colors, "Street in Vera Cruz" and "Mexican Patio." Mary Anderson has two charming silhouettes of children and a painting of a little girl in a rocking chair that has a great deal of infantile charm.

In the sculpture division Mr. Williams shows some particularly attractive work. To go back to the paintings, there is a vivid moment of wind and snow in "Slush," by Lawrence Flammang.

Two Lecture Groups.

A series of three extremely interesting lectures under the auspices of the Cambridge School for Women is being given at the Fortnightly. The "Modern Trend in Architecture" was discussed by Prof. Haffner last Wednesday; on Feb. 5 Mr. Steele will talk on "Modern Trend in Garden Design," and on Feb. 12 Prof. Haffner will lecture on "Modern Trend in Decoration." The lectures are open to every one; tickets are $3.50. These two men are authorities in their field and distinguished speakers. Prof. Haffner is a Priz de Rome man and Architecte Diplome by the French government. Fletcher Steele is the noted Boston architect. The lectures are at 11 o'clock in the morning.

The Industrial Art school of the Chicago Art institute announces a course of twelve talks on the principles of design, to be given on Wednesday evenings in the lecture room of the museum instruction department. The talks will be so arranged as to present an analysis of form, color, and pattern as applied to various types of merchandise and will be illustrated. The lectures will occur on twelve consecutive Wednesdays from 6:30 to 7:45 o'clock, beginning Jan. 22. A fee of $3 per person for each group of four talks will be charged. The first four subjects are pottery, porcelain, glass, metal; in the second group are textiles, dress, drapery, upholstery; in the third group the four evenings will be spent in the discussion of furniture.

Thousands of Women Aided by Protectorate

Church Federation Shows Record of 13 Years.

By the Rev. John Evans.

FIGURES can tell only a small part of the work accomplished by such agencies as the Women's Church Federation protectorate. The general superintendent of the protectorate, Mrs. Minnie M. Chapman, from her offices at 25 N. Dearborn street, filed her 1929 report showing 4,360 women and girls were aided in ways which ran a gamut extending from employment problems clear through to psychiatric care. It is obvious that enumerations offer an almost futile attempt to portray what has been accomplished.

The outstanding work of the protectorate, which is supported by twenty Protestant denominations and commands the patronage of scores of responsible citizens, has been telling its own story in the lives of women and girls in Chicago and throughout the country for the last thirteen years. If the many thousands who have passed through its protective and guiding care could tell their own stories of lives better adjusted to their environments, protected, encouraged and guided into paths of usefulness and beauty, what a picture of romance it would reveal to those who sense the human service motive of Christianity's Founder.

It is stated by leaders of the protectorate that the institution's work will be more imperative and evident as the city reaches 1933, the World's Fair year, when women and girls will come here in increasing numbers. Looking toward the increasing pressure of responsibility, a full coöperative program with similar Jewish and Roman Catholic agencies is planned. For some time, this coöperative relationship has been in force and has prevented overlapping and wasted effort.

Aid has been given in various forms to people of thirty-seven nationalities and of forty-six religious affiliations. Of those who sought employment, 762 were placed and 237 referred to other employment agencies. Temporary financial aid was given to 129, clothing to 65, temporary shelter to 69, medical attention to 93, problem cases treated were 321 and 481 stranger girls and women were referred to friendly visitors from various churches.

The president of the protectorate in 1929 was Mrs. Benson M. Powell, and the new secretary is Mrs. Martin Gronewold. Other officers are: Honorary president, Mrs. Peter Philip Bilhorn; first vice president, Mrs. John F. Gilchrist; second vice president, Mrs. Edwin Moser; third vice president, Mrs. Verne Ray; treasurer, Mrs. Harrison Wild, and Mrs. Minnie Chapman, general superintendent.

Representatives of twenty-one denominations are listed on the board of directors, while twenty-two delegates are members at large. Henry P. Crowell, president of the Quaker Oats company, heads the advisory council, and Dean Shailer Mathews leads the board of references.

The fifty-ninth anniversary of the founding of the First Congregational church of Maywood and the seventeenth year of the Rev. Jesse J. Kolmos' pastorate will be observed today with special services.

During Dr. Kolmos' pastorate a new church building has been erected at North Fifth avenue and Erie street, costing $125,000. It has a well appointed auditorium for worship and equipment for religious education, including a gymnasium.

The women of the church have a strong organization of 312 members. This group ministers to the benevolent and missionary work.

Three legacies have been left to the church during Dr. Kolmos' pastorate, one of $2,500, another of $3,000, and a fine home for a manse or parsonage for the minister and his family. The church is open every day in the week. Three troops of Boy and Girl Scouts and three athletic groups, under able leadership, are some of the activities of the church. The director of religious education is the Rev. Robert Rasche.

Four old religious books, including two Bibles, one nearly 300 years old, have been reported, as suggested in this column last Sunday. Perhaps others will be reported during the coming week. The first old book to be mentioned is a Bible published 205 years ago and owned by Mrs. M. Krause. Joseph G. Wierschen, 5423 South Marshfield avenue, reports a 229 year old "Gospel Book," published in 1701.

A book entitled "The School of the Cross," printed in Swedish at Gothenburg in 1664, is owned by Carl Jansen, 1005 North Massasoit avenue, and is 276 years old. The oldest religious book thus far reported is a Bible printed in London in 1638, and is the property of Mrs. R. J. Gundy, 428 West 66th place. It is 292 years old. A full description of the oldest privately owned religious book to be found through this column will be published after opportunity is given for owners to report them.

During the month of February the Methodist Book concern, 740 Rush street, will display missionary education materials. The chief emphasis will be upon the establishment of friendly contacts with the peoples of the Philippine islands. Full information concerning the projects sponsored by the committee on world friendship among children will be given. Treasure chests and books to be included in them will be available for inspection.

Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, professor at the Union Theological seminary, New York, will be speaker at the monthly meeting of the Evangelical pastors' association at the Atlantic hotel tomorrow morning at 10:30. The Rev. Jacob Pister, pastor of St. Paul's church, is the president of the association. Dr. Niebuhr speaks this morning at the chapel of the University of Chicago and tonight at the Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick W. Norwood, pastor of City temple, London, will be the speaker tonight at the Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall.

Christ Church Celebrates Its 30th Anniversary

CHRIST PRESBYTERIAN church, Orchard and Center streets, will celebrate its thirtieth anniversary as an organized congregation during the week. Tonight the young people will have charge of the evening service. One of the former members will tell about the Christian Endeavor society in 1900, the time when the church was organized.

The Rev. Prof. Earl F. Zeigler, dean of the graduate school of the Presbyterian College of Christian Education, will deliver an address on the future of young people's work in the church. Wednesday night the anniversary communion service will be celebrated. In the consecration service next Sunday morning the Rev. Henry S. Brown, D. D., secretary of the church extension board of the presbytery of Chicago, will address the congregation on the challenge of the church's task.

The organization service will be held next Sunday night, when the Rev. Dr. David Creighton of Kankakee will deliver the address. Dr. Creighton was the pastor of the church at the time of its organization. The minutes of the meeting on Feb. 8, 1900, will be read and the members of the congregation will reaffirm their vows of church membership.

In 1843 three young men of the Second Presbyterian church organized a Sunday school north of the river. Beginning with a membership of 150 scholars, this Sunday school grew to an enrollment of 1,500. From the constituency of this Sunday school 183 petitioners became the charter members of Christ church, of whom twenty-six are still in its membership. The present membership is 419. The Rev. H. Ray Berger, formerly a member of the American Presbyterian mission in the Philippine islands, is pastor.

An event of particular interest to all those who are following the development of religious drama will be the production of Joyce M. S. Tompkins' one act play, "The Deathless World," by the Chicago Theological Seminary players under the direction of Prof. Fred Eastman, tonight at the Hyde Park Congregational church. All the work of production, including costuming, is being done by the players themselves, as a part of their work for the class in drama practicum.

Dr. George L. Scherger, director of religious education at St. Paul's Evangelical church, Fullerton parkway and Orchard street, will speak to the gathering of the Evangelical Young People's Federation of Chicago and vicinity, at St. Paul's church, this afternoon at 3:30. Devotions will be in charge of the young people from St. Stephen's. "The Challenge of the Cross," a short pageant, will be presented by St. Peter's players. Dr. T. Lehmann, president of Elmhurst college, will speak briefly and conduct an open forum.

The monthly all day meeting of the Woman's soicety of Second Presbyterian church, Evanston, will be held in the church parlors on Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Luncheon will be served at noon.

A choir of 100 voices from the Park View Lutheran church will render the "Hallelujah chorus" from Handel's "Messiah" this morning at the John B. Murphy school, where the congregation is worshipping during the erection of the new Park View church. The chorus will be under the direction of Robert La Marr, director.

Quits Church Organ After 64 Years' Play

LONDON.—(AP)—Fred Cozens, 83, organist at St. Stephen's church for 64 years, has played his last official service. When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha F. Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, May 2, 1865.

DEAR JULIA:

I shall begin a letter tonight and finish it tomorrow. It is late in the evening, but we are too sad to rest. Will and I have just returned from the courthouse, where we went, with thousands of others, to look on the face of Lincoln, as his body lay there in state. His face was wonderfully beautiful in death. A calm, holy expression and a placid smile made him look as if asleep.

This morning we went down to Park Row, where the train bearing the funeral party came in over the Michigan Central, and were amazed at the decorations all along Michigan avenue. The day has been beautiful, but we have had such rains for a week that the street was frightfully muddy and only the center could be scraped, to make a clear path for the carriages, while on each side of this the mud stood in heaps, into which many of the crowd sank knee deep.

The piazza of the William Sturges residence was hung around with large white stars on a black ground. The H. O. Stone home was elaborately draped, with a portrait of Lincoln and a large white flag above it. The residence of our friends, the J. H. Dunhams, 233 Michigan avenue, was massively draped in black and white cambric. The balcony bore the motto: "Mournfully, tenderly bear on the dead." Over the entrance was suspended a portrait of the President, surrounded by crêpe and having in white letters, on a black ground, the words: "Our Country's Martyr." Field, Palmer & Leiter's store was beautifully draped. Giles Brothers' jewelry and art store had an artistic decoration, with a knight in armor as its main feature.

The courthouse was elaborately decorated. From each window hung flags of black and white and the dome was covered with mourning emblems. Over the north door was the inscription: "The beauty of Israel is slain upon her high places." You do have to turn to the Bible for the right phrase, in such a tragedy as this, don't you? The inscription over the south door is: "Illinois clasps to her bosom her slain and glorified son."

As we came inside the entrance we saw the catafalco, which stood directly under the dome. It was draped with rich black velvet, lined with white satin, and fringed and ornamented with stars and a border of silver. At the head was a marble eagle. Along the sides and ends of the dais were bouquets of flowers. One of these, we learned, was presented by Clara Louise Kellogg, prima donna of the opera troupe which is playing here. We hear it said that the catafalco is much superior to anything seen in the other cities through which the funeral cortége has passed.

As I close my eyes, the impressive procession we saw this morning passes before me. "And I should live a thousand years, I never shall forget it." The military escort, the school children with their sad little badges, the flags, the bands with their mournful music, the lodges with their black uniforms and white aprons and gloves, the workmen's organizations with banners bearing the devices of their trades, all made a spectacle which I suppose will never be equaled.

There was one group of school children which interested us much, for each little girl represented one of the 36 states of the Union. These girls were chosen because of their high scholarship, and we were pleased to see little Ella McCalla among them—the very littlest of all, and the youngest, but her marks were as high as the others, we were told. Her mother is the widow of father's friend, Thomas McCalla, who was thrown from his horse and killed some years ago. I think your father met the McCallas when he was visiting us, and so he may be interested in knowing about the honor which has come to this young daughter.

May 3.

President Lincoln's body has gone forward on the last stage of its journey to the burial at Springfield. THE TRIBUNE said beautifully this morning: "The pageant of woe has passed. The hundreds of thousands of people who followed the inanimate clay along the streets and gazed on the cold features of their departed chief, are but the vanguard of the mighty host whose tramp, enduring through the ages, shall, in this city, bear devoted testimony to his virtues—a host which shall swear, by the memory of the devoted martyr, that the Union he died to maintain 'must and shall be preserved.'"

It is estimated that 40,000 people passed by the casket before midnight last night.

This is too long a letter but my heart is full and every detail concerning the funeral of our great President seems so full of interest I want to write of it.

Your sad and loving friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES

The term "catafalco" is used in newspaper descriptions of Lincoln's funeral couch so the writer employs it in her letter.

It will be noted that Marshall Field, by now, had left Cooley, Farwell & Co. and, with Palmer and Leiter, had established a separate business, which later was to become Marshall Field & Co.

"Giles Brothers" is no longer in existence, but Miss Anna H. Giles, daughter of William A. Giles, is still a Chicago resident. Cyrus G. Hill is a grandson of William A. Giles.

Mrs. Secor Cunningham of Chicago is a daughter of H. O. Stone.

The Thomas McCalla family is represented in Chicago by Mrs. Albert F. McCalla, a daughter-in-law of the pioneer banker who built the first five story building in Chicago, and by Miss Helen McCalla, a granddaughter, prominent in D. A. R. circles, and former state secretary of the United States Daughters of 1812. Other grandchildren of Thomas McCalla are Thomas McCalla of Hammond, Ind.; Lee McCalla of Detroit, and Paul Hamill McCalla of Chicago.

getting drenched to listen to his exordium of the elements.

He was, by the way, one of the two far famed brothers who at that time ran a well known restaurant at Palm Beach, Fla., known as "Bradley's." It's still a feature of the place. You get excellent food there, but you also get much more highly spiced pleasure, that is if you be by nature fond of chance. Outside of Monte Carlo it is, I suppose, the best known institution of its kind in the world.

This Mr. Bradley disconnected himself from it some years ago and took his family out west. He did not want his children to grow up in the atmosphere that is inescapable in any institution run against the laws of the land.

Meeting Place for Celebrities.

Bradley's is the most fashionable rendezvous in southern Florida. There you see, sooner or later, all the famous folk who visit that region. Many come merely to look on, but others are there for a much more serious purpose. Any one who watches the faces of those present and who is a student of American character is apt to come to the conclusion that we are not by nature the same intense, frenzied gamblers that can be seen clustered about the gambling tables of Monte Carlo and other places devoted to games of chance.

Russians are probably the most instinctive patrons of chance in the world, with members of the Latin races coming next in numbers and innate tendencies. Anglo-Saxons like to gamble, but not with the same ferocity as do the men and women of these, from our standpoint, basically different races.

Not that we are not showing an increasing tendency toward this always unfortunate passion. On every hand in this country the habit of playing cards for money and a good deal of money, too, is becoming more and more deeply ingrained in men and women of supposedly high standards of conduct. A small stake always makes a game more entertaining, but when the money to be won becomes the chief issue, then the game is taken out of the realm of pure sport and becomes a besetting vice.

When players say: "O, low stakes are such a bore! The only fun is playing for high ones," then the player is no longer after amusement; he is after excitement of a not particularly high class kind.

Even such protestations as: "Poor So-and-so! I hated to take that big money off him the other night," do not palliate the bad taste inherent in this form of society pleasure.

However, I'm getting to be an aged scold. I'd better hold up and tell you something new or interesting, and I'm blessed if I can find out anything just now that qualifies for either of these adjectives.

Apartment Nears Completion.

Some of the occupants of that much talked of apartment building on the northeast corner of Goethe and Astor streets hope to get in by April first. I heard that among these are the Potter Palmers, whose three storied apartment is promised them for that date. Others whose flats will not be ready for them until later in the spring are the Tiffany Blakes, but that does not make so much difference, as they are planning to run over to England in the spring to get a taste of London at its most attractive moment. As Ambassador Dawes is an intimate friend of theirs they will have opportunities to get an inside view of what is going on there that would otherwise be impossible.

Also, they can give Gen. Dawes the latest word on the progress of the world's fair in Chicago. This is said by those who know him to be the enterprise that lies closest to his heart. He has set out to make this the greatest of its kind in all history up to date, and up to date the general has never failed in anything which he has undertaken.

Just at the present moment, however, with the town almost in bankruptcy, the subways as yet unborn and with no immediate prospect of birth, the general financial status of the entire region about Chicago, Cook county, etc., looks decidedly sick, and that proposed fair is like a lovely mirage, which, as we approach it, may fade and disappear. Its one and only hope is our present ambassador to Great Britain.

Here on the shores of lovely Lake Michigan and under the shade of the most remarkable metropolis that has ever risen out of a wilderness, there are such possibilities for a magnificent world's festival as can never again arise. Our very youth, our extraordinary achievements, our superabundant vitality, our position in the center of the most powerful nation in the world today, all combine to make us the inevitable site for such an exposition.

Greater Support Needed.

There is a splendid band of Chicagoans organizing it now in the face of the above mentioned disabilities. But the community as a whole hasn't awakened to the fact that this fair must have the support of the entire citizenry of Chicago. They need a voice in the wilderness to rouse them; they need a Moses summoning them to put forth all their efforts, and such a voice is to be found in that faraway residence in Princes Gate, London, given by Pierpont Morgan to the American government for our embassy. If this Moses comes we shall no more hear people say: "O, that—World's Fair! We don't want it; we can't carry it; it won't be a success," and so on.

Those who remember the days preceding the World's Fair of 1893 say that the people of that time, the rank and file, talked in quite the same manner. That's encouraging, for out of that apathy and unbelief sprouted and grew the most beautiful affair of the kind that perhaps the world has ever seen. Our job today is to outdo it, if we can.

Frenchmen Turning to Two Wheeled Vehicles

PARIS.—(AP)—While the number of automobiles is steadily growing, there is a strong drift in France toward the motorcycle. Manufacturers explain that the use of 7,000,000 foot bicycles makes Frenchmen familiar with two-wheeled vehicles and turns them naturally to motor bikes when they buy motive power.

The Negro candy boxing championship of Lagorce and Bay Shore golf clubs will be at stake in one of the headliners on a big bill of entertainment arranged for the "wives' cruise" to Cocolobo Cay club, some time in February.

Old Fashioned Fun.

The program, which will follow the lines of an old fashioned picnic, including popcorn, peanuts, hot dogs and pink and yellow lemonade, is the outgrowth of the glowing reports received by wives of members of the stag cruise to Cocolobo Cay on Jan. 11. They insist that a party be planned in which they can have a part.

C. W. Chase Jr., general manager of the Hilarious Schedule that delighted Former Gov. Al Smith, Sir John Mullens and a long list of distinguished guests at the stag party, has been named factotum of the Feb. 15 cruise. Again Capt. W. A. Lindsey is scouring darktown for the best talent.

John Brophy, professional at Bay Shore, is arranging a series of elimination bouts to determine the Negro champion caddies, respectively at Bay Shore and Lagorce courses. This pair will meet for the Bay Shore-Lagorce title at Cocolobo.

Members who will attend from Chicago and the craft in which they will make the cruise are: C. R. Dashiell, the Centaur; Theodore Dickinson, the Lenza; John Hertz, the Helen; Webb Jay, the Troubadour and Adieu.

The final estimate of the wheat yield from the 1928-29 harvest was 159,752,095 bushels, but the estimate for the coming season is only 112,000,000 bushels.

Good Health

Within the Income Reach of All

In considering the medical services afforded the community by the Public Health Institute in its effort to help other medical organizations and the doctors in combating the evils of social diseases it is particularly interesting to note the relation between its value and its actual cost. While the low cost is an important point to keep in mind, as it will enable you to get well and stay well within your ability to pay, of even greater importance, however, is the reason for this low cost and how it was achieved and steadily developed without any sacrifice of medical value. Though actuated by purely altruistic motives, the great need for the service rendered by the Institute has made it self-supporting from the beginning. Every patient shares the benefits derived from the great number who come for examinations and treatments—a number which has exceeded 2000 in a single day. The small surplus received above the cost of each treatment enables a constantly increasing value through further improvement of the facilities and organization that renders this service. Because of the Institute's war on social diseases, a lower cost medical service was brought within the reach of all the people.

Evidence of its success is found in the fact that since the Institute was established ten years ago more than 150,000 individual examinations have been made and over 3,000,000 treatments given.

The Institute was organized solely to assist in controlling the further spread of social diseases in Chicago.

In order to afford complete protection it was found necessary to provide facilities for diagnosing infection in any or all parts of the body—for social diseases appear under the guise of many ailments. As a result, the Institute developed and operates its own Laboratories, where as many as 300 Wassermann and 300 Kahn blood tests are a part of a single day's work.

For the same reason it developed and operates special X-ray and Cardiovascular equipment—special facilities for examining the eyes, and to further reduce the entire cost of treating a social disease and its complications, operates its own Drug Departments, buying in large quantities direct from manufacturers, compounding and manufacturing many of its own prescriptions and supplies. State registered physicians administer all treatments.

Because of these highly developed facilities the Institute's complete medical examination for social diseases constitutes a thorough general health examination. As a result an increasing number of people are using this low cost medical service regularly to protect themselves against possible social disease infection. If you cannot afford the service of a private physician come to the Public Health Institute.

Operated not for profit, the Institute's medical service is offered to everyone at low cost. In fact, treatments are available even to those without funds. The first or preliminary examination costs $3.00 and includes a urological examination for men or a gynecological examination for women and a general medical examination, a urinalysis, Wassermann and Kahn blood tests, microscopic examinations of all secretions and if necessary special dermatological and neurological examinations.

When advisable, patients of the Institute receive a special heart examination, including an X-ray fluoroscopic study, a 14 x 17 inch X-ray picture of the chest, an electrocardiograph print of the heart's action and a blood pressure test for a charge of $3.00. And when necessary a cerebrospinal fluid examination is made for $2.50 which includes a Wassermann, Noguchi, Ross Jones, Colloidal Gold Solution tests and Cell Count. Other medical services when necessary are available as follows: Special Eye examinations, $2.00; Successive Treatment or Consultation, $1.00; Kahn and Wassermann Blood Tests, $1.00; Urinalysis, $0.25; Intravenous injections of Neo-Salvarsan or tryparsamide, $3.00; six consecutive daily treatments in Urological or Gynecological Depts., $4.00.

Chicagoans in Florida Find Pleasant Days

Parties Galore and Plenty of Golf.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Feb. 1.—[Special.]—Among luncheon guests recently at the Ponce de Leon were Charles S. Castle, and Mrs. Castle of Chicago, and Frank P. Wallace and Mrs. Wallace of Joliet.

The Wallaces are spending a part of the winter at Daytona Terrace. The Castles have been touring the state of Florida since they left Chicago on Jan. 9. The two couples motored here from Daytona Beach to visit the historical points of interest in this ancient city. They also spent five days at the Bok Memorial, at Lake Wales.

Cyril C. Spades, accompanied by his brother, Myron H. Spades, both of Chicago, and E. Terrence McGovern of New York and William A. Knight, went on a fishing trip today in the former's yacht, "Sedaps," which is Spades spelled backwards.

Bridge and Buffet Supper.

Mr. and Mrs. Spades gave a bridge and buffet supper last night at their winter villa on Sevilla street, for Mrs. Robert H. Gwaltney, of Short Hills, New Jersey. Other guests were Myron H. Spades who is visiting the Spades, Mr. and Mrs. John Morton Dimick, who have returned from their honeymoon in Cuba. Mrs. Fred A. Henderich, Mrs. Lucien Hill, Mrs. T. C. Schreiber, Mrs. Malcolm Muir and Sterling Marsh.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Riddle of Chicago are at the Ponce de Leon where they are spending a part of their honeymoon. They were married in Evanston on Jan. 22, at the bride's home. Dr. James Alexander Jenkins, President of the Union Theological seminary, officiated. Mrs. Riddle, formerly Miss Martha Browne MacGuire, a Smith graduate, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. MacGuire. Mr. Riddle, a graduate of the Ecole des Beaux Arts of Paris, is an architect. Among some of his works is the Chicago Theological seminary group.

The couple have been visiting the old landmarks here. They plan a trip to the Bok Singing tower and a general tour of Florida, Cuba, the West Indies, then returning to their home in Chicago about March 15.

Parties Are Daily Affairs.

Mrs. Martin D. Hardin formerly of Chicago was hostess at a dinner last week at her villa on Valencia street, in honor of Mrs. Elliot Bullard of Daytona Beach. Other guests were Mrs. Arthur B. Barret, Mrs. Robert Erskine Wright of Cleveland, Mrs. H. M. Spades of Chicago, Mrs. William T. Durrett, Mrs. Elbridge Gerry Snow, Mrs. F. H. Sargent, Mrs. George Miller, Mrs. Featherston Connor, Mrs. Frank F. Schute and Miss Amey MacMillan.

Myron H. Spades of the Exmoor Country club of Chicago is one of the contestants in the Florida East Coast men's golf tournament which started today on the St. Augustine links. Other Chicagoans playing the course are B. H. Marshall, W. H. Colvin, and Donald Colvin.

Mrs. Willoughby Walling, a winter guest at the Alcazar, entertained Dr. and Mrs. Willoughby Reed of Morristown, Pa., for luncheon one day last week. The Reeds have a winter home in Orange City.

T. Q. Lewis of Chicago and William Dighton of Monticello, Ill., are guests at the Ponce de Leon. Mrs. R. J. Tompkins entertained a luncheon party there on Monday.

Your Choice of Rooms Whenever You Arrive at CHICAGO'S

MORRISON HOTEL

Madison and Clark Streets

What greater pleasure, upon your arrival in the City, than to be able to go immediately to your hotel room? After a long, tiring train ride on a wintry night, you need the stimulating effects of a warm bath and a comfortable room. Delay, at such a time, is most vexatious.

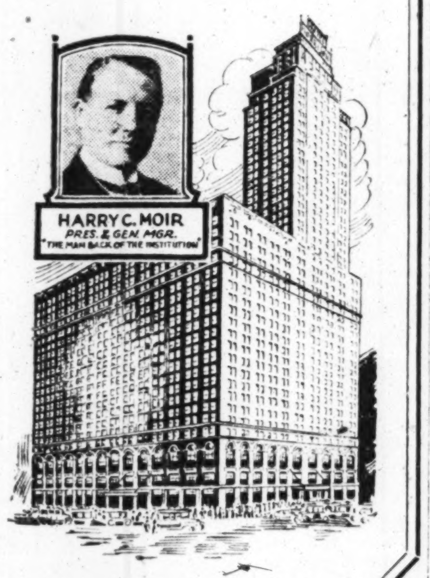
Just the Room You Want

The immense Morrison Hotel was built to accommodate a very large patronage. No matter what time of the day or night you arrive, you will be assigned to your room as soon as you step to the registration desk. And it will be just the kind of a room you want at the price you want to pay.

1,950 Rooms—$2.50 Up

Every room is outside, with bath, circulating ice water, bed-head reading lamp, telephone and Servidor. A housekeeper is stationed on each floor and the hotel's garage offers exceptional accommodations for the storage of guests' cars. The enviable location of the Morrison Hotel—closer than any other hotel to stores, offices, theatres and railroad stations—has attracted many merchants. To these have been subleased the ground floor. The revenue derived pays all the ground rent, making possible an exceptionally low rate scale.

Write or Wire for Reservations



The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel—46 stories high, with 3,450 rooms.
